

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

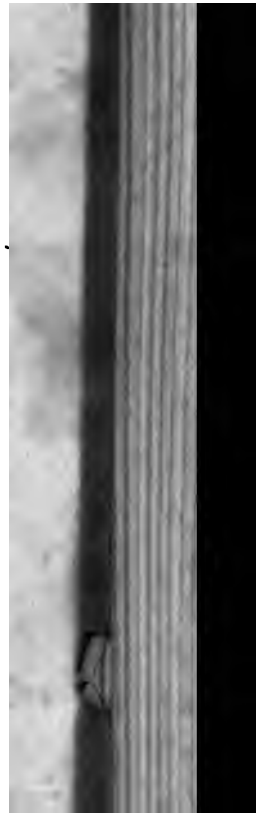

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

INDIAN CLAIMS.

LETTER

FROM THE

SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR,

ASKING

For an appropriation to complete the payment of certain Indian claims.

FEBRUARY 7, 1865.—Referred to the Committee of Ways and Means and ordered to be printed.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,

Washington, D. C., February 6, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to submit herewith a copy of a report of the 31st ultimo from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and accompanying papers, in relation to the balance due to claimants—under the 3d article of the treaty of September 10, 1853, with the Rogue River Indians—for property destroyed by said Indians, and for improvements made by land claimants on the Indian reserve; and recommend the subject to the favorable consideration of Congress, with a view to an appropriation of the sum necessary to complete the payment of said claims, viz.: twenty-eight thousand nine hundred and fifty-five dollars and fifty-seven cents ($28,955 57.)

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. P. USHER, Secretary.

Hon. SCHUYLER COLFAX

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,

Office Indian Affairs, January 31, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to refer herewith the letter of Hon. J. W. Nesmith, of the 20th instant, asking for information as to the amount unpaid to claimants, under the treaty with the Rogue river Indians, and as to the propriety of appropriations to pay the same.

The claims referred to by Mr. Nesmith are based upon article 3 of the treaty with the Rogue river Indians, September 10, 1853. See Statutes at Large, vol. 10, page 1018. The claims in question are of two classes, viz:

1st. Pay for property of the whites, destroyed by the Indians.

2d. Payments of such improvements as may have been made by land claimants on the reserve.

For the payment of the first class of claims, the sum of \$15,000 was retained under the treaty, but the commissioners appointed to value the property destroyed brought in an approved list, amounting to \$43,140 75, there being seventy-three claimants, as will be observed by reference to the copy of their report herewith, the original having been filed in this office by J. Palmer, March 30, 1855. Having but \$15,000 to pay \$43,140 75, this office made "pro rata" payments of $34 \frac{77}{100}$ per cent. to such claimants as made application therefor on surrender of duplicate certificates of award, issued to them by the commissioners. It would therefore take an appropriation of the further sum of \$28,140 75 to complete the payment of the claims now under notice, to the full amount found due by the commissioners.

The second class of claims amounted, according to the report of the commissioners, to $2,832 25, for which there were ten claimants, and for their satisfaction the sum of $2,000 has been appropriated, consequently to make the payments in full will require a further appropriation of $832 25, less $17 43 overplus after pro rata.

It would seem that justice to the claimants, in both classes mentioned, would require a full payment, and I would respectfully recommend appropriations of the deficiencies.

On the copies of the list, in the report of the commissioners herewith, the parties to whom pro rata payments have been made are designated thus. (*)

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CHARLES E. MIX,
Chief Clerk for the Commissioner.

Hon. J. P. USHER,
Secretary of the Interior.

JACKSONVILLE, O. T., February 10, 1855.

SIR: Pursuant to the special instructions issued from your office at Dayton Oregon Territory, bearing date December 20, 1854, to us communicated, the undersigned, commissioners appointed to examine and audit claims of citizens for property destroyed by the Rogue river tribe of Indians during the war with said tribe in 1853, also to assess the value of permanent improvements made by whites on lands assigned as a reservation to said Indians by the treaty of the 10th of September, 1853, beg leave most respectfully to report that on the 1st day of January, 1855, they convened at Jacksonville, in said Territory, and after being duly qualified by taking the proper oath of office, certified copies of which were forthwith forwarded to you by mail, they proceeded to the discharge of their duties.

They determined by the most available and reliable testimony, 1st. The date of the commencement of the war, to wit, the 2d day of August, 1853. 2d. The date of the termination of hostilities, to wit, the 10th day of September, 1853. Said testimony was reduced to writing and is herewith accompanying, marked "A," in envelope.

In relation to claim for property destroyed as aforesaid, the board made the following order:

"That all claims presented, as far as practicable, shall be based on the affidavit of the claimant setting forth: 1st. The destruction of the property for which payment is claimed. 2d. That such property was destroyed during the actual hostilities of said war. 3d. That such property was destroyed by the Rogue river tribe of Indians or their allies. 4th. Such description of the property destroyed as will enable the commissioners to assess its just value.

"In addition to the above basis of proof, the board will require the same to be supported by the testimony of two disinterested witnesses, when practicable.

If such testimony cannot be procured, claimants must present such circumstantial or other evidence as may satisfy the commissioners of the justice of their claims. If the claimant cannot be personally present, claims may be presented by agent, and proved by any kind of competent testimony."

The board then proceeded to receive and entertain proof of claims as aforesaid, reducing the substance thereof to writing, which will be found herewith accompanying each claim, numbered from 1 to 73, inclusive, in envelopes.

After claimants had closed their testimony the board proceeded to make awards in the several spoliation claims in such amounts as the proof and circumstances of the case would warrant, basing their estimates of the value of all property of a current commercial rate during the war, on a price current established by the testimony of several merchants and farmers of Jackson county, in said Territory, the substance of which was reduced to writing, and is herewith accompanying, marked B in envelope; as to kinds of property not therein contained, the value of the same was established by testimony offered by claimants, always varying the estimate made according to the description and location of the property destroyed; certificate of such awards made accompanying the claims and proof, numbered from one to seventy-three, inclusive, seriatim.

The board also issued to each claimant a duplicate certificate of the award made in each case.

The following catalogue exhibits the result of the labors of the board in the matter of spoliation claims as aforesaid.

Statement of the number and names of claimants for property destroyed by the Rogue River tribe of Indians, during the war with said tribe in 1853, and the amount allowed to each annexed.

In further pursuance of instructions the board visited, from time to time, as their labors would permit, the lands assigned as a reservation to the Rogue river tribe of Indians by the treaty of September 10, 1853, as aforesaid, the same lying in the vicinity of Jacksonville, and made inspections of permanent improvements made by whites on said lands previously to said treaty, with a view of assessing their value. In several instances they found the same partially removed or destroyed by said Indians, they therefore deemed it expedient to take the statement of the claimants on oath, and such other testimony from disinterested sources as could be obtained, to assist the commissioners in arriving at a just estimate of the value of said improvements at the time such claimants were dispossessed thereof by the act of the government. The amounts allowed are in a very slight degree only compensatory of the real damages sustained by settlers who were required to remove from said Indians' reserve, prior occupancy of agricultural lands in a district furnishing the best market for farming produce on the Pacific coast being, in most instances, of ten-fold greater value than the improvements on the same. But the Commissioner regarded their instructions as strictly limiting their duties in the premises to the assessment of the value of improvements on said lands alone, and governed themselves accordingly. The awards in cases of reservation claims, numbered from one to ten, inclusive, certificate accompanying the proof, and duplicates of the same, have been issued to claimants, in manner as hereinbefore reported with reference to spoliation claims. The following is a statement of the number and names of claimants for permanent improvements made by whites on lands assigned as a reservation to the Rogue river tribe of Indians, by their treaty with said tribe dated September 10, 1853, with the amount awarded to each claimant, and the sum total thereof, to wit:

In making awards on claims for spoliation during said war, the object of the board has been to ascertain in favor of each claimant the just value of property actually destroyed, without considering resultant damages, or endeavoring to canvass claims with the view of reducing them within the fifteen thousand dollars reserved from the Indian annuities for the purpose of liquidating such claims, believing that more ample and equal justice could be obtained by pursuing such course.

Some few claims of slight amounts for Indian spoliation during said war probably remain unrepresented. But the commissioners have spared no pains in obtaining testimony and making awards in all practicable cases, where they had reason to believe existed just claims. Considering the floating character of the population in the mining districts of Oregon, and the numerous casualties incident to life on our frontiers, it is believed that from the time spent in session by the board it would not be expedient for the final adjustment of all claims against the United States properly cognizable by said commissioners. All which is most respectfully submitted.

L. F. GROVER,
H. C. GIBBS,
GEORGE H. AMBROSE,
Commissioners.

Superintendent of Indian Affairs, Oregon.

PROVOST MARSHAL GENERAL'S BUREAU,
Washington, D. C., February 7, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a resolution of the House of Representatives, dated February 6, 1865, wherein the Secretary of War is "directed to inform this House whether any privileges have been granted to the preachers of any denomination of professing Christians which have been denied to others, and if so, what denomination these persons belonged to, and also their names and place of residence, with the reasons for making such distinction."

In reply I have the honor to state that I know of no instance in which boards of enrolment have exempted preachers of the gospel belonging to churches "whose religious tenets do not bring them within the scope of the act of February, 1864, for enrolling and calling out the national forces," nor do I know of any "privileges having been granted to the preachers of any denomination of professing Christians which have been denied to others."

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES B. FRY,

Provost Marshal General.

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,

Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.

MAJOR DAVID H. HASTINGS.

Question. Are you acquainted with the accused ?

Answer. I am.

Question. How long have you been acquainted with him ?

Answer. I met him at Carlisle, Pennsylvania, in March last ; I never saw him before.

Question. Did you become particularly acquainted with the accounts of the accused as superintendent of the mounted recruiting service at Carlisle ; and if so, under what circumstances ?

Answer. I did. They were placed under my charge to settle them, as they came into the office, monthly.

Question. Had you any further acquaintance with them then, than settling them in the office ?

Answer. I was appointed in March last as commissioner to proceed to Carlisle and examine into the state of the accounts of Major Hastings, and to report the facts.

Question. How long were you engaged in that special duty connected with the accounts of Major Hastings ?

Answer. I was engaged about four days at Carlisle, and some five days more after I returned here.

Question. Did you make out a list or index of his various accounts ?

Answer I did.

(Paper produced, identified, and annexed to this record, marked "Exhibit A.") Question. Did you also make out another list ?

Answer. I did.

(Paper produced, identified, and annexed to the record, marked "Exhibit B.")

Question. Have you with you all the accounts current, and vouchers presented in aid of them, of Captain or Major Hastings as superintendent of the mounted recruiting service at Carlisle, from and including the month of August, 1862, to February, 1864 ?

Answer. I have.

Question. Turn to voucher No. 10, of the third quarter of 1862, and say when that was presented.

Answer. That voucher was received at the Second Auditor's office through the Adjutant General's office on the 30th of October, 1862. It is the voucher for September, 1862.

(Voucher No. 10, for the 3d quarter of 1862, shown to the accused, and admitted by him to be genuine.)

Question. What is the heading of the voucher ?

Answer. The receipt is : " We, the undersigned, do hereby acknowledge to have received from Captain David H. Question. Have you made diligent search ?

Answer. We have.

Question. Now look at the name of Patrick Dwyer.

Answer. That is a case of triple payment. According to voucher 12, Patrick Dwyer was paid $25 November 12, 1862; according to voucher 14, he was paid November 26, 1862; and according to voucher 3, for October, 1863, he was then paid. There was but one enlistment paper filed, and that was in support of the last payment.

(Voucher No. 3, for October, 1863, shown to the accused, and admitted by him to be genuine.)

Question. What was the date of that enlistment paper?

Answer. November 21, 1862.

Question. State all that you know in regard to that case, and describe the last voucher.

Answer. I can only say that he seems to have been paid three times. The third payment to Patrick Dwyer was on voucher 3, for October, 1863, received at the Second Auditor's office November 9, 1863. The caption of the voucher is precisely the same as of the others. The sum of $25 is set opposite his name each time.

The court then adjourned until to-morrow morning, at ten o'clock.

(The accused admits the vouchers, receipts and accounts to be as stated by the witness.)

The witness testified that the accounts of Captain or Major D. H. Hastings for October, 1863, were received at the Second Auditor's office October 26, 1863, and claimed credit for $25 bounty paid to each of the following men, to whom the other accounts of Captain or Major Hastings, also below specified, show that he had previously paid the same sum at the dates stated below. Their receipts are filed and credit claimed by him in his accounts for both payments as stated, and the form of the receipts and certificate are the same as before given.

(The accused admits the voucher, receipts, and accounts to be as stated by the witness.)

The judge advocate stated that the counsel for the accused had agreed to admit the fact set forth in the above lists, and which admission in the form agreed upon would greatly facilitate the trial of the case and diminish the time which would otherwise be occupied by the court, and also render the record much more intelligible, and for that reason requested the adjournment of the court in order to complete the lists referred to. The court therefore adjourned until tomorrow at 10 o'clock a. m.

EDWARD W. HINKS,
Brigadier General U. S. Vols., President.
GARRICK MALLERY,
Lieutenant Colonel and Judge Advocate.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Tuesday, July 26, 1864.

The court met at ten o'clock a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

Present: All the members, the judge advocate, the accused, his counsel, and the reporters.

The record of yesterday's session was read and approved.

FREDERICK CHASE.—Examination continued by the judge advocate.

The witness testified that the accounts of the accused claim credit for $25 as paid to each of the following enlisted men as of the dates specified, and that the vouchers forwarded by him, and below referred to, show the receipts of these men for that sum as of the month given, the form of the receipt and certificate being the same as before given.

(The accused admits the accounts, vouchers, receipts, and certificate, to be as stated by the witness.)

Question. Can you specify the name of the witness who witnessed the receipts in all the cases to which you have testified?

Answer. I can. From the commencement of the payment of bounties, to and including March, 1863, the payments were witnessed by N. F. Onion, and from the month of April 1863, to and including January, 1864, the payments were witnessed by Henry Orsey. The payment of bounties ceased in January, 1864.

Question. In all the cases of double payments to which you have testified, has more than one enlistment paper been found by you corresponding with the name given, and have you made diligent search for such papers?

Answer. There never has been more than one copy found with the accounts of Captain or Major Hastings, but we have found copies in the office, sent in by other officers, corresponding with the same names. We have made diligent search for such enlistment papers.

Question. Was there any correspondence between you and the accused in reference to the absence of enlistment papers accompanying the voucher for 1862?

Answer. There was.

Question. State what it was; and if you can produce any letter on that subject, do so.

Answer. Soon after the accounts of the accused for the third and fourth quarters of 1862 were received, and we were endeavoring to settle them, it was found that they could not be settled because the enlistments were not filed in support of the bounty vouchers. He was written to, and the difficulty explained to him.

(Letter of Second Auditor of the Treasury to Captain D. H. Hastings, dated January 19, 1863, produced, put in evidence, and annexed to this record, marked Exhibit C.)

The request was reiterated in a similar letter, and a reply was received from the accused.

(Letter of Captain D. H. Hastings to the Second Auditor of the Treasury, dated January 24, 1863, produced, shown to the accused, and by him admitted to be genuine. It is put in evidence and annexed to this record, marked Exhibit D.)

After the reception of that letter, the following was addressed to the accused from the Second Auditor's Office.

(Letter of Second Auditor to Captain D. H. Hastings, dated January 30, 1863, produced, put in evidence and annexed to this record, marked Exhibit E.)

No reply was received to that letter for some months, and the accounts of Major Hastings were settled. He was informed of the settlement, and a letter was received at the Second Auditor's office July 9, 1863, in reply to the settlement of the accounts.

(Letter of Captain D. H. Hastings to the Second Auditor, dated July 6, 1863, produced, shown to the accused, and by him admitted to be genuine. It is put in evidence and annexed to this record, marked Exhibit F.)

Question. In the cases of double payments, to which you have testified, for what period do the enlistment papers bear date which accompanied and were intended to support the vouchers for the second payment?

Answer. They all bear date in the fourth quarter of 1862.

Question. Are those the same enlistment papers which are referred to in the letters just given in evidence, in which the accused states that they had gone out of his possession?

Answer. They are the same, so far as we can judge at the office.

Question. Have you examined to ascertain which of the cases to which you have testified are cases of men enlisted by the particular recruiting officers specified in the last letter of the accused just given in evidence.

Answer. They are all enlisted by those officers, to the best of my recollection. I have examined for that purpose.

The judge advocate stated, for the information of the court, that no proof had been given in respect to the name of Frederick G. Knapp, which occurs in the second specification of the second charge, all the other names charged in all the specifications of the second charge having been testified to by the witness under the various classifications made by him in his testimony; also the sums given in the specification to the first charge, corresponding in date and amount with the lists of names in the specifications of the second charge; also that all the names in the third charge had been previously testified to in the examination with reference to the second charge; and, as far as concerns the proof of the vouchers, receipts, certificates, and credit of the Captain or Major Hastings, all those have been admitted by the accused.

The judge advocate also stated that, in connexion with the testimony of the witness now about to be commenced, regarding the cases included in the specification to the third charge, he proposed to examine the witness as an expert and as familiar with the handwriting of the accused, by correspondence with him and frequent examination of his handwriting admitted in this case, in reference to the handwriting and the appearance of the signatures in the vouchers presented to the court, in order that the opinion of the witness concerning the same might appear upon the record for the attention of the reviewing authority, the voluminous character of the vouchers, with the scattered position in them of the cases specified, rendering it impossible and useless to attach them as abstracts.

Question. Has the nature of your duties made you experienced in the study of handwriting and examination of receipts?

Answer. Yes, sir; to a certain extent.

Question. Take the case of Joseph Keiger and present the voucher respecting it to the court, with such remarks as you have to make upon it.

Answer. His name appears on voucher 12 for the fourth quarter of 1862, item 71; on voucher 13, item 62. On voucher 12 there purports to be a signature. Voucher 13 is signed by mark. As far as the handwriting is concerned on voucher 12, the signature bears a striking resemblance to the name as written in the left-hand column. The signature of Joseph Keiger bears a striking resemblance also to the signatures of George Kelley and Patrick Kane, which appears on the same page of the voucher, so that it would seem that those three names were written by the same hand. I give that as my opinion. This similarity is noticed, not only in these three cases, but in many other cases throughout the voucher. I mean the similarity between the names as written in the two columns.

Question. Are all those names signed by mark?

Answer. No, sir; they all purport to be signatures. Voucher 13 is dated throughout November 14, 1862. Voucher 12 is dated from the 3d to the 22d of November, 1862.

The accused objects to the proof proposed by comparison of handwriting.

The court was then cleared to deliberate upon the objection; and when the court was again opened, the accused and his counsel and the reporters being present, the judge advocate announced, as the decision of the court, that the objection was overruled and the testimony admitted.

Question. Have you Joseph Keiger's enlistment paper?

Answer. I have not got it here. There were no enlistment papers filed in support of these two vouchers. There was an enlistment paper of Joseph Keiger found, according to my recollection.

(Vouchers exhibited to the court and examined.)

Question. Take the case of Patrick Kane?

Answer. Precisely the same remarks which were made in relation to Joseph Keiger apply to Patrick Kane. The name is in the same vouchers, and the same peculiarities are observable. There is a signature, by mark, on voucher 13, and a signature on voucher 12.

(Vouchers exhibited to the court and examined.)

Question. Andrew Lind?

Answer. That is precisely similar in all respects. The name is on the same vouchers.

Question. Frank Ludwig?

Answer. Frank Ludwig is similar to the case of Keiger in all respects, except that there is a signature on both vouchers, and the signature on voucher 12 is different from that on voucher 13.

Question. Joseph Loovy?

Answer. That is similar to Keiger's case—a mark on voucher 13, and a signature on voucher 12.

Question. Thomas Monroe?

Answer. Voucher 12 is signed Thomas Monroe, and the resemblance between the signature and the name in the left-hand column is very striking. Voucher 13 is signed Thomas S. Monroe in a style of handwriting entirely different.

Question. Patrick Dwyer appears in the accounts three times. On voucher 12, for the fourth quarter of 1862, we do not know whether it was intended for a signature or a mark. The name is written and a mark put in apparently afterwards. On voucher 14, for the fourth quarter of 1862, it is signed in the same way, apparently by mark. On voucher 3, for October, 1863, it is signed also by mark. The enlistment paper is signed by mark. In voucher 3, for October, 1863, the resemblance between the name in the right hand-column and the same name written in the left-hand column is most striking. The resemblance also appears in voucher 12, for the fourth quarter of 1862, but is not quite so striking. In my opinion, the name is written by the same person who wrote the left-hand column. It is signed by mark.

Question. Edward Waldenmayer?

Answer. Edward Waldenmayer appears on voucher 8, for the fourth quarter of 1862, and the signature is, to all appearances, genuine. It compares favorably with the signature on the enlistment. In voucher 4, for September, 1863, the same name, Edward Waldenmayer, appears, signed in the same manner to which I have alluded in other instances, in such a way that we cannot tell whether it is intended for a signature or a mark. The signature is apparently imitated, and a cross placed between the two names, which might either be a mark, or a signature, or a dash. We could not decide which that was. The enlistment paper was filed in support of this last payment. The enlistment paper is signed, and the signature bears resemblance to that on voucher 8, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment paper is dated October 22, 1862.

Question. Do you give it as your opinion as an expert, and from familiarity with the handwriting of the accused, and also from comparison of the papers, that, in the cases and the vouchers you have specified, the handwriting in the right-hand column, purporting to be the signature of the recruit, or the name of the recruit, with his mark, is the handwriting of the accused?

Answer. That is my opinion, except in regard to voucher 13.

(The respective vouchers exhibited to the court and examined.)

The court then adjourned until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

EDWARD W. HINKS,

Brigadier General U. S. Vols., President.

GARRICK MALLERY,

Lieutenant Colonel and Judge Advocate.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Wednesday, July 27, 1864.

The court met at ten o'clock a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

Present: All the members, the judge advocate, the accused, his counsel, and the reporters.

The record of yesterday was read and approved.

FREDERICK CHASE—Examination continued by the judge advocate.

Question. You were yesterday directed to produce the enlistment papers in the cases as to which you then testified. If you have been able to find them, present them, with such remarks as you have to make upon them, in the same manner as was done in your examination yesterday.

Answer. The enlistment of Joseph Keiger is signed by mark; that of Patrick Kane is also signed by mark; that of Andrew Lind has a signature which does not, in my opinion, bear any resemblance to the signature on voucher 12, voucher 13 being signed by mark. The enlistment of Frank Ludwig is signed, and the signature compares, in my opinion, very favorably with that on voucher 13, but not so well with that upon voucher 12. Joseph Loovy's enlistment is signed by mark; Thomas S. Monroe's enlistment is signed with a signature. The signature of the enlistment is, in my opinion, very much like the signature of the same man on voucher 13, but not like that one on voucher 12.

Question. Take the names of John W. Payne, Henry Eldridge, Alexander Hamilton, John Williamson, Isaac Godfrey, Stephen Connars, and George Shoemaker, which appear in voucher 3, for May, 1863, and present that voucher, with any other voucher referring to them, with such remarks as you have to make, in the same manner as you have heretofore done, taking the names up one by one in their order.

Answer. All these cases appear on voucher 3, for May, 1863. John W. Payne is item No. 26 on that voucher. He enlisted December 3, 1862. His name also appears on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862, item 162. The enlistment and both receipts are signed, and the signatures are very similar in each case. I shall not be willing to declare any resemblance, in either case, to any other writing.

Henry Eldridge enlisted December 9, 1862; on voucher 3, for May, 1863, item 27; on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862, item 127. The name is signed by mark on the enlistment and on each voucher. It is my opinion that the name to which the mark is appended on voucher 3, for May, 1863, was written by the same hand which wrote the name in the left-hand column of the voucher, although it is disguised somewhat.

Alexander Hamilton enlisted December 11, 1862. His name appears on voucher 3, for May, 1863, item 38, and on voucher 18 for the fourth quarter of 1862, item 129. The signature is by mark on the enlistment and on both vouchers. To the signature on voucher 3, for May, 1863, the same remark applies that I made in the case of Henry Eldridge. The signature on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862, is not similar.

John Williamson enlisted December 3, 1862; item 129 in voucher 3, for May, 1863; item 35 in voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. In item 35 of voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862, the name is John M. Williamson. It is signed by mark in all cases. To the signature in voucher 3, for May, 1863, the same remark applies which I made in regard to Henry Eldridge.

Isaac Godfrey enlisted December 12, 1862; item 41 in voucher 3, for May, 1863; item 109 in voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment paper and both vouchers are signed, and the signatures are somewhat similar in every case, so much so that I would not be willing to express my opinion in regard to any resemblance between them and any other handwriting.

Stephen Connors enlisted December 17, 1862; item 42 in voucher 3, for May, 1863; item 140 in voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature appended to the enlistment and to each of the vouchers. There are some peculiarities about the signature on voucher 3, for May, 1863, which incline me to the opinion that it was written by the same hand that wrote the name in the left-hand column.

George Shoemaker enlisted December 17, 1862; item 50 in voucher 3, for May, 1863; item 194 in voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. It is signed by mark in all cases. On voucher 3, for May, 1863, the signature to which the mark is appended was, in my estimation, written by the same hand that wrote the name in the left-hand column. The signature on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862, is not similar to the name in the left-hand column.

Question. Give your testimony in the same manner as before in regard to the following names, which appear in voucher 2, for July, 1863, viz: William H. Langdon, William LaCount, Adam Hoffman, Daniel Lynch, Adam Ziegler, Robert Dougherty, William F. Thornton, George R. Bird, Ransom Gillon, James E. Rogers, John Shoap, Barnard Loughram, Michael Fray, Daniel B. Best, Charles Crane, Munsen S. Acker, Finley Cameron, John W. Green, John Cura, John D. Smith, and George Fontary.

Answer. William H. Langdon should be William M. Langdon. William M. Langdon enlisted December 19, 1862; item 74 of voucher 2, for July, 1863; item 190 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment and the vouchers are signed. There are some peculiarities about the signature on voucher 2, for July, 1863, which incline me to think that it was written by the same hand which wrote the name in the left-hand column. The signature is somewhat like that upon the enlistment. It is very different from that on voucher 18 for the fourth quarter of 1862.

William Lacount enlisted December 17, 1862; item 77 on voucher 2, for July, 1863; item 189 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment and both vouchers are signed by mark. On voucher 2, for July, 1863, the name to which the mark is appended was, in my estimation, written by the same hand which wrote the same name in the left-hand column. On voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862, the name to which the mark is appended was not written, in my estimation, by the same hand which wrote the name in the left-hand column.

Adam Hoffman enlisted December 13, 1862; item 79 on voucher 2, for July, 1863; item 186 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature in all three cases. The signatures on the enlistment and on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862, are very similar. The signatures on voucher 2, for July, 1863, is quite different.

Daniel Lynch enlisted December 24, 1862; item 134 on voucher 2, for July, 1863; item 206 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature in each case, and the signatures bear some resemblance to one another in all the cases.

Adam Zeigler enlisted December 11, 1862; item 141 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment paper is signed. Voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862, has that peculiar cross between the names in the right-hand column which I suppose to be intended for a mark. Voucher 2, for July, 1863, is signed, and the signature on that voucher is not similar to that upon the enlistment paper, but is in many respects to the same name written in the left-hand column of the voucher.

Robert Daugherty enlisted December 11, 1862; item 154 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment paper and the vouchers are signed. The signatures are very similar in all the cases.

William F. Thornton enlisted December 15, 1862; item 146 on voucher 2, for July, 1863; item 198 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment and both vouchers I suppose to be signed by mark. The same peculiarity in the mark as before mentioned exists in both vouchers. I can hardly tell whether it is a mark or a signature. The name to which the mark is appended on voucher 2, for July, 1863, is written in a style very much like the same name in the left-hand column, and it is noticeable that the same peculiarity exists in the signatures throughout this page of the voucher. The names are nearly all signed by mark in this peculiar way, and all apparently written by one hand and the same hand which wrote the names in the left-hand column.

George R. Bird enlisted December 22, 1862; item 147 on voucher 2, for July, 1863; item 214 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. It is signed by mark in all cases. The name on voucher 2, for July, 1863, is similar to the other signatures on that page of the voucher and to the name in the left-hand column.

Ransom Gellon enlisted December 23, 1862; item 148 on voucher 2, for July, 1863; item 236 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment is signed. The voucher for the fourth quarter of 1862 is signed by mark, and the name to which the mark is appended is apparently written in the same hand which wrote the name on the left-hand column. On voucher 2, for July, 1863, there is a signature.

James E. Rogers enlisted December 23, 1862; item 149 on voucher 2, for July, 1863; item 220 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment is James C. Rogers, and so are both vouchers. They are all signed by mark. The signature by mark on voucher 2, for July, 1863, is very much like the rest on that page which are signed by mark, and like the same names in the left-hand column.

I may say here that that same remark applied to the names of John Shoup, Michael Tracy, (Fray,) Daniel B. Best, Charles Crane, Munson S. Acker, Finley Cameron, John Curn, and George Fontary. John Shoup enlisted December 22, 1862; item 150 on voucher 2, for July, 1863; item 222 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. Michael Tracy enlisted December 22, 1862; item 152 on voucher 2, for July, 1863; item 224 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. Daniel B. Best enlisted December 17, 1862; item 153 on voucher 2, for July, 1863; item 180 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. Charles Crane enlisted December 19, 1862; item 154 on voucher 2, for July, 1863; item 183 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. Munson S. Acker enlisted December 8, 1862; item 155 on voucher 2, for July, 1863; item 65 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. Finley Cameron enlisted December 11, 1862; item 156 on voucher 2, for July, 1863; item 70 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. John Curn enlisted December 15, 1862; item 158 on voucher 2, for July, 1863; item 125 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. George Fontary enlisted December 11, 1862; item 160 on voucher 2, for July, 1863; item 74 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862.

Barnard Loughran enlisted December 20, 1862; item 151 on voucher 2, for July, 1863; item 212 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The signature is by mark in all cases. The signature upon the voucher for the fourth quarter of 1862 appears to me to have been written by the same hand which wrote the name in the left-hand column.

John W. Green enlisted December 12, 1862; item 157 on voucher 2, for July, 1863; item 108 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment and both vouchers have signatures. The signatures on the enlistment and on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862, are very similar. The signature on voucher 2, for July, 1863, is also similar, but it appears to me to be imitated, and in some respects shows the same peculiarities of hand which appear in the same name written in the left-hand column of the voucher.

John D. Smith enlisted December 12, 1862; item 159 on voucher 2, for July, 1863; item 120 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature in every case, and they are quite similar in each case.

Question. Turn to the following names on voucher 3, for August, 1863: Joshua Stewart, George W. Voorhees, Lewis R. Campbell, Truman K. Snyder, John J. Lee, George Sultzer, William C. Copeland, Albert Lewis, William Pulliam, and give your testimony in regard to them in the same manner as before.

Answer. Joshua Stewart enlisted December 8, 1862; item 23 on voucher 3, for August, 1863; item 91 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862, is Joshua A. Stewart. The enlistment paper is signed; the voucher for the fourth quarter of 1862 is signed by mark, and the voucher for August, 1863, is signed. There are some peculiarities about the signature to the voucher for August, 1863, which lead me to believe that it was written by the same hand which wrote the name in the left-hand column of the voucher.

George W. Voorhees enlisted December 11, 1862; item 25 on voucher 3, for August, 1863; item 94 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature in every case. I have no opinion to give on that.

Lewis R. Campbell enlisted December 6, 1862; item 35 on voucher 3, for August, 1863; item 69 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature in each case. I have no remark to make about these signatures.

Truman K. Snyder enlisted December 11, 1862; item 38 on voucher 3, for August, 1863; item 87 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature in each case. There is a similarity between the signature on voucher 3, for August, 1863, and the same name in the left-hand column of that voucher; I believe them to have been written by the same hand.

John C. Lee enlisted December 11, 1862; item 91 on voucher 3, for August, 1863; item 80 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature in each case. I give no opinion on these signatures. They are very similar in each case.

George Sultzer enlisted December 10, 1862; item 110 on voucher 3, for August, 1863; item 133 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature in each case. The signature on voucher 3, for August, 1863, is not like that upon the enlistment or upon the other voucher. It appears to me to have been written by the same hand which wrote the same name in the left-hand column of that voucher.

William C. Copeland enlisted December 9, 1862; item 61 on voucher 3, for August, 1863; item 53 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature in each case. I am of opinion that the name on voucher 3, for August, 1863, was written by the same hand which wrote the same name in the left-hand column of that voucher.

Albert Lewis enlisted December 2, 1862; item 37 on voucher 3, for August, 1863; item 167 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature in each case. Both signatures on the voucher appear to me to have been written by the same hand which wrote the same name in the left-hand column of each voucher, and neither of them is like the signature on the enlistment.

William Pullian enlisted December 12, 1862; item 124 on voucher 3, for August, 1863; item 169 on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature in each case, and the same remark applies which I made in reference to the name of Albert Lewis; the signatures on both vouchers seem to me to have been written by the same hand which wrote the names in the left-hand column.

Question. In your opinion, were the signatures of George Sultzer and Truman K. Snyder, as they appear on voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862, written by the same hand that wrote the signatures of the same persons on the enlistment papers?

Answer. I am more willing to give my opinion in regard to Snyder. In his case I think that was so. In regard to Sultzer I am not so positive. The signatures differ considerably, but still they resemble each other.

Question. Turn to the following names on voucher 4, for September, 1863: Spencer Bagley, William H. Ham, John Normoyle, Reuben Waters, William O. Coons, Sidney Palmer, William H. O. Goldsmith, William Siebert, Benjamin F. Satterlee, John C. Deminger, George N. Weintz, Charles O. Doe, William John Minsen, Roland Fisher, Alonzo G. Railing, and give your testimony in regard to them, as before.

Answer. Spencer Bagley enlisted December 15, 1862; item 7 on voucher 4, for September, 1863; item 181 on voucher 18, for the 4th quarter of 1862. There is a signature in each case, and the signatures are somewhat similar.

William H. Ham enlisted December 8, 1862; item 19 in voucher 4, for September, 1863; item 46 in voucher 18, for the 4th quarter of 1862. The name is William H. Ham on the enlistment, and on the voucher for the 4th quarter, 1862, and William H. Hand on voucher 4, for September, 1863. The payment to William H. Hand is supported by the enlistment paper of William H. Ham. There is a signature in each case, and the signatures are a good deal alike, except that the last name is different on voucher 4, for September, 1863. In all cases the enlistment papers were filed with the second payment in 1863. The first payment was always in the 4th quarter of 1862, and the second payment during the year 1863 is invariably supported by the enlistment papers as given. Some of the double payments were made in the 4th quarter of 1862, where there were no enlistments filed in support of either payments. Where the enlistment papers are filed, they are in support of the second payment.

John Normoyle enlisted December 17, 1862; item 20 in voucher 4, for September, 1863; and item 177 in voucher 18, for the 4th quarter of 1862. There is a signature in each case. I do not give any opinion about these signatures; they vary, not being precisely alike.

Reuben Waters enlisted December 12, 1862; item 21 in voucher 4, for September, 1863; item 122 in voucher 18, for the 4th quarter of 1862. There is a signature in each case by mark. The name to which the mark is appended on the voucher for September, 1863, was, in my opinion, written by the same person who wrote the same name in the left-hand column of the voucher.

William O. Coons enlisted December 9, 1862; item 22 in voucher 4, for September, 1863; item 138 in voucher 18, for the 4th quarter of 1862, is signed by mark, and the voucher for September, 1863, is signed.

Sidney Palmer enlisted December 12, 1862; item 23 in voucher 4, for September, 1863; item 115 in voucher 18, for the 4th quarter of 1862. The enlistment is signed by mark; the voucher for the 4th quarter of 1862 is signed.

The voucher for September, 1863, is signed by mark, and the name to which the mark is appended in that voucher was, in my opinion, written by the same hand which wrote the same name in the left-hand column of the voucher.

William H. O. Goldsmith enlisted December 13, 1862; item 24 in voucher 4, of September, 1863; item 165 in voucher 18, for the 4th quarter of 1862. There is a signature in each case. On the voucher of the 4th quarter of 1862 it is signed William Goldsmith, and upon the voucher for September, 1863, it is signed William H. O. Goldsmith. The name of William Goldsmith on the voucher for the 4th quarter of 1862 resembles in the style of hand very much some four or five names which are written above and below, and those names also all resemble the same names as written in the left-hand column of the voucher.

William Seibert enlisted December 12, 1862; item 25 in voucher 4, for September, 1863; item 118 in voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. Both vouchers and the enlistment are signed.

Benjamin F. Satterlee enlisted December 8, 1862; item 26 in voucher 4, for September, 1863; item 88 in voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature in each case.

John C. Deminger. The enlistment is indorsed John C. Deminger and signed George C. Deminger. He enlisted December 11, 1862. He appears on voucher 4, for September, 1863, item 27, as John C. Deminger, and does not appear in any other voucher that I have found. The signature on the enlistment is different from that upon the voucher.

George N. Weintz enlisted December 13, 1862; item 28 in voucher 4, for September, 1863; item 199 in voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature in each case, and the signature on the voucher for September, 1863, appears to have been written by the same hand which wrote the signature of John C. Deminger, immediately above.

Charles O. Doe enlisted December 3, 1862; item 29 in voucher 4, for September, 1863; item 39 in voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature on the enlistment and on the voucher for the fourth quarter of 1862. The voucher for September, 1863, is signed in such a way that I cannot positively determine whether it is intended for a signature or a mark. A cross seems to have been put in after the name was written. The name of Charles O. Doe there seems to have been written by the same hand which wrote the name of Charles O. Doe in the left-hand column of the same voucher, and also by the same hand which wrote a number of other signatures in the same column in the same page of the voucher. It is a peculiarity of this page, also, which is mentioned in regard to other pages, that a large number of the names on the page seem to have been written by the same hand.

William John Mincen enlisted December 18, 1862; item 30 in voucher 4, for September, 1863; item 202 in voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment is signed. The voucher for September, 1863, is signed. The voucher for the fourth quarter of 1862 is signed by mark, and I am of opinion that the name on the voucher for the fourth quarter of 1862, to which the mark is appended, was written by the same hand which wrote the name of William C. Mincer in the left-hand column.

Roland Fisher enlisted December 9, 1862; item 31 in voucher 4, for September, 1863; item 172 in voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature in each case. The signature on the voucher for September, 1863, appears to me to have been written by the same hand which wrote the same name in the left-hand column of the voucher.

Alonzo G. Railing enlisted December 23, 1862; item 44 in voucher 4, for September, 1863; item 221 in voucher 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature in each case. It is my opinion that the signature on the voucher for September, 1863, was written by the same hand which wrote the same name in the left-hand column of the voucher.

Question. Turn to the following names on voucher 3, for October, 1863: Edward Scharenberg, Thomas Thews, Martin F. Sayre, Oliver G. Sowers, Samuel Hicks, William Guest, Isaac N. Dorsee, John D. Burgh, Hugo Breen, John Murphy, John Fornan, John Hoyt, Edward Dill, Samuel B. Chipman, Oscar L. Cady, Philip Crook, Clement Williams, William Alonzo Prine, Josiah McCoy, Matthew McDermot, Andrew McDonald, Robert Moore, William McCarty, Charles Lippie, and give your testimony in regard to them.

Answer. Edward Scharenberg enlisted October 23, 1862; item 19 in voucher 3, for October, 1863; item 80 on voucher 8, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment paper is signed, and the voucher for the fourth quarter of 1862 is also signed. The voucher for October, 1863, is signed by mark, and in my opinion the name appended to the mark was written by the same hand which wrote the name on the left-hand column.

Thomas Thews enlisted October 25, 1862; item 20 of voucher 3, for October, 1863; item 82 of voucher 8, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature in each case. It is my belief that the name in voucher 3, for October, 1863, was written by the same hand in both columns; it is similar, in many respects, to the style in which a number of other names are written upon the same page of that voucher, covering a large proportion of the names on that page.

Martin F. Sayre enlisted October 25, 1862; item 21 in voucher 3, for October, 1863; item 79 in voucher 8, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature in both places.

Oliver G. Sowers's enlistment is indorsed Oliver G. Sowers, but it is signed Oliver P. Sowers. The name appears on voucher 3, for October, 1863, item 22, and on voucher 8, for the fourth quarter of 1862, item 81. The voucher for the fourth quarter of 1863 and the enlistment are both signed. The voucher for October, 1863, has that peculiarity of which I have several times spoken, that the signature appears to have been imitated, and a cross made between the Oliver and the P.

Samuel Hicks enlisted October 23, 1862; item 23 in voucher 3, for October, 1863, and item 75 in voucher 8, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature in each case.

William Guest enlisted October 25, 1862; item 24 on voucher 3, for October, 1863; item 74 on voucher 8, for the fourth quarter of 1862. On the enlistment paper, and on the voucher for the fourth quarter of 1862, there is a signature. On the voucher for October, 1863, the name is written in imitation of the signature apparently, and the ordinary flourish in the manner of a cross put between the names, and in my opinion that signature was written by the same hand which wrote the name in the left-hand column of that voucher; and I would also say that this name and all the others to which I have testified in this month, as well as a number of others on the same page, appear to have been written by the same hand.

Isaac N. Dorsee enlisted October 25, 1862; item 25 on voucher 3, for October, 1863; item 72 on voucher 8, for the fourth quarter of 1863. The enlistment and the voucher for the fourth quarter of 1862 are both signed, and the signatures are very similar. The voucher for October, 1863, presents the same peculiarity in regard to this name as in regard to that of William Guest, and the remarks applicable to the case of William Guest are applicable likewise to Isaac N. Dorsee.

John D. Burgh enlisted October 25, 1862; item 26 on voucher 3, for October, 1863; item 70 on voucher 8, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature in each case.

Hugo Breen enlisted November 19, 1862; item 96 on voucher 3, for October, 1863; item 146 on voucher 12, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment and the voucher for the 4th quarter of 1862 are both signed. The voucher for October, 1863, is signed by mark in the same peculiar way that I have spoken of before, and the same remarks which I have made before apply to this page of the voucher, namely, that quite a number of the names upon the page appear to me to have been written by the same hand, and also by the same hand which wrote the left-hand column of the voucher, Hugo Breen among the number.

John Murphy enlisted November 18, 1862; item 99 on voucher 3, for October, 1863. There was a John Murphy, whose enlistment we do not find, paid on voucher 13, for the fourth quarter of 1862, item 77, but the dates would preclude his being the same man. The signature is by mark, both on the enlistment and on the voucher for October, 1863, and the name of John Murphy, to which the mark is appended in the voucher, presents the same striking resemblance I have before mentioned to other names appearing on the same page—in fact, to almost the entire page, and also to the name of the same man in the left-hand column.

John Fornan enlisted November 17, 1862; item 111 on voucher 3, for October, 1863; item 21 on voucher 14, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment and each voucher is signed by mark. The name to which the mark is appended in the voucher for October, 1863, presents the same striking likeness which I have mentioned in regard to the name of John Murphy, on the same page above. In my opinion it was written by the same hand which wrote almost the whole of that page, in the column of receipt, and also the left-hand column of the voucher.

John Hoyt enlisted November 19, 1862. We find but one payment to the John Hoyt, which was made in October, 1862; voucher 3, item 109. The signature is by mark in both cases, and the same remarks apply to the signature on the voucher which were made in regard to the case of John Murphy.

Edward Dill enlisted November 17, 1862; item 113 on voucher 3, for October, 1863; item 19 on voucher 14, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment and the voucher for October, 1863, are signed by mark; and in regard to the signature on this voucher the same peculiarity may be noticed which was spoken of in regard to the preceding page of the voucher, that this name and a large number of others on the same page appear to have been written by the same hand, and also by the same hand which wrote the left-hand column of the voucher.

Samuel B. Chipman enlisted December 17, 1862; item 114 on voucher 3, for October, 1863; item 18 on voucher 14, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The signature is by mark on the enlistment, and on both vouchers. The signature on the voucher for October, 1863, is made by mark in the dubious manner of which I have before spoken, and it bears the same resemblance to the remainder of that column, and to the left-hand column, that I spoke of in the case of Edward Dill, which is on the same page. It is my belief that both the columns on that voucher were written by the same hand.

Oscar L. Cady enlisted November 11, 1862; item 115 on voucher 3, for October, 1863; item 347 on voucher 13, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment paper and voucher 13 for the fourth quarter of 1862 are both signed by Oscar L. Cady. Voucher 3, for October, 1863, is signed by Oscar D. Cady, and the enlistment paper of Oscar L. Cady was filed in support of that payment.

Philip Crook enlisted November 12, 1862; item 116 on voucher 3, for October, 1863; item 350 on voucher 13, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The signature in each case is by mark. To the signature on voucher 3, for October, 1863, the same remarks apply which I made in relation to Edward Dill and Samuel B. Chipman.

Clement Williams enlisted November 12, 1862; item 117 on voucher 3, for October, 1863; item 361 on voucher 13, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment and the voucher for October, 1863, are both signed by mark. The voucher for the fourth quarter of 1862 is signed apparently. The same remark applies to Clement Williams that applies to Edward Dill and Samuel B. Chipman.

William Alonzo Princ enlisted November 12, 1862; item 118 on voucher 3, for October, 1863; item 301 on voucher 13, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment and both vouchers are signed by mark. To the signature on the voucher for October, 1863, the same remark applies which I made in relation to Edward Dill and Samuel B. Chipman.

Josiah McCoy enlisted November 12, 1862; item 119 on voucher 3, for October, 1863; item 300 on voucher 13, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature in each case. The appearance that this signature on the voucher for October, 1863, was written by the same hand which wrote the other names in the same column is quite striking. It is not so striking, however, that it is written in the same hand which wrote the left-hand column.

Matthew McDermot enlisted November 5, 1862; item 120 on voucher 3, for October, 1863; item 205 on voucher number 13, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The signature in each case is by mark. The same remarks apply to the signature of the voucher for October, 1863, that I have made in relation to Edward Dill and Samuel B. Chipman.

Andrew McDonald enlisted November 5, 1862; item 121 on voucher 3, for October, 1863; item 204 on voucher 13, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment and the voucher for October, 1863, are signed by mark. The voucher for the fourth quarter of 1862 is signed. To the signature by mark upon the voucher for October, 1863, apply the remarks which I have made in relation to Edward Dill and Samuel B. Chipman.

Robert Moore enlisted November 4, 1862; item 122 on voucher 3, for October, 1863; item 218 on voucher 13, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature in all three cases. The similarity of which I spoke in relation to Josiah McCoy is apparent also in the name of Robert Moore.

William McCarty enlisted November 3, 1862; item 123 on voucher 3, for October, 1863; item 219 on voucher 13, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment and the voucher for the fourth quarter of 1862 are both signed. The signature on voucher 3, for October, 1863, is by mark, and the remarks which I have made in relation to Edward Dill and Samuel B. Chipman apply to the name of William McCarty on this voucher.

Charles Sipple enlisted December 10, 1862; item 58 on voucher 3, for October, 1863; there was no previous payment. It appears, however, from the records of the Second Auditor's office, that this man died May 11, 1863, at the Armory Square hospital, at Washington, and arrears of pay have been paid to his heirs by the Second Auditor's office. The same likeness exists in relation to his signature on voucher 3, for October, 1863, to a number of the other names in that column of the voucher on the same page, and also to the same name written in the left-hand column. It is my opinion that they were written by the same hand.

Question. In all these cases where you have used the remark "written by the same hand," do you mean any one person's hand, or can you identify it any way?

Answer. I mean Major Hastings's hand.

The court then adjourned until to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock.

EDWARD W. HINKS,

Brigadier General U. S. Vols., President.

GARRICK MALLERY,

Lieutenant Colonel and Judge Advocate.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Thursday, July 28, 1864.

The court met at ten o'clock a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

Present: All the members of the court, the judge advocate, the accused, and the reporters.

The counsel for the accused not being present, the accused desires the court to proceed, without his counsel, with the reading of the record and the class of testimony which he understands will be adduced, until he shall make objection.

The record of yesterday was read and approved.

THOS. MCGREGOR, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Question. What is your rank and regiment, and on what duty have you recently been?

Answer. I am first lieutenant first United States cavalry. I have been adjutant at Carlisle barracks, and quartermaster and commissary.

Question. You were directed to bring here the descriptive books of the barracks for the period that Captain or Major Hastings was superintendent of the mounted recruiting service?

Answer. I was.

Question. Have you them here?

Answer. I have brought them here.

Question. Present them to the court.

The witness presents five books, which are put in evidence, marked, respectively, as follows:

Descriptive Book First United States Cavalry, Record of Discharges; Muster and Descriptive Book for Second United States Cavalry; Index to Descriptive and Clothing Account, Cavalry, Carlisle Barracks; Descriptive Roll of Recruits of the Cavalry Depot; Descriptive Roll of Recruits of the Cavalry Depot.

FREDERICK CHASE—Examination continued by the judge advocate.

Question. When, in the testimony you have previously given, you have used the word "we" in reference to examinations, what did you mean by that?

Answer. I meant the Second Auditor's office, for the reason that I have not myself personally, in every instance, made the examination, but I know that it has been made under my direction.

Question. Have you any documentary evidence of the death of Charles Sippel, referred to yesterday, and can you produce it?

Answer. I have an official copy of his final statement, certified by the Second Auditor.

(Copy of final statement of Charles Sippel, company M, fifth United States cavalry, signed by First Lieutenant G. A. Custer, with certificate of E. B. French, Second Auditor, that it is a true copy of the original on file in his office, produced, put in evidence, and annexed to this record, marked Exhibit G.)

Question. Turn to the following names on voucher 3, for November, 1863: David Litchfield, Henry Axton, William McClain, Pleasant Bailey, Hugh McConnor, James A. Graham, Harrison Fergusson, James T. Warrell, James Hughes, John Rorly, John P. Kline, Joseph Liffin, Bathalmy Shay, Jesse Higgle, Edward J. Kelcher, and Alexander B. Butts, and give your testimony in regard to them in the same manner as in the other cases.

Answer. David Litchfield enlisted November 25, 1862; item 13 on voucher 3, for November, 1863; item 217 on voucher 14, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment is signed and the vouchers are signed.

Henry Axton enlisted November 6, 1862; item 14 on voucher 3, for November, 1863; item 325 on voucher 13, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment and the voucher for November, 1863, are signed by mark.

Hugh McConner enlisted November 24, 1862; item 17 on voucher 3, for November, 1863; item 218 on voucher 14, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment and the voucher for November, 1863, are signed by mark.

James A. Graham enlisted November 10, 1862; item 18 on voucher 3, for November, 1863; item 330 on voucher 13, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The voucher for November, 1863, and the enlistment, are signed.

Harrison Furguson enlisted November 23, 1862; item 19 on voucher 3, for November, 1863. It is signed by mark in each case.

James T. (or G.) Narrell enlisted November 6, 1862; item 20 on voucher 3, for November, 1863; item 329 on voucher 13, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment is signed. The voucher for November, 1863, is signed by mark.

Joseph Liffn enlisted November 21, 1862; item 24 on voucher 3, for November, 1863; item 111 on voucher 14, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment and the voucher for November, 1863, are signed.

In relation to all these cases which I have named, I will say that the signatures on voucher 3, for November, 1863, which are in juxtaposition to one another, being numbered from 13 to 25, present every appearance of having been written by the same hand, and they were, in my opinion, written by the same hand, and also by the same hand that wrote the left-hand column of the voucher adjoining them containing the same names; that is the hand of Major D. H. Hastings.

Jesse Higgle enlisted November 28, 1862; item 32 on voucher 3, for November, 1863; item 119 on voucher 14, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment and the voucher for November, 1863, are signed by mark, and the same remark applies to that which I have made in regard to the others in this month.

Edward J. Kelcher enlisted November 11, 1862; item 78 on voucher 3, for November, 1863; item 268 on voucher 13, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature in each case, and I do not express any opinion upon it.

Alexander B. Butts enlisted November 1, 1862; item 83 on voucher 3, for November, 1863. There is a signature on the enlistment, and on the voucher, for November, 1863, and the same remark applies to the signature that I have made in regard to the most of the others in this month.

Lewis Sunday enlisted November 19, 1862; item 51 on voucher 3, for December, 1863; item 87 on voucher 14, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment and the voucher for December, 1863, are signed by mark.

In regard to all these cases which I have named in this month, I will say that they are borne on the voucher consecutively, from 33 to 56, and appear to have been all made by the same hand, and I give that as my opinion, saying, however, that in relation to the names of Lewis E. Barton, Michael Hickey, James R. McClellan, (or McClennan,) Thomas L. Emmick, Z. W. Flower, and Hiram H. Hunt, I am not so positive in my opinion as I am in regard to the others; but I will say that the names of Thomas L. Emmet and Z. W. Flower, which appear together on the page, seem very strongly to have been written by the same hand. They purport to be signatures. I also give it as my opinion that, with the exceptions I have mentioned, they were written by the same hand which wrote the left-hand column of the voucher—Major Hastings's hand. I intend to give it as my opinion that they are all written by the same hand which wrote all the others, and which also wrote the left-hand column, but I do not give my opinion so strongly in regard to those I have excepted.

William Bostwick enlisted November 19, 1862; item 68 on voucher 3, for December, 1863. The enlistment and the voucher are signed by mark. I think the signature by mark on the voucher was written by the same person who wrote the left-hand column.

Rodney S. Morgan enlisted November 10, 1862; item 79 on voucher 3, for December, 1863; item 299 on voucher 13, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment and the voucher for December, 1863, are both signed. The signature on this voucher bears the same resemblance to many others on the same page which I have noticed before, but it is also somewhat similar to the signature on the enlistment. I give no opinion upon it.

John Kneebone enlisted November 11, 1862; item 94 on voucher 3, for December, 1863; item 274 on voucher 13, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature on the enlistment and on the voucher for December, 1863. I have the same opinion in regard to the signature of John Kneebone as in regard to the majority of cases in this list.

(Counsel for the accused appears in court.)

Question. Turn to the following names and voucher 7, for January, 1864, and give your testimony in regard to them: Samuel J. Crockett, Henry Esaw, Joseph Fielding, James H. Welch, David Watson, James Shipman, Jere W. Shufelt, Arthur Hendes, Walter Caffyn, Patrick Coyle, Michael Shea, Theodore P. Barker, John Castello, Wells Speney, John Quinn, Ensign Reynolds, John McKee, Isaac Highfield, and Franklin Lovejoy.

Answer. Samuel J. Crockett enlisted November 6, 1862; item 49, on voucher

7, for January, 1864; item 169 on voucher 13, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment and the voucher for January, 1864, are signed.

Henry Esaw enlisted November 1, 1862; item 50 on voucher 7, for January, 1864; item 18 on voucher 12, for the fourth quarter of 1862.

Joseph Fielding enlisted November 17, 1862; item 51 on voucher 7, for January, 1864; item 169 on voucher 12, for the fourth quarter of 1862.

James H. Welch enlisted November 12, 1862; item 52 on voucher 7, for January, 1864.

David Watson enlisted November 5, 1862; item 53 on voucher 7, for January, 1864; item 7 on voucher 14, for the fourth quarter of 1862.

James Shipman enlisted November 3, 1862; item 54 on voucher 7, for January, 1864; item 6 on voucher 14, for the fourth quarter of 1862.

Jere W. Shufelt enlisted November 29, 1862; item 55 on voucher 7, for January, 1864.

Arthur Hendes enlisted November 29, 1862; item 56 on voucher 7, for January, 1864.

Walter Caffyn enlisted November 27, 1862; item 58 on voucher 7, for January, 1864.

Patrick Coyle enlisted November 11, 1862; item 59 on voucher 7, for January, 1864; item 266 on voucher 13, for the fourth quarter of 1862.

Michael Shea enlisted November 1, 1862; item 60 on voucher 7, for January, 1864; item 156 on voucher 14, for the fourth quarter of 1862.

Theodore P. Barker enlisted November 1, 1862; item 61 on voucher 7, for January, 1864.

John Castello enlisted November 25, 1862; item 62 on voucher 7, for January, 1864.

Wells Spency enlisted November 25, 1862; item 63 on voucher 7, for January, 1864.

John Quinn enlisted November 22, 1862; item 64 on voucher 7, for January, 1864.

These names which I have given appear consecutively on one page of voucher 7, for January, 1864, and cover all upon that page except the name of William Riley. The enlistments are all signed, and the names upon the voucher are all signed. The signatures present the same striking resemblance to one another throughout the whole page of which I have spoken before, and I should give it as my opinion that they were all written by the same hand. There is, however, an apparent careful imitation in most cases, and in some of the cases there are peculiarities which lead me to the opinion that they were written by the same hand which wrote the left-hand column of the voucher. I do not give this opinion, however, so strongly in relation to these cases as I have given it in relation to some of the others.

Ensign Reynolds enlisted November 3, 1862; item 108 on voucher 7, for January, 1864; item 165 on voucher 13, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature upon the enlistment, and upon the voucher for January, 1864. It is my opinion that the signature on the voucher for January, 1864, was written by the same person who wrote the name in the left-hand column of the voucher.

John McKee enlisted November 15, 1862; item 111 on voucher 7, for January, 1864. The enlistment is signed. The voucher for January, 1864, is signed by mark, and I would make the same remark in relation to this signature upon the voucher which I made in relation to that of Ensign Reynolds.

Isaac Highfield enlisted November 18, 1862; item 116 on voucher 7, for January, 1864; item 108 on voucher 14, for the fourth quarter of 1862. The enlistment is signed. The voucher for January, 1864, is signed by mark, and the same remark applies to this which applied to the cases of Ensign Reynolds and John McKee.

Franklin Lovejoy enlisted November 13 or 30, 1862; item 148 on voucher 7, for January, 1864; item 339 on voucher 13, for the fourth quarter of 1862. There is a signature upon the enlistment, and upon the voucher for January, 1864. The signatures are different, but I give no opinion in regard to them.

(Vouchers and enlistment papers exhibited to the court and examined.)

Question. Have you any further documentary evidence in your possession bearing upon any of the cases to which you have testified? and if so, present it, with your remarks upon it.

Answer. In relation to Harrison G. Campbell, who appears on the voucher for December, 1863, item 98, there is found in the Second Auditor's office a letter announcing his death, from the surgeon in charge of the general hospital at Annapolis to the Adjutant General's office.

(Letter dated June 15, 1863, produced, put in evidence, and annexed to this record, marked "Exhibit H.")

The letter was filed in the Second Auditor's office with a statement of the effects of the deceased sent there from the Adjutant General's office.)

Question. Were any of the accounts of the accused, relating to the period of his acting as superintendent of the mounted recruiting service, passed by the Second Auditor's office; if not, why not? Explain the usual practice of the office fully in respect to such accounts, and the action in this case.

Answer. The accounts of Major Hastings were a part of them passed before it was discovered that double payments existed. The accounts for January, February, March, April, and May, 1863, I think, were passed on the 22d of June, 1863; that is my recollection of it. Afterwards, however, when it was discovered that double payments existed in the later accounts, and also in the earlier ones, a request was made to the Second Comptroller by the Second Auditor, and the settlement was cancelled, so that there had been finally no payments of bounties allowed to Major Hastings in the settlement of his accounts. The practice of the office is, when bounty accounts are examined, to require that the name of the officer who enlisted each recruit shall be stated opposite his name upon the voucher, so that the enlistment can be found, if on file in the office, in that officer's account, or in default of this it is required that the officer making the payment of bounties should file with his account a copy of the enlistment of each man; all accounts which do not furnish one of these methods of verification are suspended. Such was the case with the accounts of Major Hastings for the third and fourth quarters of 1862. Neither of these requirements was complied with, and it was impossible to settle his accounts. The reason why the accounts for January, February, March, April, and May, 1863, were settled before the accounts for the fourth quarter of 1862 were examined, was that the enlistments were filed with those accounts, and an examination was possible, whereas there were no enlistments filed with the accounts for the third and fourth quarters of 1862, and an examination was not possible. Major Hastings, however, in July, 1863, furnished the names in general of the officers who enlisted the recruits to whom he paid bounties, and his accounts for the third and fourth quarters of 1862 were examined on that basis. It was then that the double payments were detected.

Question. Explain how you have found the enlistment papers in the accounts of other officers, as you have before stated, in the cases you have mentioned where enlistment papers were never forwarded by the accused, and enlistment papers were still found.

Answer. It is required by the regulations that all recruiting officers shall forward with their accounts one copy of every enlistment made by them to the Second Auditor. In cases where the recruiting officers complied with this requirement, the names of the recruits were entered upon a record-book which we keep at the office, alphabetically, of the recruits enlisted. It was by comparison between the vouchers of Major Hastings and this book that the enlistments were discovered, Question. During your examination you have frequently mentioned that the same handwriting was in the column purporting to be the receipts of the recruits, and also in the left-hand column, and have stated that Major Hastings wrote, in your opinion, both. I will now ask you whether, from comparison of periods of time, the fourth quarter of 1862 and the beginning of 1863, down to April or May, or any time you may specify, and a subsequent period of time, you think they are both in the same handwriting for both periods?

Answer. It is my opinion that the signatures to which I have testified in the fourth quarter of 1862, and also those to which I have testified in all the months of 1863 and January, 1864, were written by the same hand. I do not mean all the names to which I have testified, but all those where I have said the handwriting was the same.

Question. Over what period of time do the various irregularities, or frauds, or in whatever other classification you may place them, extend, and give that classification.

Answer. The frauds, as a whole, extend from the fourth quarter of 1862 to the month of January, 1864, both inclusive, with the exception, however, of the months of February, March and April, 1863, which we have not examined to see whether there were frauds in them, so that I cannot say whether frauds exist in those months or not, the accounts having been suspended in a body after the settlement was cancelled. In the fourth quarter of 1862 there are two kinds of frauds, one which is presumptive merely, where the enlistments cannot be found, and only one payment is charged, and again where two payments are charged to the same men on two distinct vouchers of the same account, (the fourth quarter of 1862.) Another class of frauds is distinguished by the peculiarity that the first payment was made in the fourth quarter of 1862, unsupported by enlistments, and the second payment was made during the months of 1863 and January, 1864, supported by an enlistment. The fourth division is where bounties are claimed to have been paid during the months of 1863 and January, 1864, to men who were enlisted long prior to the date of the payment, and who, in some cases, appear to have died before the payment was alleged to have been made. This class also rests somewhat on presumption, like the class wherein enlistments are not found.

Question. Do you limit the latter remark to cases of death?

Answer. I do not. It includes all who were enlisted so long, prior to the date of the alleged payment, that it was considered hardly possible that they should have been present to receive the money. That is the ground on which the vouchers were suspended.

Cross-examination by the accused.

Question. Do you know whether it was the requirement of the Second Auditor's office, from the beginning, that the enlistments should be sent with these vouchers in every case?

Answer. That was not the absolute requirement. The requirement has always been, as I have before stated, that the enlistments must accompany the account, or some data must be given by which we can find the enlistment in the office. No payment can be allowed unless the enlistment is produced to support it.

Question. Then it was not indispensable that the enlistment should accompany the vouchers?

Answer. Certainly not.

Question. And the fact of the enlistment not being found is not conclusive evidence that the payments were fraudulent?

Answer. Certainly not.

Question. You have introduced two letters addressed by Major Hastings to the Second Auditor. Will you state, if you please, in whose handwriting the body of each of those letters is?

Answer. I can say that one of them, in my opinion, is in the hand of Major Hastings. It is the one dated January 24, 1863. The other, dated July 6, 1863, I presume to be in the handwriting of Henry Orsey; but I am not so well acquainted with his handwriting as I am with that of Major Hastings.

Question. The letter of January 24, 1863, speaks of the affidavits of certain clerks. Have you got those affidavits?

Answer. I have. There is but one affidavit to which two names are signed.

Question. Were the accounts allowed upon that affidavit?

Answer. No, sir, they were not, to my recollection. This affidavit was sent in January, but the accounts were not allowed until June. They were allowed upon the strength of the other letter.

(The accused desires the affidavit accompanying the letter of January 24, 1863, to be made part of Exhibit D, and the judge advocate assents.)

The court then adjourned until to-morrow, at ten o'clock a. m.

EDWARD W. HINKS,
Brigadier General U. S. Vols., President.
GARRICK MALLERY,
Lieut. Colonel and Judge Advocate.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Friday, July 29, 1864.

The court met at ten o'clock a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

Present: All the members of the court, the judge advocate, the accused, his counsel, and the reporters.

The record of yesterday was read and approved.

James J. Murphy was duly sworn by the judge advocate as reporter, in the presence of the accused.

The accused applied to the court to be permitted to introduce John A. Wells, esq., as additional counsel, which application was granted, and he appeared as additional counsel for the accused.

FREDERICK CHASE—Cross-examination continued by the accused.

Question. Had you any acquaintance with Major Hastings before the examination of these accounts?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Did you ever have any correspondence with him?

Answer. Not personally. I have written letters, signed by the Auditor, to him.

Question. Were you acquainted with his handwriting?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. How?

Answer. Having had charge of his accounts for quite a long period of time, having settled his accounts several times myself, and having had letters referred to me which he had written to the office.

Question. Were those accounts and letters in his handwriting?

Answer. A portion of them were.

Question. Were you sent to Carlisle for the purpose of examining into these charges against Major Hastings?

Answer. I was.

Question. Did you examine his office thoroughly?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Did you meet Major Hastings there at the time?

Answer. I did, sir.

Question. What facilities did he give you for the examination?

Answer. He gave us every facility which we requested.

Question. Did he show any disposition to withhold any information?

Answer. Not that I am aware of.

Question. Did he not express a desire that you should make a thorough and full examination, and expose the whole of these frauds ?

Answer. He did.

Question. Was there anybody associated with you in that examination ?

Answer. There was.

Question. Who was it ?

Answer. Henry E. Turner.

Question. Did you and Mr. Turner make a joint report ?

Answer. No, sir, we did not. We made separate reports.

Question. Why did you make separate reports ?

Answer. For the reason that at the time Mr. Turner was obliged to leave the city the matter had not been thoroughly investigated. Mr. Turner reported upon what we had already done ; and it was my province to report what was done afterwards.

Question. Did you take up the investigation where Mr. Turner left off, and look into it ?

Answer. I was associated with him throughout the entire investigation ; but I continued it beyond the point where he left off.

Question. Have you got a copy of your report ?

Answer. I have it not here.

Question. I should like to see that copy.

Answer. The report is in the hands of the War Department ; I have no control over it whatever. I should not feel authorized to produce it.

Question. Did I understand you to say that you and Mr. Turner made separate reports throughout, or that your reports were joint up to a certain period ?

Answer. Mr. Turner made a report before he left the city. I made a report after he left the city.

Question. You did not join in that report ?

Answer. I did not.

Question. You have testified that in your belief the names of Truman K. Snyder, George Saltzer, and William C. Copeland, in voucher No. 3, for August, 1863, are written by the same hand as the names that are written in the first column ?

Answer. That is the recollection I have.

Question. I wish to ask you whether, when you say that there is a striking similarity between the names, as written in the two columns, there is not also a striking dissimilarity ?

Answer. In the first place, I do not know that I said there was a striking similarity. There is both a striking similarity and a striking dissimilarity. There are peculiarities in the style in which both of them are written which lead me to believe they were written by the same person. That is the testimony which I gave. Still, the names are imitated so that there may be said to be a striking dissimilarity likewise.

Question. Take the name of George Sultzer, and state to the court, if you please, in what particulars you discover any similarity.

Answer. I discover a similarity in the peculiar method of forming certain letters in the name. There are certain characteristics in the handwriting of Major Hastings which are peculiar, very much so ; and those peculiarities are noticed, to my apprehension, in this name of George Sultzer, in the right-hand column.

Question. State what these peculiarities are.

Answer. A rather angular method of forming the letters, and the peculiarity that the slant of the letters is almost exactly the same in both columns in the voucher ; that is to say, the upright stroke of the l and t are almost precisely parallel with the upright strokes of other letters upon the same paper.

Question. State whether the same parallelism does not exist between the strokes in those names and those in the name of Orsey, written on the other side?

Answer. Very nearly. In saying "very nearly," I refer merely to the parallelism of the up strokes. I do not refer to the peculiar method of forming the letters.

Question. State whether the same parallelisms appear in the name of William Copeland?

Answer. Very nearly the same in my estimation. The p, however, is not parallel; the others are more nearly so; the formation of the letters l, o and p, in the name of William Copeland, is not as strikingly similar as the formation of the letters in the name of George Sultzer.

Question. You are testifying as an expert, I believe, in the examination of the handwritings in this case?

Answer. I am testifying as acquainted with Major Hastings's handwriting; and, to a certain extent, expert in the examination of signatures and of handwritings.

Question. How did you acquire your experience in that way?

Answer. In the pursuit of my duties at the Second Auditor's office.

Question. Have you often been engaged in inquiries of this kind?

Answer. Not before a court. We have frequent occasion to examine signatures and handwritings in the office.

Question. You said that a portion of Major Hastings's accounts and letters were in his handwriting; can you give a general statement of what proportion of these writings were in his hand?

Answer. The left-hand column of each voucher, throughout his accounts, in my recollection, is in his handwriting, with the exception of one voucher.

Question. These are not the only accounts?

Answer. These are not all that he has ever rendered. I cannot recollect in regard to those preceding these what proportion was in his handwriting.

Question. When you were at Carlisle barracks did you express any opinion in reference to the investigation you had made there?

Answer. I did.

Question. State what that was.

Answer. I expressed the opinion that in my estimation Major Hastings was guiltless, and that the fault would be found with another. That was the conclusion to which I had come from the examination which was made there. Subsequent examinations elsewhere in the department here satisfied me that my conclusions at Carlisle barracks were erroneous.

Question. In the examination of these transactions did you take the testimony or the statement of Mr. Orsey and Mr. Onion?

Answer. We took the statement of Mr. Onion, but not that of Mr. Orsey; and the statement of Mr. Onion was not taken at Carlisle barracks, but subsequently to that.

Question. Have you conversed with those witnesses recently on the subject?

Answer. No, sir, not very recently; I have passed a few words with Mr. Orsey.

Question. Have you not consulted them in making your investigations?

Answer. Not recently.

Question. At any time?

Answer. Not at all, with the exception of the single affidavit of Mr. Onion, which we took as I have mentioned.

Question. Do you know what were the regulations in the earlier part of Major or Captain Hastings's service at Carlisle barracks in reference to the disposition of these enlistment papers?

Answer. I do not know officially, except with reference to a single copy which was required to be sent by the recruiting officer to the Second Auditor's office.

Of the other copies which were made I know nothing except what I have casually observed in the regulations. I have nothing whatever to do with them.

Question. Do you not know that one copy was required to be kept at the recruiting depot by the recruiting officer?

Answer. I am not able to give testimony on that subject which I would be willing to have to go in as authority. If you will permit me to read from the regulations, I will do so with pleasure. I have nothing whatever to do with the other two copies of the enlistment. It is my belief, however, that one copy was supposed to be kept at the depot.

Question. Do you know whether the third copy was, or was not, at that time usually sent with the record to the regiment?

Answer. I do not; I have no means of knowing.

Question. Have you any means of knowing whether or not that course was pursued to the beginning of 1863, by the records that went to Major Hastings's depot?

Answer. I have no means of knowing. The affidavit which Major Hastings filed stated that the enlistments had passed out of his hands in pursuance of regulations. Where they had gone was not stated.

Question. Was there ever any requirement that the superintendent of the depot should send the enlistment papers to the Second Auditor's office?

Answer. There never was a requirement, to my knowledge, in the Army Regulations. There was a requirement made by the Second Auditor that, in case the recruiting officers did not comply with the Army Regulations in sending in this copy of enlistment, the superintendent should either compel them to do so, or do it himself, in order to verify the accounts of the bounty.

By the court:

Question. Is it the custom in the Second Auditor's office, in settling the accounts of disbursing officers of the bounty fund, to compare the signatures on the vouchers with the signatures on the enlistment papers, with a view of detecting irregularities?

Answer. It is. It is not done invariably; but if there is any suspicion, or anything is called in question, it is done with care, and with all the skill which can be brought to bear in the office.

Question. Has it been a portion of your duty to make such comparisons?

Answer. It has.

Question. Has it been the custom in the Auditor's office to furnish blank forms of vouchers for disbursing officers?

Answer. It has not. That duty is performed by the Adjutant General.

Question. Have those forms that are furnished by the Adjutant General's office been prescribed by the Auditor's office?

Answer. Not that I am aware of. They have been in use so long that my recollection does not extend that far.

LEVI DAVIS, a witness for the prosecution, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by the judge advocate.

Question. What is your occupation, and how long have you been so engaged?

Answer. My occupation is that of clerk in the office of the Adjutant General. I have been there since 1852 permanently, but was there two or three years previously, temporarily.

Question. What particular department of the office have you charge of?

Answer. I have charge of the rolls and enlistment of the regular army.

Question. Have you examined the names set forth in this list [exhibiting it to the witness] with reference to any enlistment or record of the enlistment of these men being in your office; and if so, what has been the result, and what has been the extent of your examination?

Answer. I made an examination of the men on that list from January, 1862, to about October, 1862, and failed to find their names upon the registry of enlistments. It is the custom of the office to enter every enlistment in a book prepared for that purpose alphabetically. The examination has been made in those cases, and we failed to find them.

Question. Did you examine up to a later period than October, 1862?

Answer. About that period was the latest of our examination. My understanding was that it was not necessary that the examination should extend beyond that period.

Question. Have you also examined the names on this list (exhibiting another list) with regard to any record found, in the inspection of men, with reference to death, transfer, desertion, or discharge? And state what you have done with reference to these.

Answer. That is the record of the men who were transferred, deserted, or died of the list presented to me in regard to their transfer from the depot, giving the date of their transfer, the date of desertion, and date of death.

Question. Do the records of your office show the facts as alleged here in your column of remarks?

[The accused admits the record referred to, to show as stated by the witness.]

Question. You will state what is the practice of the office and the custom in reference to the sending of enlistment papers from the recruiting officer or superintendent of recruiting to the Adjutant General's office.

Answer. The custom is for the superintendent to send a monthly account of the recruiting officer, with the enlistments, for the Second Auditor. They are transmitted from our office to the Second Auditor. We also receive from the superintendent a copy for the files of the office, the superintendent retaining a copy, the enlistments being made in triplicate.

Question. You have, then, regularly, an enlistment paper for every recruit?

Answer. Yes, sir; we should.

Cross-examination by the accused.

Question. I should like to know whether you can say that the absence of these papers in the Adjutant General's office is or is not conclusive proof that the men have not been enlisted?

Answer. I think not. I think they are not conclusive proof that the men have not been enlisted, from the fact that sometimes enlistments fail to reach our office, more particularly when they are made regimentally, and by officers at remote stations. As a general thing, where men are enlisted for either of the services, the mounted or general service, by regular recruiting officers at regular rendezvous, we regard the enlistments as almost certain to be received. I understand these enlistments were made by regular recruiting officers for the mounted service. This is only presumption that they were not made.

The court then adjourned until to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock.

EDWARD W. HINKS,

Brigadier General U. S. Vols., President.

GARRICK MALLERY,

Lieutenant Colonel and Judge Advocate.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Saturday, July 30, 1864.

The court met at ten o'clock a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

Present: All the members of the court, the judge advocate, the accused, his counsel, and the reporters.

The record of yesterday was read and approved.

Henry Orsay, a witness for the prosecution, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by the judge advocate.

Question. You will state your position in the service.

Answer. Corporal of the mounted service, cavalry depot, Carlisle barracks.

Question. Have you been detailed on any special duties at Carlisle barracks?

Answer. I was superintendent's clerk and adjutant's clerk also.

Question. When were you first detailed as a clerk?

Answer. I was detailed some time in 1862; I do not exactly remember the date; I think it was about the month of June; it was in the adjutant's office, as junior clerk.

Question. At what time did any change commence in your duties from that position as clerk in the adjutant's office, and what was it?

Answer. I took charge of the adjutant's office and acted as superintendent's clerk when the former clerk, who was Mr. Onion, sergeant major, left the post and was detailed to do duty here in the Adjutant General's office.

Question. What time was that?

Answer. It was in April, 1863.

Question. You will state the nature of your duties in that capacity; what you did take charge of; and how you were employed.

Answer. As clerk in charge of the adjutant's office, I had the superintendence of all the post returns, the monthly papers, the enlistments made at the post—in fact, all the work that was performed at the post; and as superintendent's clerk, I had charge of all papers pertaining to the mounted recruiting service, such as keeping the records of the superintendent, keeping his papers, making out his accounts at the end of the month, and every other duty, in fact, pertaining to the recruiting for the mounted service.

Question. How long did that continue?

Answer. That continued from April, 1863, until the 16th of February, 1864.

Question. When you have stated in your foregoing testimony that the records and descriptive books show a recruit to have been transferred to the mounted service of the United States army, with the date in connexion with it, were those recruits sent at the time of that date away from the barracks?

Answer. In the case of these recruits for the mounted regiments of the United States army, I think the recruits remained a few days, because there were a great many of them. I am not positive about the number. I know there was a great number, and they could not send them off as soon as they were organized. It took a few days before they could send them off.

Question. When you have stated that the men were transferred to a particular company or regiment, or recruited by an officer for a company or regiment, in your examination, what became of those men?

Answer. They remained at the post as long as the company was not fully organized.

Question. Was there any general period of time for their remaining for that purpose that you are aware of?

Answer No, sir; there was no general period. Just as soon as they were organized, and the number completed, they were sent off to the field.

Question. How long a time did that generally take for a company?

Answer. It all depended on the energy of the recruiting officer.

Question. Can you give any general rule on that subject as to what your observation was?

Answer. No, sir; one officer might recruit his whole company in a week, and others it might take months for the same purpose. It all depended on the energy of the officer and the place where he was recruiting.

Question. Can you give any particular time at which any of these men who were transferred to companies or regiments did actually leave?

Answer. No, sir, I cannot; I do not remember.

Question. Without any special question from me, state what was, from the time you began your duties that you have stated in connexion with the superintendent, Major Hastings, the custom of paying bounties to recruits, the manner in which it was done, the receipts taken, and vouchers and accounts, respectively, made up.

Answer. When recruits came to the post they were examined the next morning by the surgeon. Immediately after the recruits had passed the examination required by the regulations, they were sent into the adjutant's office to be paid their bounty. I would go to Major Hastings, who would give me the bounty receipt rolls and count the money for the number of recruits that had been examined. If there were, for instance, ten recruits, he would give me $250. I would bring the bounty vouchers in to the adjutant's office and see that every recruit that was entitled to his $25 bounty signed his name. In case he could not sign it, I signed it for him and made him make a cross, or got another clerk to do it. Then I paid the $25 to each recruit and sent them to their quarters. Immediately after that I took the bounty receipt rolls, together with the enlistments that were brought from the recruiting stations with the recruits, and on which I paid those recruits, to Major Hastings, who kept them under lock and key until the next batch of recruits would come. That was all I saw of the bounty receipt rolls when the recruits were paid. Between one batch of recruits and the other I never saw them. At the end of the month, when all the superintendent's papers were all ready and signed by Major Hastings, as superintendent, he would give me the bounty receipt rolls to witness. After witnessing them I would indorse them and go and tell Major Hastings that the papers were all ready. Then he would give me the enlistments that he had in his possession that would support the vouchers of bounties, and he would tell me to make up the parcels. They were generally tied up, and I was not allowed to look inside of them, nor examine anything. I made up the parcels and mailed them. I will remark that in the space of time between which the two batches of recruits were paid, I did not see what was going on in the major's office. If there were any names that were put on the rolls, I was not aware of it, because I was always present when any payments were made, and I was very particular to see that the signature of the recruits was according to the enlistments they had brought with them.

Question. You say that you always signed as a witness at the end of the month; was that all at one time?

Answer. All at one time at the end of a month.

Question. Did you ever sign as witness at the time of the payment of the money?

Answer. Never.

Question. Were these accounts always certified to by Major Hastings before they were witnessed by you?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Did you have any rule, when a recruit made a mark, of having that signature taken? I mean, was it only a mark, or did you habitually write anything yourself in addition to the name?

Answer. When I signed for a recruit and made his mark, I generally wrote "his mark" over and under the cross.

Question. Did you always do so; or if at any time you did not, why not?

Answer. I always did so. It was the invariable custom with me.

Question. Was that the case with the clerk that, you say, in some cases you directed to make a mark, do you know?

Answer. As far as I remember I always made him do so.

Question. Were there any enlistment papers for the year 1862, for the third and fourth quarters, in your possession at any time; and if so, when, and what became of them?

Answer. There were some enlistments of 1862 in my possession; at least, in the adjutant's office, at Carlisle barracks. In the month of November, 1863, I think, Major Hastings came and asked me if there were any enlistments of 1862 in the office? I told him there were some, and gave him a parcel that had been put away in the cupboard of records. That is the last I have seen of the enlistments.

Question. When did you first see that bundle of enlistments that you speak of?

Answer. The bundle of enlistments was made when we returned from Harrisburg, during the rebel invasion of Pennsylvania.

Question. Was that the first time you saw the bundle?

Answer. It was not the first time I saw the bundle, because the enlistments had been put in a box and sealed with some other records of the post.

Question. Answer the question. When was the first time you recollect having seen the papers?

Answer. I suppose I saw them when I put them in the box for the first time.

Question. At what time was that?

Answer. That was about the 15th of June, 1863.

Question. You put them in the box for what purpose?

Answer. To save all the records that might be necessary for the post in the future, at the time of the rebel invasion.

Question. You were going on to say when you next saw them. At what time was that?

Answer. I again saw them some time in July, when we returned from Harrisburg and re-took possession of the post.

Question. Did you take them out of the box?

Answer. I took them out of the box, assorted them, put them in a parcel, labelled them, and put them away with the records.

Question. Did you have anything to do with them after the time you took them out of the box and put them away, up to the time Major Hastings, as you say, asked for them?

Answer. No, sir; I had nothing to do with them. I never had occasion to use them, or see them, or anything else.

Question. You did not see them nor make use of them?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Did you ever see them before they were put in a bundle in the box, as you have stated; and if so, where were they, in whose custody, and in what condition?

Answer. Before they were put in a box to be saved they were in a cupboard in which all the records were kept under my custody. I then saved all the records of the past two years, they being the most recent. There were some very old records, some books fifteen and twenty years old, and some enlistments of the same age, which were all left at the post and destroyed by the fire. These enlistments were probably in the cupboard of records from which I saved them; they were in the pigeon-holes assigned to them as recent enlistments. I do not see why they should have been kept in any one particular place more than another, only because they were recent enlistments, and naturally I took all the records of the past two years. They were nearly all together. When the enlistments and records became too old they were carried into another cupboard in Major Hastings's office and left there.

Question. Were those enlistments of which you have spoken as afterwards composing the bundle kept under lock, or were they accessible?

Answer. They were accessible to everybody, at least to the clerks of the office. Strangers were not allowed there. The clerks of the office could go to the cupboard.

Question. Were they accessible to officers also?

Answer. To the officers also.

Question. Are you able to state how many men were paid bounties in the month of January, 1864?

Answer. There were between twenty and twenty-five.

The witness stated that he desired to correct his answer to the following question: "Did you always do so; or if at any time you did not, why not?" referring to the previous answer of the witness, "When I signed for a recruit, and made his mark, I generally wrote 'his mark' over and under the cross;" to which question the answer was, "I always did so; it was the invariable custom with me." The witness added these words: It was the invariable custom with me to put the words "his mark" until Major Hastings ordered me not to do so any more, in the month of December, 1863, on account, as he said, of its blurring the bounty receipt rolls too much. Therefore, after that I did not put down the words "his mark" any more. I am not very sure, but I think it was after the vouchers of December, 1863, were signed that he did so.

Question. Are you familiar with the handwriting of the accused, Major Hastings?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Have you seen him write?

Answer. Yes, sir, very often.

Question. Turn to the voucher for the third quarter of 1862, No. 10, item 55, the name of William K. Rodgers; look at the receipt on the right-hand column accompanying it, and give any testimony you may have with regard to that.

Answer. It looks very much like Major Hastings's writing.

Question. I ask your opinion as to whether that was written by Major Hastings?

Answer. I believe it was written by Major Hastings.

Question. Turn to the voucher 12 for the fourth quarter of 1862, item 83, the name of Patrick Dwyer; look at the signature in the right-hand column, and state what, if anything, you have to say with regard to that?

Answer. The writing in my opinion resembles Major Hastings's; and I will make another remark, that in any of those signatures in which the handwriting of Major Hastings appears there is a cross simply, without the words "his mark" opposite.

Question. That is the case through the whole vouchers?

Answer. Through the whole vouchers.

Question. Have you examined these vouchers recently?

Answer. In all those I have examined I have remarked that.

Question. During the time of your being in the office was it, to your knowledge, ever the case, and if so, how often, that Major Hastings took the signature of a recruit himself or made a mark for him, at the time they were paid?

Answer. I do not remember that Major Hastings ever made a payment while

I was in charge of the office, or took the signature of any man, or paid any man himself, and consequently he could not have made a mark.

Question. You say this resembles the signature of Major Hastings; have you any stronger opinion with reference to that, or any opinion about who wrote the item in the right-hand column?

Answer. By the formation of the letters I think it is Major Hastings's writing.

(The counsel for the accused object to the method pursued by the judge advocate of proving the forgeries alleged to have been committed by the accused, and request to be allowed to present their points, and all the authorities in support of them, at the next meeting of the court.)

At the request of the judge advocate, for the purpose of allowing time to have the authorities on the question prepared, the court adjourned, to meet on Tuesday morning next, at ten o'clock.

EDW'D W. HINKS,

Brigadier General U. S. Vols., President.

GARRICK MALLERY,

Lieutenant Colonel and Judge Advocate.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Tuesday, August 2, 1864.

The court met at 10 o'clock a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

Present: All the members of the court, the judge advocate, the accused, his counsel, and the reporters.

The record of Saturday was read and approved.

John A. Wills, esq., one of the counsel for the accused, stated, that after consultation with his associate (Hon. F. P. Stanton) they had concluded to withdraw their objection to the method pursued by the judge advocate of proving the forgeries alleged to have been committed by the accused; not that they were not fully satisfied of the soundness of the position they had taken, but it would involve a series of distinctions and protracted inquiries that would be profitless to the court and themselves. For that reason they would withdraw the objection and allow the judge advocate to proceed in his own way.

The judge advocate said it depended entirely upon the court whether, in their own consciences, they thought it proper to inquire into the law of the matter independent of any waiver, for any purpose, of the accused or his counsel. He was prepared with any argument on the subject, and had the authorities on the question. It was for the court to decide whether they would go on with any examination at all.

Mr. Wills stated that the counsel for the accused found that the points on which they would rely would necessarily be involved in their final defence, and it would be going over the ground twice, in some degree. Instead of protracting, they wanted to shorten this inquiry.

The judge advocate thought the course proposed to be pursued by the counsel for the accused an incorrect one, if it was to be relied upon as a matter of defence. It would be worthless and undesirable to admit a mass of testimony for the mere purpose afterwards of making an argument that that evidence was good for nothing, and should not have been admitted. If there was any doubt as to whether the evidence was admissible, now was the time to object to it before the record was encumbered with a vast mass of it; and if there was any doubt in the minds of members of the court on the subject, he supposed they would desire to inform their own consciences upon it. Under the circumstances he would not desire to make any argument, but simply give a recapitulation of the authorities on the question.

Hon. F. P. Stanton, one of the counsel for the accused, said that in this matter the accused himself had been particularly desirous from the beginning that no technical objections of any kind should be raised; he had waived them throughout, and his own judgment, on mature reflection, concurred with that of the accused in that particular. The accused desired the court to make the fullest examination, and he would regret, as would his counsel also, that the investigation should be hampered in any way by technical rules. They desired to get at the truth of the whole case.

The judge advocate stated that at the request of the court he had felt bound to prepare his views on the law of the subject, but it was not essential, of course, that he should force them upon the court, the objection to the evidence being withdrawn.

The court was then cleared for the purpose of considering the question. The court was again opened, and the court requested the judge advocate to present them with the authorities not only upon the point of law involved in the objection which had been raised and withdrawn, but upon the law generally applying to such evidence as had been offered or was proposed to be offered by him in the future, with the privilege to the accused by his counsel, to argue in reply.

In response to the request of the court, the judge advocate gave his views on the law applying to the evidence so far given before the court, and proposed to be in future produced by him, citing, in the course of his arguments, Greenleaf on Evidence, page 96; also same volume, page 99; also page 102; 1 Greenleaf, page 714; also 2 Wharton's American Criminal Law, sections 1304, 1428, 1462, 1466; also 1 Wharton, section 865; also 2 Russell on Crimes, page 393.

Both of the counsel for the accused followed in argument, citing 2 Phillips, pages 602, 609, and 611; also 7 Wright, page 17; 3 Archbold's Criminal Practice and Pleading; Waterman's Notes, pages 536, 537, &c.

After further argument by the judge advocate, the court was cleared for deliberation.

The court was again opened and the judge advocate announced the ruling of the court as follows: The court is of opinion that the evidence of experts not acquainted with the handwriting of the party whose signature is alleged to have been forged, or a comparison of handwriting other than with the handwriting of the person whose signature is alleged to have been forged, is not admissible to prove a forgery to have been committed, or to disprove an alleged signature. The court will, however, with or without the aid of experts, compare handwriting with that of the accused, both being already in the case, not for the purpose of finding whether a forgery has been committed, but to find who committed it. The court will attach very slight importance to the aid of experts in this matter.

The court adjourned until to-morrow at ten o'clock.

EDWARD W. HINKS,

Brigadier General U. S. Vols, President.

GARRICK MALLERY,

Lieutenant Colonel and Judge Advocate.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Wednesday, August 3, 1864.

The court met at ten o'clock a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

Present: All the members of the court, the accused, his counsel, and the reporters.

The following letter from the judge advocate was received and read:

AUGUST 3, 1864.

GENERAL: I find that I cannot make any physical exertion to-day, severe derangement of the bowels requiring repose, as I am advised, to prevent a more serious result. I am, therefore, compelled to request an adjournment of the court until to-morrow.

Respectfully,

GARRICK MALLERY,
Lieutenant Colonel and Judge Advocate.

Brigadier General HINKS,
President of Court Martial.

Whereupon, to-morrow being the day appointed by the President of the United States as a day of national humiliation and prayer, the court adjourned until Friday morning at ten o'clock.

EDWARD W. HINKS,
Brigadier General U. S. Vols., President.
GARRICK MALLERY,
Lieutenant Colonel and Judge Advocate.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Friday, August 5, 1864.

The court met at ten o'clock a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

Present: All the members of the court, the judge advocate, the accused, his counsel; and the reporters.

The record of Tuesday and Wednesday was read and approved.

The judge advocate desired to record his opinion that the part of the ruling of the court which would shut out any comparison of the handwriting of the accused with the alleged signatures purporting to be receipts, for the purpose of proving a forgery, would, in many cases, be too strict. He believes that under an offer to show, by witnesses familiar with the handwriting of the accused, a number of cases in which, by comparison of his admitted handwriting with the alleged signatures of recruits, (so many as to constitute an apparent system,) that, in their opinion, the accused did himself write the alleged receipts, and before a court martial, such would be good and independent evidence to show affirmatively that such signatures were forgeries, even when there was no evidence to show that the alleged signature was not the genuine signature of the recruit. But as there will be few, if any, instances in this case where such evidence as the ruling seems to exclude, which are not aided by other evidence tending to prove forgery, and as such evidence is admitted to prove who committed the forgery, proved aliunde to have been committed, the decision is unimportant in this case, and the judge advocate will not further argue the point.

The court was cleared for the purpose of deliberation.

The court opened, and the judge advocate announced, as the decision of the court, that the protest was allowed to be placed upon the record.

HENRY ORSAY—Examination continued by the judge advocate.

The witness stated that he desired to make a correction to his answer to the following question on Saturday last: "Turn to voucher 12, for the fourth quarter of 1862, item 83, the name of Patrick Dwyer; look at the signature in the right-hand column, and state what, if anything, you have to say with regard to that." To which the answer was, "The writing, in my opinion, resembles Major Hastings's; and I will make another remark: that in any of those signatures in which the handwriting of Major Hastings appears, there is a simple cross, without the words 'his mark' opposite."

Question. What do you mean by that?

Answer. I mean to say that in cases where there is a mark made, and the handwriting appears to be that of Major Hastings, he has not put the words "his mark" opposite over the cross. If there are any other signatures which resemble Major Hastings's writing, without any cross, I did not mention those at all in that answer; I had no reference whatever to them.

Question. Turn to the name of Patrick Dwyer, item 83, voucher 12, fourth quarter of 1862, again, and say if that is a case of a mark or not?

Answer. There is a mark—a cross.

Question. State who, in your opinion, wrote the name in the right-hand column?

Answer. In my opinion, Major Hastings wrote this name.

Question. Turn to the name of John Rogers, item 91, same page, same voucher.

Answer. That is signed with a mark.

Question. Have you anything to say with regard to that? Who, in your opinion, wrote the name in the right-hand column?

Answer. In my opinion, this name was written by Major Hastings.

Question. Turn to the name of George B. Gardiner, item 75, same page, same voucher.

Answer. That is signed with a mark also; in my opinion, it is Major Hastings's writing.

(Voucher exhibited to the court and examined.)

Question. Turn to the name of George Shoemaker, item 50, voucher 3, for May, 1863, and state whether that is a receipt by mark.

Answer. Yes, sir; it is a mark.

Question. Who, in your opinion, wrote that name?

Answer. In my opinion, Major Hastings wrote it.

Question. Turn to the name of Louis Goodsale, item 59, same page, same voucher, and give your opinion in regard to that?

Answer. That is signed with a mark also; and I am of the opinion that Major Hastings wrote it.

Question. Can you swear whether or not you signed as a witness, or were witness to the payment of Louis Goodsale?

Answer. I do not believe I witnessed the payment, because if I had witnessed the payment I would have written the name myself, if he had not been able to sign his name, as in this case of Goodsale, which shows he was unable to sign his name; therefore, if he had been paid by myself, I would have signed for him—or one of the clerks.

Question. What is the truth, in that respect, with reference to George Shoemaker?

Answer. I make the same answer with regard to George Shoemaker; if I had paid him, either myself or the clerk would have made his mark.

Question. Turn to the name of George R. Bird, item 147, voucher number 2, for July, 1863, and also all the names on that page, which are signed by mark in the right-hand column, and state, in each case, who wrote the name, in your opinion?

Answer. The name of George R. Bird is signed with a cross; I believe it is Major Hastings's writing. James C. Rogers, item 149, is signed with a cross; I believe it is Major Hastings's writing. John Shroup, item 150, is signed with a cross; I believe it is Major Hastings's writing. Michael Tracey, item 152, is signed with a cross; I believe it is Major Hastings's writing. David D. Best, item 153, is signed with a cross; I believe it is Major Hastings's writing. Charles Crane, item 159, is signed with a cross; I believe it is Major Hastings's writing. Munson S. Acker, item 155, is signed with a cross; I believe it is Major Hastings's writing. Finley Cameron, item 156, is signed with a cross; I believe it is Major Hastings's writing. John Carn, item 158, is signed with a cross; I believe it is Major Hastings's writing. George Fontery, item 160, is signed with a cross; I believe it is Major Hastings's writing.

Question. Can you swear whether or not you witnessed the payment of men as accepted?

Answer. I witnessed the voucher, but I do not believe I witnessed the payments. If they were really paid, I did not witness them.

Question. Did you witness the making of the mark, or not?

Answer. No, sir; I did not witness the making of the mark.

(Voucher exhibited to the court and examined.)

Question. Turn to the name of Robert Cunningham, item 36, voucher number 3, for August, 1863; is that signed with a mark?

Answer. It is signed with a mark. I believe it is Major Hastings's writing.

Question. Turn to the name of Patrick Garrity, item 126, same voucher.

Answer. That is signed with a mark. I believe it is Major Hastings's writing.

Question. Turn to the name of Charles Jones, item 150, same voucher.

Answer. That is signed with a mark. I believe it is Major Hastings's writing.

Question. I will ask the same question in regard to these names that I did with reference to the others, whether you were witness to the payment of these parties, as the receipt shows?

Answer. I do not believe that I was a witness to the payment, because if I had been, either myself or one of my clerks would have made the marks and written the name.

Question. Were you witness to the making of the mark?

Answer. I did not witness the mark.

Question. Are you positive on that subject?

Answer. Yes, sir; I am positive.

Question. Can you give any additional reason for being positive on that subject?

Answer. I have already said that whenever there were any men who did not know how to write, it was myself, when I made the payments, who wrote their names, or one of the clerks. Consequently, if not myself, it must have been Major Hastings, or somebody else, when the vouchers were out of the office.

The witness called the attention of the court, of his own option, to two other names, the names of Bryant H. Jenks and Rosewell Jackson, items 145 and 152, same voucher, and said he would make the same remark in regard to them; they were signed with a cross, and the writing was done by Major Hastings.

Question. Have you anything to say with reference to the witnessing of those names?

Answer. I will make the same answer that I did just now in regard to the other names.

(Voucher exhibited to the court and examined.)

Question. Turn to the name of Dennis Ryan, item 66, voucher number 4, for September, 1863.

Answer. It is signed with a cross, and I believe it is Major Hastings's writing.

Question. Turn to the name of Scranton Brannon, item 108, same voucher.

Answer. That is signed with a cross, and I believe it is Major Hastings's writing.

Question. Turn to the name of Robert McRikel, item 102, same voucher.

Answer. That is signed with a cross. I believe it is Major Hastings's writing.

Question. Did you witness the payments, or the marks, or either, in these cases?

Answer. No, sir; I will make the same answer with reference to them as I did before in regard to the other cases.

(Voucher exhibited to the court and examined.)

Question. Turn to the name of John Murphy, item 99, voucher number 3, for October, 1863.

Answer. That is signed with a cross. I believe it is Major Hastings's writing.

Question. Turn to the name of Edward Dill, item 113, same voucher.

Answer. That is signed with a cross. I believe it is Major Hastings's writing.

Question. Did you witness the payment or the mark in either of these cases?

Answer. No, sir; I will make the same answer with regard to them as I did with reference to the others.

(Voucher exhibited to the court and examined.)

Question. Turn to the name of Jesse Riggle, item 32, voucher number 3, for November, 1863.

Answer. That is signed with a cross, and I believe it is Major Hastings's writing.

Question. Turn to the name of Richard Douglass, item 72, same voucher.

Answer. That is signed with a cross. I believe it is Major Hastings's writing.

Question. Did you witness the payment or the mark, in either of these cases?

Answer. I did not witness the payment nor the making of the cross in these several cases, because if I had done so it would have been in the handwriting of the clerk or my own, and with a cross made in the usual way that I make it, with the words "his mark."

(Voucher exhibited to the court and examined.)

Question. Turn to the name of John Cannon, item 138, voucher number 3, for December, 1863.

Answer. That is signed with a cross, and I believe it to be Major Hastings's writing.

Answer. That is signed with a cross. I believe it to be Major Hastings's writing.

Question. Did you witness the payment or the mark in either of these cases?

Answer. No, sir; I did not witness the payment or the mark in either of these cases.

(Vouchers exhibited to the court and examined.)

Question. Turn to the name of Frederick Shafer, item 193, voucher number 7, for January, 1864.

Answer. That is signed with a cross. I believe it to be Major Hastings's writing.

Question. Did you witness the payment or the receipt, or the making of the mark in that case?

Answer. I did not witness the payment nor the making of the mark in that case. I will say that in this voucher I can name exactly the men that I witnessed the payment of, and those that I have not. I have witnessed the following payments: Robert Walsh, item 1; William Leonard, item 2; Charles Holman, item 3; David Collins, item 4; John W. Bowers, item 5; John Goetz, item 6; John Spotberg, item 7; John K. Collins, item 8; John Birds, item 9; Richard B. Baker, item 10; James Coleman, item 69; Liberty Hess, item 70; Robert English, item 71; Joseph Freizer, item 72; Edward Jackson, item 73; James Clancy, item 74; Michael Hickey, item 75; Stephen DeWitt Beekman, item 76; John Sutter, item 77; Eli W. Smith, item 78; Noah Downey, item 79; Edward Kane, item 80; Charles Seabold, item 81; Adam Maize, item 82; Edward F. Myers, item 83; Thomas Carmichael, item 84; Benjamin Williams, item 85. Those are all the payments that I witnessed in the month of January, 1864.

Question. What is the number of those payments to which you have testified that you witnessed?

Answer. I find there are 27, since I looked over the vouchers. The other day in my testimony I said there were between 20 and 25 arrivals at the post, and they were the men that I paid. I stated that number to the best of my knowledge. I had not then looked over the records or anything else. I simply said so from my recollection of the number of recruits that had come in from the different recruiting stations. There were two or three detachments that came in then.

Question. What is your reason, if you have any, for distinguishing these cases from the others in the voucher?

Answer. The reason is this: In some cases there are some men who do not know how to write their names. In such cases we got either the clerk or myself to write their names; and there generally being a certain number of men, sometimes ten and sometimes twelve and sometimes smaller detachments, the signatures look genuine, they being mixed up with those that do not sign their names. Therefore I can sometimes find out where they are real signatures and where they are false. For instance, in this case, here are two or three detachments that come in, and I perceive they were paid on two different dates. The signatures of the detachments are all put together. Between the first detachment and the second detachment there is quite a number of names that resemble Major Hastings's writing in some cases; some others where he has made a mark, and some others where I cannot say who signed them. But then, as I said just now, between this first detachment and the second, I can distinguish by the difference in the writing. From number 1 to number 10 in this voucher I perceive they are all genuine signatures. From number 11 to number 68, inclusive, I perceive that there are a great many signatures that resemble Major Hastings's writing; and, moreover, that they are the names of men whom I did not see at the post in that month. From number 69 to number 85, inclusive, are genuine signatures, because they are mixed up with some names to which I added the cross myself, when I witnessed the payment; and some other names which, by the style of writing, I believe to be genuine. From number 86 to number 248 I believe to be fraudulent signatures, for the same reason that I stated just now—that the writing resembles Major Hastings's and that the names were put in this voucher when the vouchers were out of my possession.

Question. I will ask you a general question with regard to a list of names which I will read, and as I read each one you will state whether that is a genuine payment or not; and if you have any special reason to give to that name, give it, in addition to what you have said with regard to the whole; anything relating to your knowledge of the individual whose name is signed or the special peculiarity of the handwriting or mark, or anything else that is in your recollection or observation. The first name is Henry Warren.

Answer. The name of Henry Warren is not on this voucher.

Question. Christopher Mead?

Answer. The name is on the voucher; but I do not think he was paid in January, 1864, because there was no man of that name at the post.

Question. How do you know he was not at the post? From your own knowledge?

Answer. From my own knowledge.

Question. Have you also examined the descriptive book which is in evidence with reference to that?

Answer. Yes, sir; and from the descriptive book also.

Question. Gershom C. Hires?

Answer. I will make the same remark with regard to him as with reference to Christopher Mead.

Question. Michael Shea?

Answer. His name is on the voucher. I do not think he was paid in January, 1864, for the same reason that I have given in the case of Christopher Mead, because he was not at the post.

Question. In those cases, in addition to my question or in explanation of my question, give a full answer, if you have any further answer to give with regard to who wrote the name. If that is one of the reasons, state that.

Answer. I have nothing more to say with reference to that. I do not know the writing.

Question. The next name is George Lynch.

Answer. I did not witness his signature. It is signed with a cross, and I believe Major Hastings to have written it. George Lynch was not at the post at the time this payment was made.

Question. Have you examined the descriptive book to see whether he was there?

Answer. I have examined the descriptive book to see whether he was there, and he was not.

Question. Theodore Long?

Answer. It is Thaddeus Long in the voucher. I know this man was not paid at the post, but I do not recognize the signature; at least I do not recognize who signed this name. In examining the books I found he was not at the post when the payment is alleged to have been made.

Question. Horace Bartram?

Answer. It is Horace C. Bartram in the voucher. I did not witness the payment of this man. According to the records, he was not at the post when the payment is alleged to have been made. I do not recognize the writing of his signature.

Question. James Doonan?

Answer. I did not witness this payment. The man was not at the post when payment is alleged to have been made. I do not recognize the writing.

Question. George H. A. Ball?

Answer. This man was not at the post when the payment is alleged to have been made. I did not witness the payment. I do not recognize the handwriting of the signature.

Question. George W. Durand?

Answer. This man was not at the post when the payment is alleged to have been made. I do not recognize the handwriting in the signature. I did not witness the payment.

Question. I will read these names, and you will to them simply answer whether they are on that voucher or not.

Question. With regard to the names just given, did you witness any of these names?

Answer. No, sir, I did not.

Question. Or the payment in any of these cases?

Answer. I did not witness the payment in any of these cases.

Question. Were any of these men at the barracks in the month of January, 1864?

Answer. I do not think there were any. There might perhaps be two or three. I mean to say there was none of those men at the post that might have been paid their bounty there. There might have been some of those men at the post at that particular time, having reported either from the field as invalids, or as convalescents; but they were not there in a position to receive any bounty.

Question. Have you any recollection, from your own knowledge, when you say that, independent of anything else?

Answer. No, sir. I have not in any particular case, because there are some of those men whom I did not know. In fact there are none of them that I know personally, and they might have been at the post then, having reported from the field, without my knowledge.

Question. Have you examined the descriptive book to ascertain whether those men were at the post at that time?

Answer. I have examined the descriptive book, and found none of those names in the descriptive book for the month of January, 1864.

Question. At what time in the month of January did the payment of bounties stop?

Answer. I do not exactly know the date of the order stopping the bounty. The court then adjourned until to-morrow morning, at ten o'clock.

EDWARD W. HINKS,

Brigadier General U. S. Vols., President.

GARRICK MALLERY,

Lieutenant Colonel and Judge Advocate.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Saturday, August 6, 1864.

The court met at ten o'clock a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

Present : All the members of the court, the judge advocate, the accused, his counsel, and the reporters.

The record of yesterday was read and approved.

HENRY ORSAY'S examination continued by the judge advocate.

Question. Have you anything to say with reference to any of the names on the voucher for the month of January, 1864, besides the general testimony you have given with reference to the whole list ?

Answer. Yes, sir ; there is here the name of Joseph A. Billow ; he was a bugler, and I remember that he was sent to a regiment some time in July, 1863 ; he enlisted, I think, in 1862 ; I do not know whether he received any bounty. At any rate his name here is marked with a cross, and it is not his writing.

Question. With reference to that, do you know whether he could write ?

Answer. I do not know whether he could write or not. There is a cross here ; I believe it to be Major Hastings's writing. Milton S. Billow is a brother of Joseph A. Billow, and he was discharged for disability some time in 1863 ; I do not remember the date ; I think it was in the spring. This name is also marked with a cross, and I believe it to be Major Hastings's writing. The name of John Bauer, item 131, is not his writing at all ; it is not his signature.

Question. Do you know his signature ?

Answer. I know his signature ; I have seen him write often.

Question. Do you know who, in your opinion, wrote that name ?

Answer. I do not know who wrote it ; I have no more remarks to make in regard to this voucher.

Question. Turn to voucher number 12, for the fourth quarter of 1862, item 57, the name of Frank Ludwig, and state what testimony you have to give with reference to that name.

Answer. I never saw the signature of this man, but I am under the impression that Major Hastings wrote it, by the similarity of writing. I will make the remark that I am acquainted with Major Hastings's writing in his different styles, both when he took pains with his writing, and when he wrote rough copies for letters or anything else. I have seen it so very often that I can distinguish his two styles of writing.

Question. Turn to the name of Joseph Leroy, item 62, same voucher.

Answer. I believe this is Major Hastings's writing also, from similarity. I do not know this man's signature.

Question. Turn to the name of Andrew Lind, item 65, same voucher.

Answer. I cannot distinguish anything here.

Question. Turn to the name of Patrick Kane, item 69, same voucher.

Answer. I cannot distinguish anything here either.

Answer. I believe this to be Major Hastings's writing, though I do not know the signature of the man.

(Voucher exhibited to the court and examined.)

Question. Turn to the voucher for May, 1863, item 26, the name of John W. Payne, and give your testimony in regard to that name, if you have any ?

Answer. I believe this to be Major Hastings's writing, but I do not know the man's signature. It is from the resemblance to Major Hastings's writing that I testify to ; I do not believe that I witnessed this payment or the receipt.

Question. Is your name attached as a witness to all the alleged receipts on this voucher for the month of May, 1863 ?

Answer. Yes, sir ; my name is attached as a witness to all the names on this voucher.

Answer. I am positive that I did not witness the payment or these receipts for Henry Eldridge and Alexander Hamilton.

Answer. I do not know anything in that case.

(Voucher exhibited to the court and examined.)

Question. Turn to the voucher of July, 1863, item 77, the name of William La Count.

Answer. I am certain that I did not witness this payment or this receipt. The name is signed with a mark, and I believe it to be Major Hastings's writing.

Answer. I do not know anything about this signature.

Question. Turn to the name of Adam Ziegler, item 141, same voucher.

Question. Turn to the name of William F. Thornton, item 146, same voucher.

Answer. I think I have testified to this name before; I testified to all the names on this page. The name of William F. Thornton I believe to be in Major Hastings's writing; in fact, I am positive of that. In such a case as that, I did not witness the payment or the receipt. In this case I am positive that I did not witness the payment on account of there being a cross made, and the writing is by Major Hastings.

Question. Turn to the name of Michael Tracey, item 152, same voucher.

Answer. I am positive that I did not witness this payment or the receipt in this case of Michael Tracey, because it is signed with a cross, and the writing is Major Hastings's.

Question. Turn to the name of Munson S. Acker, item 155, same voucher.

Answer. In this case I did not witness the payment nor the signature, because it is Major Hastings's writing, and it is signed with a cross.

Question. Turn to the name of George Fontary, item 160, same voucher.

Answer. In this case of George Fontary I did not witness the signature nor the payment. The name is signed by Major Hastings, and with a cross.

(Voucher exhibited to the court and examined.)

Answer. I have not witnessed the signature or the payment of Sidney Palmer. The writing is that of Major Hastings. It is also signed by a cross.

Turn to the name of Charles C. Doe, item 29, same voucher.

Answer. I did not witness the signature nor the payment in this case. The writing is that of Major Hastings, and it is signed by a cross also.

Question. Turn to the name of Roland Fisher, item 31, same voucher.

Answer. In the case of Roland Fisher, as in that of William O. Coons, I do not know anything, but I would make this remark: I do not remember the men's signatures, not having seen them, but the writing very much resembles Major Hastings's, and at the same time, they being counterfeits most probably, it is more difficult for me to distinguish between them and those which are signed with a cross. Those that are signed with a cross generally are in Major Hastings's quick handwriting, and he took no pains with them, but in such a case as Coons and Fisher the signature is probably forged; but still there are only some letters which I can distinguish and compare to those of Major Hastings. In the case of Roland Fisher, I think Major Hastings wrote the name; but, as I said just now, not knowing the man's own signature, I cannot say that this is Major Hastings's forgery or the man's own signature.

Question. Can you say whether or not in these two cases of Coons & Fisher, or either of them, you witnessed the payment or the receipt?

Answer. I do not think that I witnessed the payment or the receipt in either of those two cases.

Question. Is your name attached as a witness to all the names on this voucher?

Answer. My name is attached as a witness to all the names on this voucher. (Voucher exhibited to the court and examined.)

Question. Turn to the voucher for October, 1863, item 19, the name of Edward Scharenburg.

Answer. I did not witness this payment nor this signature, which is written by Major Hastings, and signed with a cross.

Question. State what you have to say with regard to the following cases on the same voucher: Oliver P. Sowers, item 22; William Guest, item 24; Isaac P. Dopsee, item 25; Hugo Breen, item 96; John Hoyt, item 109; Samuel B. Chipman, item 114; Phillip Crook, item 116; Clement Williams, item 117; William A. Prine, item 118; Matthew McDermot, item 120; Andrew McDonald, item 121; William McCarty, item 123.

Answer. All the names are signed with a cross and are written by Major Hastings. I was not witness to the payment nor to the receipt in those cases.

Question. Is your name attached as a witness to all the names in this voucher?

Answer. My name is attached as a witness to all the names in that voucher. (Voucher exhibited to the court and examined.)

Question. Turn to the following names in the voucher for November, 1863, and state what you have to say with regard to them. Henry Upton, item 14; William McClain, item 15; Pleasant Bailey, item 16; Hugh McConnor, item 17; Harrison Furgurson, item 19; James Hughes, item 21; John Rortz, item 22; John P. Kline, item 23; Bathalmy Shay, item 25; Jesse Riggle, item 32.

Answer. All these names are signed by Major Hastings, with a mark. I was not present and did not witness the signature or the receipt of the money in any of these cases.

Question. Turn now to the name of Alexander B. Butts, item 83, same voucher.

Answer. This name is not written by Butts himself. The signature on the voucher is a forgery, and in my opinion it is in Major Hastings's writing.

Question. Are you familiar with the handwriting of Mr. Butts?

Answer. Yes, sir; I am familiar with it.

Question. Have you ever seen him write?

Answer. Very often.

Question. Is your signature attached as a witness to all the names on this voucher?

Answer. My name is attached to all the names on the voucher as a witness, but I did not sign it myself. During that time in November and December I was sick with chills and fever, and at the same time nervous debility. Some days I could not hold a pen even. When Major Hastings gave me this voucher to be signed I was unable to write that day, and got it signed by one of the clerks in the office. He wrote my name, though, by my directions.

Question. Who was he?

Answer. His name is Alfred Guiton. I will add, with reference to Butts, that Butts was not at the post in this month of November, 1863, being detailed for duty in the Adjutant General's office, and was in Washington.

(Voucher exhibited to the court and examined.)

Question. Turn to the voucher for December, 1863, and give your testimony with reference to the following names: Michael Hickey, item 34; Ralph Weidman, item 37; Matthew McIntre, item 43; Lewellyn Vaughn, item 45; William McCartney, item 48; Robert Wallace, item 49; Lewis Sunday, item 51; Timothy McCarty, item 56; William Bostwick, item 68.

Answer. All these names have been signed by Major Hastings with a cross. I was not a witness to the signature or to the payment in any of these cases.

Question. Is your name attached as a witness to all the names in this voucher?

Answer. My name is attached as a witness to the payments in all the cases in this voucher.

(Voucher exhibited to the court and examined.)

The direct examination of this witness was here closed.

Cross-examination by the accused.

Question. At what time did you say you received these vouchers for the purpose of signing your name as witness?

Answer. A few days after the end of the month.

Question. Where did you take them for the purpose of signing your name?

Answer. In the adjutant's office.

Question. How was that office situated with respect to Major Hastings's office?

Answer. The adjutant's office was on the other side of the hall, right opposite to Major Hastings's office.

Question. Then there were two doors and a hall between the two offices?

Answer. There was a hall and there was one door on the right, going into Major Hastings's office, and a door on the left, going into the adjutant's office.

Question. Did you do all your writing in the adjutant's office?

Answer. All my writing was done in that office.

Question. What duties did you perform in the adjutant's office in 1862, before you became clerk to the superintendent?

Answer. My duties were to copy orders and letters, and make copies of any original that was given me of records, or any other work that pertained to the adjutant's office. I was junior clerk.

Question. Who was the senior clerk at that time?

Answer. When I entered the office the senior clerk was Mr. Onion. The sergeant major was a man by the name of Jeremiah Harrington.

Question. Then I suppose you acted as clerk for Mr. Onion during that time, did you?

Answer. I suppose so. I obeyed the orders of both Mr. Onion and the sergeant major.

Question. Did I understand you to say that you received the enlistment papers as the recruits came up, during that period?

Answer. No, sir; you did not understand me to say it, for I did not say it.

Question. Who did receive them?

Answer. They were received by Mr. Onion.

Question. Who had charge of them, and took care of them?

Answer. I think Mr. Onion had them for a while, and then in the course of the fall and winter they changed hands several times.

Question. How?

Answer. I cannot remember exactly who had charge of them; but I think that in the months of February and January, 1863, I had the charge of entering names in the books from the enlistments on the records, and then those enlistments were put in a cupboard in my desk. I consider, then, that during those months I had charge of the enlistments.

Question. Did you keep what are called the descriptive books that are now lying on the table?

Answer. I sometimes entered the names into the descriptive books and sometimes it was done by other clerks. During a time that was part of my business.

Question. Where were those books kept; in which office?

Answer. In the adjutant's office.

Question. Who paid the bounties while you were junior clerk in the adjutant's office?

Answer. I think it was Major Hastings.

Question. Where were the bounties paid?

Answer. When the bounties were paid by Major Hastings, the recruits were called into Major Hastings's office, and he handed them the money himself; that is, when I was junior clerk.

Question. At what time did you cease to be junior clerk, and become the senior clerk?

Answer. Some time in April, 1863.

Question. Where were the bounties paid then?

Answer. I commenced paying the bounties myself when I took charge of the office.

Question. Where?

Answer. In the adjutant's office.

Question. Then the recruits did not go into Major Hastings's office at all?

Answer. The recruits were obliged to go into Major Hastings's office to be examined by the surgeon of the post. After they were examined, they were brought into the adjutant's office to sign the rolls, and it was after the rolls were signed that I went to Major Hastings's office. He counted out very particularly the amount that was due for the number of recruits that had been examined by the surgeon and he handed me the money. After the recruits had all signed the bounty receipt rolls, I paid them and sent them to their quarters. That is all I had to do with them then.

Question. They were not in Major Hastings's room, then, after the bounty was paid at all? They had no occasion to go to his room after the bounty was paid?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Where were you born and raised?

Answer. In Montreal, Canada.

Question. When did you come to this country?

Answer. Some time in March, 1862; I think it was in March, 1862.

Question. When did you enlist?

Answer. I enlisted on the 12th of April, 1862.

Question. Where were you educated?

Answer. In Montreal, Canada.

Question. What sort of an education did you receive?

Answer. I received a commercial education.

Question. You are very good with the pen, are you?

Answer. I do not know that I am very good with the pen. I write a tolerably fair handwriting; but I do not consider that anything extraordinary.

Question. Are you not quite skilful with the pen?

Answer. No, sir; far from it.

Question. Have you not a faculty of writing different hands, imitating hand-writings?

Answer. No, sir; I never professed it.

Question. Did you ever practice it?

Answer. No, sir, I did not; I never had occasion to do so.

Question. Did you ever attempt to exhibit your skill in that particular to any one?

Answer. No, sir; I did not.

Question. Did you ever attempt to do so in the presence of Chaplain Ross, at the Carlisle Barracks?

Answer. No, sir, I did not; never.

Question. Did you write this list? (Exhibiting it to the witness.)

Answer. Yes, sir; I did.

(The list was produced and put on evidence, and appended to this record, marked "Exhibit 1.")

Question. Is that letter in your handwriting? (Referring to the letter already in evidence, marked "Exhibit F.")

Answer. Yes, sir; this letter is in my own handwriting.

Question. Turn to the voucher for January, 1864, the one of which you spoke, and look at the name John Spotberg, number 7. Is that in your handwriting?

Answer. Yes, sir; that is in my handwriting.

Question. Look at the name of Joseph Freizer, number 72, same voucher; is that in your handwriting?

Answer. Yes, sir; that is in my handwriting.

Question. Look at the name of Edward Jackson, number 73, same voucher; is that in your handwriting?

Answer. No, sir; it is not in my handwriting.

Question. Look at the name of James Clancey, number 74, same voucher.

Answer. That is in my handwriting.

Question. Look at the name of Michael Hickey, number 73, same voucher.

Answer. That is also in my handwriting.

Question. Look at the name of Stephen De Witt Beekman, number 76, same voucher.

Answer. That is not in my handwriting.

Question. In whose handwriting is the name of Stephen De Witt Beekman?

Answer. It is his own signature.

(Voucher exhibited to the court and examined.)

Question. Turn to the name of Patrick Garrity, in the voucher for August, 1863, item 126; I think you said that was in Major Hastings's handwriting?

Answer. And I repeat it.

(Voucher exhibited to the court and examined.)

Answer. The first nine pages are all in my handwriting.

Answer. Yes, sir, the name of John A. Donnelly is written in my handwriting.

Answer. I did not see any.

Question. You have already testified to your belief that the name of Frank Ludwig and Perkins Lane, in voucher No. 12, for the fourth quarter of 1862, in the third column, are in the handwriting of Major Hastings.

Answer. I said that it was in Major Hastings's writing.

(Voucher exhibited to the court and examined.)

Question. What business had you been in in Canada when you came to the United States in 1862?

Answer. I was not in any business at all then.

Question. Had you never been in any business?

Answer. Yes, sir; I had been in business for myself.

Question. What kind of business?

Answer. It was a general grocery and hardware, merchandise, provisions, &c., store.

Question. Were you successful in business?

Answer. No, sir, not very successful, or else I would not be in the States at present, most probably.

Question. Did you bring any money or property with you, when you came from Canada?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Did you ever pass by any other name than that of Orsay?

Answer. I passed by the name of d'Orsay. That was the only thing I suppressed when I enlisted.

Question. Why did you suppress the d'?

Answer. Pride was the cause of it, I suppose.

Question. What induced you to enlist in the army of the United States?

Answer. I came to the States with the intention of enlisting in the army. That was my sole intention when I came here.

Question. What was your pay while you were at Carlisle barracks?

Answer. When I was a private I had thirteen dollars a month. My extra duty pay in the office amounted at one time to as high as ten dollars a month. Then the treasurer's fees from the post fund amounted to sometimes five or six dollars, and sometimes more. Besides that, I had the half of the premiums that were awarded to persons who presented recruits for re-enlistment, which amounted to between fifteen and twenty dollars on each recruit.

Question. What was the average amount you received per month?

Answer. I could not state exactly, unless I calculated it.

Question. State it as nearly as you can.

Answer. I should be obliged to count it up. I should think it would be about fifty dollars; perhaps more, perhaps less; I cannot be positive on that question.

Question. What were your habits at that time—economical or otherwise?

Answer. I cannot say but that my habits were economical; but I spent nearly all that I earned.

Question. Are you married or single?

Answer. Single.

Question. Did you ever state to anybody that when your term was up, and you would leave the army, you intended going into business on your own responsibility?

The witness stated that he desired to make an addition to his answer to the question with regard to his monthly income. There being no objection, his statement was taken down, before he answered the question just put, as follows:

Besides what I mentioned as moneys coming into my hands in the regular way of salary, Major Hastings, in the course of the nine months that I was in charge of the office, made me presents to the amount of about two hundred and fifty dollars. The first amount which he gave me happened to be in the month of July, 1863. I think it was twenty dollars he gave me as a reward for having made out the muster and descriptive rolls of all the troops at the post who were then in Harrisburg. We had only one day and one night to work at them, and all my help was two clerks; and not having any money, and we being in a strange place, he made me a present of twenty dollars. The balance of the money he gave me sometimes at the end of the month, sometimes in the middle of the month, or any other time in the course of the month, in amounts ranging from five to ten dollars and fifteen dollars. Nearly all that money I deposited in the bank in Carlisle, and, after I had been induced to desert by Major Hastings, on returning to Carlisle, I withdrew it from the bank. There were then about two hundred dollars there.

The last question having been re-read to the witness, he answered as follows :

I might have stated that it was my intention to go into business on my own responsibility; that is, if it was possible for me to do so.

Question. Did you ever state to any one that you had plenty of money for that purpose?

Answer. Never.

Question. Did you ever state so to Sergeant Major O'Brien?

Answer. I never said a word to him in that sense.

Question. Did I not understand you to say a moment before that you had never made such a statement to anybody about going into business?

Answer. I said, in the first place, that I might have stated that I would go into business if it was possible for me to do so; but I never said to anybody that I had money enough, or that I intended to do so by all means. It was quite natural for me to suppose that if I could go into business I would do so, and I do not deny that if I had the means I would do so, also.

Question. When did you desert?

Answer. I deserted on the 17th of February, 1864, on being induced to do so by Major Hastings himself.

Question. Where were you when you deserted?

Answer. I was in Washington.

Question. Were you brought here under guard or under arrest?

Answer. Yes, sir; I was brought here under guard of a sergeant and a lance corporal, I believe.

Question. Were you not aware at that time that you were suspected of having committed these frauds?

Answer. I was not aware that I was suspected, for the simple reason that I could not be suspected for having committed them, because Major Hastings was suspected himself; and, in fact, when he brought me up to his room, in the conversation that we had together, he acknowledged the frauds in his own words, and told me that the only way for me to save him from twelve or fifteen years in the penitentiary for having committed those frauds, and myself from twelve or fifteen years in the penitentiary for having signed as a witness was for me to desert. I answered him, that as when I witnessed the bounty receipt rolls I was under orders to do so, it was not my intention to desert; that when I gave my explanation to Major Turner, to whom I was to report, it would be seen, and the government would recognize the propriety of my signing as a witness when I was ordered to do so by Major Hastings, as he was my commanding officer. After that he tried to make me arrange a story or a statement of facts in his favor. I told him that if there was anything in my power to do to help him I should certainly do it; but I would not perjure myself for him or anybody else; and when I should report to Major Turner, I would tell him simply the truth. He continued conversing and tried to frighten me, and finally said that if I desired to desert he would give me all the facilities; that if I would go to Canada I would want for nothing in the future; and, taking off his overcoat, he went down stairs and spoke to the sergeant who had me in charge. They both came up together, and he told the sergeant in my presence, "You will let Orsay do whatever he desires; let him go if he wishes." I was not willing then to desert, and in fact I had decided to go and report to Major Turner, as required by the orders; but Major Hastings had so much frightened me in the course of the conversation that I thought if I could get away I would do so. Then the guards and myself went up to Fourteenth street, and at the corner of F and Fourteenth streets I left them, with their permission, because I was allowed to do so, and they went and reported to Major Turner, while I went in a contrary direction and hid myself. When I was in Canada Major Hastings sent me some money, and I will file his letter if the court desires. Here is the letter which he sent me.

(The witness produces a letter which is exhibited to the court, put in evidence, and appended to this record, marked Exhibit I.)

Here is another letter that I received at a later date. The letter itself is not dated, but I kept the envelope bearing the Carlisle postmark upon it.

(Letter produced, put in evidence, and appended to the record, marked exhibit K.)

In explanation of my demands to Major Hastings, referred to in that answer mailed at Carlisle on the 28th of March last, I will say that I wrote to Major Hastings that I was in want of money; that it was at his instance I had deserted, and that I could not live doing nothing. Business in Canada was very dull; there was no prospect of my getting a situation, and I therefore demanded of him, or asked him, to send me some money. I even stated that if I had $5,000 in gold I would leave the country forever. To that demand he sent me the letter which has also been produced here. A few days afterwards I went to Carlisle myself, and saw Major Hastings, who gave me $500. I returned to Canada and received through a friend of mine my pardon for desertion by the Secretary of War, on condition that I would give myself up as a deserter. I believe that if I had been guilty of any peculations against the government I would not have given myself up while I was safe in Canada for the simple reason of desertion; because I knew that if I had been guilty of any of these frauds I would be punished for it, and I was then as innocent as I am now. I might add, that in the beginning of the conversation on the 17th of February last between the major and myself, the first words he uttered to me when I met him in the hall at Willards' hotel were that he had hoped I would not come here, and that if Lieutenant McGregor had received his letter he was sure that I would not have been here.

Question. In the conversation you had, at Willards' hotel, with Major Hastings, was anybody present besides yourself and him?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Did you understand that you would be pardoned before you left Canada?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Who gave you that information?

Answer. A young friend of mine, here in Washington, who had the letter of pardon in his possession.

Question. I want to know who it was?

Answer. His name is Alexander B. Butts. It was Butts who gave me the letter in New York.

Question. Did you understand that you were to be pardoned for the purpose of giving testimony against Major Hastings?

Answer. No, sir; there was not a word said of that. I received information that I was pardoned when I was in Toronto, after my return from Carlisle. I was in Carlisle, I think it was, in the month of April, 1864, and I received the letter of pardon when I was in New York some days after that. From New York I came straight on to Washington, and then I had the letter in my possession.

Question. Did I understand you to say that you understood that you were to be pardoned before you left Canada?

Answer. Certainly. I received a notification that I would be pardoned if I would give myself up for desertion, and at the same time Butts told me that he had the letter in his possession, and that if I would meet him in New York he would give me the letter. I left for New York, and on receipt of the letter I came straight to Washington.

Question. What did you go to Carlisle for, in the first instance, after your desertion?

Answer. I went twice to Carlisle after my desertion. The first time was when I escaped from Washington; I went there then, drew my money from the bank, and my clothing, &c., and went to Canada. The second time was to see Major Hastings, to try and get something to live upon.

Question. Did you get anything from Major Hastings at that time?

Answer. I have already said, in part of this testimony, that he gave me $500.

Question. What was that given for?

Answer. To help me to live, I suppose.

Question. Nothing else?

Answer. And to keep me away, so as that I would not trouble him any longer, probably. I do not see any other cause.

Question. Was it after that that you demanded the five thousand dollars in gold?

Answer. No, sir; I demanded five thousand dollars in gold before, in a letter, to which that letter of March 28, 1864, is an answer.

Question. Was this payment of five hundred dollars a compromise between you and the major?

Answer. I do not understand exactly the word compromise.

Question. I mean did you agree to take that instead of the five thousand dollars in gold?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Did you take it on account of the five thousand dollars?

Answer. I took it as a gift. I did not suppose that it was on account, nor that it was a final payment, nor anything else. In that letter in which I asked him for five thousand dollars in gold, I stated that it was my intention to go away from Canada. When he said he could not give it to me in the letter which I produced to the court just now, I went to Carlisle to see him about it. Then he told me that he could not give me five thousand dollars, because all the moneys were stopped against him, and, in fact, he repeated the explanation that he gave me in that letter. All that he could offer me then was five hundred dollars, which I accepted.

Question. Was it after that that you made known what you have stated about Major Hastings?

Answer. I do not understand the sense in which the question is asked.

Question. Well, to Mr. Butts or to anybody else.

Answer. I do not understand the question.

Question. Then I will ask another question. Did you not communicate with somebody in Washington, after the receipt of that five hundred dollars, informing them that you could give testimony against Major Hastings?

Answer. No, sir, I did not.

Question. Did you communicate to anybody prior to the commencement of this trial the substance of the story you have stated to-day?

Answer. Do you mean the story of desertion?

Question. I mean the whole statement you have made with reference to Major Hastings?

Answer. I said very often that Major Hastings was guilty of those frauds, and I have no doubt I expressed myself to whoever inquired about it that I was convinced that he was the author of them.

Question. When did you first make that statement, and to whom?

Answer. I cannot answer that question. I cannot remember the persons to whom I said so, nor the story itself, because it is pretty long ago now, since the month of February last; and I have said it so often that I could not state to whom it was said first.

Question. Did you make the statement to anybody before your desertion?

Answer. The subject of fraudulent payments I suspected since the course of last summer. I was first induced to remark it by the amounts. The amounts charged on the bounty vouchers struck me as being very large in comparison to the number of recruits we had received in that month. I happened to look over the vouchers once, and saw some names marked there that I had not seen, or that I had not known to be in Carlisle, and a great many others, for instance, where I could recognize Major Hastings's writing, and which I was sure he had not paid, as far as my own personal observation was concerned. I did not question at all the right he had of entering those names there, because I did not know if he was not acting under orders that I was not aware of. However, I made the remark, in the course of the fall, to Sergeant Major O'Brien. In the month of November, when I gave that parcel of enlistments to Major Hastings, the very same evening I was going to town with Guiton, now Corporal Guiton, and I told him that Major Hastings had asked if I had old enlistments; that I told him I found a parcel of old enlistments and they were in the cupboard, and that I gave them to Major Hastings. I made a remark at the same time, that if they were to be counterfeited, or if there were to be forgeries of any sort, Major Hastings would certainly be the cause of it, but that I had nothing to do with reference to it, because when I signed as a witness I was acting under his orders, and I could not help doing so. So I consider that O'Brien and Guiton are the only persons to whom I could have made some remarks on the subject. Some remarks may have been made to others that I do not now remember.

Question. When you witnessed the voucher for January, 1864, with twenty-seven real names on it, and upwards of two hundred false ones, did you remark them to anybody?

Answer. I do not remember of having made any remarks.

Question. After you went to Canada did you not communicate to some one in the United States the facts that you knew, or that you pretended to know, about Major Hastings and these frauds?

Answer. I have no doubt I did so. I cannot remember that I did so, but I do not deny that it is possible I did so.

Question. Did you not ask for a pardon from some of your friends?

Answer. I say no, sir, emphatically.

Question. Did you not promise, or propose, that if you were pardoned you would give testimony?

Answer. No, again.

Question. How did Mr. Butts know that you were in Canada, to communicate with you?

Answer. Because I wrote to him—corresponded with him.

Question. What did you write about? What did you correspond about?

Answer. As a friend, an old acquaintance, what I was doing in Canada; how I amused myself, and other kindred subjects. It was friendly correspondence.

Question. Did you mention the subject of pardon in any of your letters at all to Mr. Butts?

Answer. I do not think so. In fact, I will repeat that I never asked anybody, and never intimated to anybody to try and get me the pardon for desertion, and never gave it to be understood by anybody that I desired it. It was offered to me, and when it came I accepted it.

Question. When and to whom did you first tell this story that you have related here to-day after you had returned from Canada and after having received the pardon?

Answer. I think it was to Mr. Chase. I cannot be positive about that. I went and reported to Major Turner, according to the instructions, and he asked me to go and see Mr. Chase. Mr. Chase asked me quite a number of questions, to which I answered, and so I consider him to be about the first.

Question. Then the first thing you did after you got your pardon was to report to Major Turner, was it?

Answer. Certainly. The instructions in the pardon were for me to report to him on my arrival at Washington.

Question. What were those instructions?

Answer. I am sorry to say that I have not got the pardon here to show.

Question. I am not talking about the pardon, but the instructions.

Answer. The instructions were, that if I would give myself up and report to Major L. C. Turner, judge advocate, department of Washington, I should be pardoned for desertion; that I should not be molested, and should be protected.

Question. You reported accordingly?

Answer. I reported accordingly.

Question. You then received instructions from Judge Turner to report to Mr. Chase?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. And then, I understand, you for the first time communicated to him the story that you have now detailed to-day?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Did those two things, your report and your communication of this story to Mr. Chase, occur on the same day?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. I understand you to say that your instructions were to report to Major Turner; and if you did so, you were to be pardoned and not molested?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Did you not understand that that was for the purpose of giving testimony in this case?

Answer. I took it simply as a question of pardon; I did not take it in any other light, and I gave myself up accordingly.

Question. Did you not know that Major Turner was a judge advocate, a prosecuting officer of the government?

Answer. Yes, sir, I did.

Question. Did you not know that when you were ordered to report to him, it was for the purpose of giving testimony against Major Hastings?

Answer. There was not a word said about that.

Question. That is not an answer to the question.

Answer. I might have presumed so, but there was not anything said with reference to it.

Question. You have said that you suspected frauds were going on from having one day examined the papers, and seeing the disparity between the number of names and the number of real recruits. Where did you get those papers at the time you made that examination?

Answer. It was when I was signing the vouchers at the end of the month, witnessing them one after the other.

Question. Did you never sign your name as a witness at the time the recruit signed his name and you paid him the money?

Answer. Never.

Question. You say that Major Hastings kept these papers under lock and key. What kind of a lock and key was that on the desk in which they were kept?

Answer. I never remarked the lock and key, but it was a cupboard lock and key.

Question. Was there anything peculiar about the key? Was it one of those common locks?

Answer. That is more than I can say, because I never examined it.

Question. Had you a key that would open that cupboard?

Answer. No, sir, I had not.

Question. Then I understand you to say that when you paid the recruits, you always had to go to the major to get the enlistment roll?

Answer. You are mistaken in the name; it is the bounty receipt roll. I was obliged to go to the major to get the bounty receipt roll.

Question. Intermediately between the payments to different batches of recruits, the papers were never in your possession?

Answer. They were never in my possession only at the end of the month, when they were given to me to be witnessed.

HENRY ORSAY—Cross-examination continued by the accused.

Question. I wish you to fix the date of the time when you were in Carlisle the second time after your desertion.

Answer. I cannot remember the date.

Question. You say you corresponded with Butts when you were in Canada, after your desertion. Where was Butts at the time of this correspondence?

Answer. He was here in Washington.

Question. Did you correspond with anybody in Carlisle?

Answer. Yes, sir; I did.

Question. With one or more persons?

Answer. I corresponded with several persons there.

Question. How are letters delivered in Toronto?

Answer. The letters that came addressed—

Question. I am asking you a general question. What is the usage as to the delivery of letters in the post office there; is there a system of general delivery, or is there a system of carriers?

Answer. There is a system of carriage. I suppose there is a system of general delivery also; but I repeat there is a system of carriage.

Question. That is, the delivery of letters to the persons to whom they are addressed?

Answer. Yes, sir, at their residences.

Question. Where are you now employed?

Answer. I suppose that I belong to the cavalry depot at Carlisle barracks.

Question. You say you "suppose;" I want to know what you know.

Answer. I suppose, from the fact that my desertion from Carlisle barracks was cancelled by the Secretary of War, and, naturally, as when I left Carlisle I was under the command of the commanding officer at that post, I suppose that I belong there now. I cannot answer in any other way.

Question. Are you now in any of the public offices acting as a clerk?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Where are you staying now in this city?

Answer. I am staying at No. 3, 25th street.

Question. At whose house?

Answer. Mr. Onion's.

Question. Does Mr. Onion keep house there?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. You board with him?

Answer. Yes, sir.

The cross-examination of the witness was here closed.

Re-examination by the judge advocate.

Question. You have stated that you were, at one time, brought here to Washington under the charge of a sergeant and a lance corporal. What were the names of those two men, and their regiments?

Answer. The sergeant's name was Michael Ryan, and the lance corporal's name was George White. They belonged to the cavalry depot of Carlisle barracks. They were unassigned recruits.

Question. Do you know where those men are now?

Answer. I believe they are on recruiting service at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

Question. When you had, as you stated in your testimony, in the month of February, 1863, the control of the enlistment papers, how long at that time did those enlistment papers remain in your hands, and what became of them?

Answer. They remained in my hands as long as they were not required to pay the recruits; when there were any recruits to be paid, the enlistments were all taken out of my hands.

By the court:

Question. How were the vouchers usually made out—that is, which was written first, the mere list of names in the first column, or the signatures?

Answer. The signatures were entered first on the vouchers—that is, in the right-hand column.

Question. And when was the list of names placed on the voucher on the left-hand side?

Answer. It was Major Hastings that wrote them there, after the vouchers were returned to him, together with the enlistments.

Question. Before or after they were signed by the witness?

Answer. After they were signed by the recruits themselves, the names were put in the left-hand column by Major Hastings; and before they were signed, by myself as witness.

Question. Was there any understanding between Major Hastings and yourself by which you were to receive letters in Canada under an assumed name?

Answer. On my arrival in Canada I wrote to Major Hastings, informing him that I was there, and telling him, also, to address his letters to me to the name of Edward Oliver, 127 King street, Toronto.

Question. What was your object in requesting him to direct to an assumed name rather than to your own name?

Answer. Because I was a deserter, and I did not wish it to be known to the authorities where I was.

Question. How was the first letter that you exhibited to the court in your cross-examination addressed?

Answer. It was addressed to the address that I gave just now—Edward Oliver, 127 King street, Toronto.

Question. What became of the envelope of the first letter?

Answer. I destroyed it on account of Major Hastings's letter being dated. I did not think that I would require the use of the envelope.

Question. You stated that you were "acquainted with Major Hastings's hand writing in his different styles;" that you had "seen it so very often that you could distinguish his two styles of writing;" and subsequently you stated that "those names that are signed with a cross generally are in Major Hastings's quick handwriting, and he took no pains with them." Was the quick handwriting of Major Hastings a uniform and systematic handwriting?

Answer. It was a handwriting that resembled, in a great many respects, his good handwriting, with the difference that the letters were worse formed—not quite so well formed. There is always the same stroke, for instance. As to the slanting style of the writing, it was not exactly as regular as when he took pains with it.

Question. When you directed the clerk, Guiton, to sign your name as a witness, did you direct him to imitate your handwriting?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Then there was a marked similarity between his handwriting and yours?

Answer. I do not know that there is. There may be some letters that are exactly the same, but the usual style of writing is not the same. Guiton writes a round hand, and I do not.

Question. Did Major Hastings know that you did not sign the voucher, but that Guiton did it for you?

Answer. I am not aware of that. I do not think I told him.

Question. In your correspondence from Canada with parties in Carlisle, and with Butts in Washington, under what name were your letters addressed?

Answer. All under the name of Edward Oliver.

Question. Did you pass by the name of Oliver in Canada?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. How happened you to affix your name as witness to payments on the bounty receipt rolls of which you knew nothing?

Answer. Because I was ordered to do so. At the end of the month, when I went to get the bounty receipts—in other words, the vouchers—Major Hastings told me to witness them; and I did so under his orders.

Question. Did you say to him that you had not actually seen the payments or receipts, and, therefore, could not properly witness them?

Answer. I never spoke to him a word about it.

Question. Did he, in terms, order you to affix your signature as witness to payments which you had not seen, and of which you yourself knew nothing, or did he merely give you the general order to witness the receipt rolls?

Answer. He simply told me to witness the rolls, and I did so under that order.

Question. Have you any knowledge, information, belief, or suspicion that any person other than Major Hastings forged any of those signatures on the bounty receipt rolls?

Answer. I have no information and no suspicion whatever against anybody else but Major Hastings.

Question. When did the first conversation occur between Major Hastings and yourself, in which you or he alluded, either directly or indirectly, to his having forged these signatures?

Answer. It was here in Washington, at Willards' Hotel, when he brought me up to his room.

Question. Had any other person than yourself, to your knowledge, information or reason to suspect that Major Hastings had committed these forgeries?

Answer. As I stated before, in the course of the summer I made some observations to several persons in Carlisle, in the office; Sergeant C. Burn was one, and Corporal Guiton was the other.

Question. Do you know any person other than Major Hastings to whose handwriting those signatures alleged to be forged bear a close resemblance?

Answer. No, sir; I do not know of anybody who writes a hand similar, or nearly similar, to that of Major Hastings.

Question. Do you know anything of Major Hastings's system of doing business—as to whether he kept a cash account?

Answer. Yes, sir, he kept a cash account. The cash account was in the office.

Question. Which office?

Answer. In the adjutant's office. It was under my care.

Question. Did you make the entries in the cash account?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Did you make up the monthly returns for which these bounty rolls are vouchers?

Answer. Yes, sir. In keeping the books of the superintendent, when any moneys were paid, except for bounties, they were immediately entered in the book. Just as soon as the receipts were given in to Major Hastings, they were handed to me, and I made the entry immediately into the account-books. At the end of the month I would go to Major Hastings's office and ask him the amount of bounties that were paid in the course of the month. He would give me the amount, on a slip of paper. Then I would enter it in the book, credit the book for the month, and establish the balance.

Question. You made up these returns in triplicate, did you not?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. You mailed duplicate returns, and one of the duplicate vouchers, did you?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. And you gave to Major Hastings the triplicate return and the duplicate voucher, did you?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Was that duplicate voucher signed precisely the same as the vouchers that have been examined before this court?

Answer. Yes, sir; the same.

Question. You examined them personally to see if they were correct duplicates of each of the others, I suppose?

Answer. I did not examine them particularly. I examined the amounts.

Question. Did those retained copies of the voucher or roll remain in the adjutant's office, or were they retained in Major Hastings's own custody?

Answer. They were kept in Major Hastings's own custody. I think it was in the cupboard in his office, under lock and key.

Question. On these duplicate vouchers which were retained by Major Hastings, did the names in the middle column purport to be signatures, or were they mere copies of the names on the middle column of the first voucher?

Answer. They purported to be signatures.

Question. You say that when you had an interview with Major Hastings in Washington, the major remarked to the guard, "You will let Orsay do whatever he desires; you will let him go if he pleases." Did you express an intention to the major at that time to desert?

Answer. I told the major that I would not desert, when he recommended me to do so.

Question. Did you give him in any way to understand that you would desert?

Answer. No, sir, I did not.

Question. But you did desert?

Answer. But I did desert.

Question. Do you know where that cash-book is now?

Answer. I left the cash-book at Carlisle, when I left there and came to Washington.

Question. Who balanced that cash account?

Answer. Myself.

Question. How often?

Answer. Once a month.

Question. Describe the book.

Answer. It was a book of about fifteen inches long, by about ten or twelve inches broad. It might contain probably three or four quires of paper.

Question. Did Major Hastings keep a bank account?

Answer. That is more than I can say. I know that he used to send checks to the recruiting officers when he transmitted them any recruiting funds, and on his vouchers here he mentions that the balance of the money in his hands is deposited with the assistant treasurer at Philadelphia and New York in some cases. That is all I know about it.

Question. Checks on what?

Answer. Checks, I presume, on the assistant treasurer either at Philadelphia or New York.

Question. Did you see any of them?

Answer. I have seen them, but have not examined them.

Question. Did he always give you money, or did he sometimes give you checks, or did he ever give you checks to draw money at the bank?

Answer. He never gave me checks to draw money at the bank. When there were any funds to be transmitted to the recruiting officers I wrote the letters, and he would enclose the money himself in the letters.

Question. Did the surgeon of the post keep a record of the recruits examined by him?

Answer. I do not know.

Question. Can you give the surgeon's name?

Answer. Surgeon Joseph G. B. Bright.

Question. Was he there during all this time?

Answer. He was there during all the time I was in charge of the adjutant's office.

Question. Was Major Hastings always present at the examination of recruits?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Who was in command of Carlisle barracks the second time you went there, on your return from Canada, after having deserted?

Answer. I believe it was Lieutenant McLain. I am not positive. I know that Major Hastings had been relieved.

Question. Were you in the offices at Carlisle barracks when you returned at that time?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Where were you when Major Hastings paid you the $500 ?

Answer. I was in Carlisle.

Question. Describe the exact time and place.

Answer. It was in the evening, about half past 9 o'clock, I think ; and it was on the road skirting the college, on the right-hand side in going from Main street to Louthier street.

Question. Was any one present besides yourself and the Major ?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Where did you stop at that time ?

Answer. I stopped at a hotel. I do not remember exactly the name. It was more a tavern than a hotel. It was on the corner of Main street and another street, the name of which I do not recollect. It was opposite the railroad bridge in Carlisle.

Question. How long did you remain in Carlisle ?

Answer. The first time I went to Carlisle I remained two days. The second time I think it was five days.

Question. Cannot you give the date of either of those visits ?

Answer. No, sir, I cannot, except the first. I believe that the first visit was on the 20th or 21st of February last ; I am not positive. I cannot really remember the date of the second visit.

Question. Did any of the clerks of your acquaintance stop at that hotel or tavern, as you describe it ?

Answer. None of them stopped there.

Question. Did you see them there ?

Answer. Yes, sir, I saw them.

Question. Whom did you see ?

Answer. I saw Sergeant O'Brien and Guiton.

Question. Do you mean on both visits ?

Answer. On both visits.

Question. Did you stop at this house both times ?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Was the landlord acquainted with you ?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. And had been before you went away ?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Were you about the hotel openly, publicly ?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Where did you stay during the day ?

Answer. I stayed in my room ; did not go out.

Question. Besides the landlord, Sergeant O'Brien, and Guiton, who else can you name that you saw and had conversation with there, during either of those visits ?

Answer. I saw a man by the name of William Hogan, and also Joseph Maynard. I do not recollect any others, although I am under the impression that there were some others.

Question. Give the name of the landlord of that tavern ?

Answer. Mrs. Miller.

Question. Did Sergeant O'Brien know that you were a deserter there ?

Answer. Yes, sir ; he knew it.

Question. Did you have any conversation with him about the impropriety of your visit there, and the danger in it ?

Answer. Naturally, the conversation turned upon that subject very often. He knew that I was a deserter.

Question. Did you state your business there to him, or any one else ?

Answer. Yes, sir ; I stated my business to him, and also to the others.

Question. Whom do you mean by "others?"

Answer. The other parties that I mentioned here, such as Maynard, Guiton, and Hogan.

Question. Was Hogan an old acquaintance of yours?

Answer. Yes, sir; he was.

Question. Of how long standing?

Answer. I believe he was at the post when I reported there, after having enlisted, and I have known him ever since.

Question. Was he a soldier.

Answer. Yes, sir; he was a soldier.

Question. State his rank, position, company, and whatever else you know about it?

Answer. I am under the impression that he was a lance corporal. I do not know exactly. He was an unassigned recruit.

Question. Had you ever known him in Canada?

Answer. I never met him before I came to Carlisle barracks. I never knew and never saw the man before that.

Question. Had you any Canadian acquaintance, made before you came here, amongst any of these parties mentioned at Carlisle?

Answer. No, sir; I never had any acquaintance with any of them, and never knew them before I came to Carlisle.

Question. Tell me who Joseph Maynard was?

Answer. Joseph Maynard was a private; a clerk employed in the adjutant's office. He was an unassigned recruit also.

Question. What did you tell Sergeant Major O'Brien, and the others that you saw there, your business was in Carlisle?

Answer. In the first visit I told them I came to Carlisle for the purpose of getting my clothing and getting the money that I had in the bank; and in the second visit I told them that I wished to see Major Hastings to get some money from him.

Question. Did either of them know when you had this interview with Major Hastings?

Answer. I think they did. I told them.

Question. How did you obtain this interview with Major Hastings?

Answer. I sent a short note to Major Hastings, by Guiton, to meet me at the corner, opposite the college. Major Hastings came there, accompanied by his son. As soon as I made myself known to him, by bidding him "good evening," he told his son to go away, and his son left us together—Major Hastings and myself.

Question. At what time did you give Guiton that note?

Answer. It was in the same evening, just a few minutes before the interview.

Question. Did Guiton know the contents?

Answer. I think he did. I do not think he read it, though. I might have told him of the contents.

Question. Was it a sealed note?

Answer. Yes, sir; it was a sealed note.

Question. Had you been conversing with Guiton on this subject at that interview?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Has Major Hastings more than one son?

Answer. I believe he has. I do not know the number.

Question. Can you give us the name of the one that was with him that night?

Answer. I do not know his name.

Question. How old was he?

Answer. That is more than I can say. He was a young man.

Question. Can you give his age pretty nearly.

Answer. I cannot say. It was dark, and, in fact, I could not recognize his features. I know that Major Hastings has no sons that are grown up, at least that are men; but I could not say who it was, nor his age, because I could not see particularly who it was.

Question. How did you know it was his son, then?

Answer. Because he told me so himself in the course of the conversation. He said that he had met his son in coming to the rendezvous, as I might call it, and that he told him to accompany him until he met me.

Question. Was that the first time you had seen this son of Major Hastings?

Answer. I have seen his sons very often at the post.

Question. Are you well acquainted with them?

Answer. No, sir; I am not acquainted with them at all, only by eye-sight.

Question. Cannot you describe to the court that one, so as that we can identify him from any other son of Major Hastings's, either by his age, or his size, or his dress, or in some other way?

Answer. The person that was with him, his son, was a slight-built young man. I think he had on a black felt hat of some kind, and a black coat. I do not see that I can give any other description than that.

Question. Cannot you tell whether this was the oldest son or the youngest son?

Answer. No, sir; I cannot answer that question. I could not recognize his face on that night, and so I could not say whether it was his oldest or his youngest son.

Question. Did the major send the young man away immediately after you met him and said "good evening" to him?

Answer. Yes, sir; just as soon as I bid him "good evening" he told him to go away.

Question. After you went to Canada, were you engaged in any business there?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Did you remain at Toronto all the time?

Answer. No, sir; I went to Detroit, New York, Buffalo, Elmira, and several other places, where I stopped.

Question. Were you either directly or indirectly engaged in obtaining recruits for the American army?

Answer. I was neither directly nor indirectly engaged with recruits in any way.

Question. You understand the question fully, I presume. Were you engaged in obtaining individuals to come to the United States to enlist?

Answer. I understand the question perfectly. I was not engaged in that business. I had nothing to do with anything that related to the government.

Question. After Major Hastings had paid you the five hundred dollars, and you left Carlisle, where did you go?

Answer. I went to Philadelphia, and then went straight to Toronto, Canada.

Question. How long did you remain at Toronto?

Answer. About a week.

Question. What kind of money did the five hundred dollars consist of that Major Hastings paid you?

Answer. It was in United States treasury bills.

Question. Did Major Hastings pay you that money the night you had the interview with him, near the college?

Answer. I had a second interview with him. He appointed the next evening to give it to me, and it was on the second interview that he gave me the money.

Question. What was the size of the bills that he gave you?

Answer. They were twenties, tens, and fives, I think.

Question. Do you recollect the particular date on which, or time when, you saw Mr. Butts in New York ?

Answer. No, sir ; I do not recollect it at this moment.

Question. Do you know about what time ?

Answer. It was some time in May, 1864 ; I think it was about the 8th.

Question. Did the rest of the party at the hotel know that you had got that money from Major Hastings ?

Answer. I do not know whether they did or not.

Question. Did you tell them ?

Answer. I do not remember of having told them.

Question. You did not divide with them ?

Answer. No, sir ; I did not divide with them. I had not too much for myself.

Question. Did either of those persons whom you met at Carlisle on your last visit, to your knowledge, ever receive, directly or indirectly, any share in the proceeds of the embezzlements that are testified to before this court before you deserted.

Answer. The only thing I know is that I never received any share, and was never promised anything to sign as witness, and consequently I consider that I did not receive any share in any of the embezzlements ; as to the others, that is more than I can say. I do not know at all what action they were taking, and in this case I can only speak for myself.

Question. Do you say distinctly that you do not know that either of those persons did receive anything, directly or indirectly, as the result of those embezzlements ?

Answer. Yes, sir, I say so—that I do not know it.

Question. Has either of them ever received anything since your desertion as part of the proceeds of the embezzlements ?

Answer. I never heard anything said about it.

Question. Has either of them ever claimed from you, or from Major Hastings, anything on that account ?

Answer. Not that I know of.

Question. Did either of them, to your knowledge, make of Major Hastings any such demand as you made upon him ?

Answer. I do not know anything for certain ; I was told that a man of the name of Butts made a demand against him, but that is only hearsay.

Question. Who told you ?

Answer. I cannot remember who told me in the first instance.

Question. Was that demand successful ?

Answer. I do not know.

Question. Was this demand, according to your understanding of it, made at or after your second return to Carlisle ?

Answer. I do not know.

Question. Did you see Butts at Carlisle the second time you were there, or was he there ?

Answer. He was not there.

Question. What was his Christian name ?

Answer. His name is Alexander B. Butts.

Question. What time did you say it was when you left Canada to enlist ?

Answer. I said I left Canada in March, 1862, I think it was.

Question. And you enlisted in April ?

Answer. Yes, sir ; on the 12th of April.

Question. Where did you enlist ?

Answer. In New York city.

Question. How long did you remain in New York city before you were sent to the depot at Carlisle ?

Answer. About forty days, I suppose.

Question. Were you sent from there directly to Carlisle?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Was Butts at Carlisle when you reached there?

Answer. No, sir; he was not there then; he had not enlisted.

Question. Do you know where he enlisted?

Answer. I do not know where he enlisted. I know that he belonged to the volunteers, and that he was transferred to the regular army in Washington by Captain Clinton.

Question. Did you know him before he came to Carlisle?

Answer. No, sir; I had never seen him before.

Question. Did you exchange your greenbacks for gold, or carry the greenbacks to Canada?

Answer. I carried the greenbacks to Canada, and, while there, I exchanged a certain amount for the moment, and the balance I brought back to the States.

Question. Did you make any deposit in any of the banks in Canada of any portion of this money?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Did you carry it about your person all the time?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Answer. The name of the proprietor, I think, was Spaulding.

Question. What hotel was it?

Answer. It was the Montreal House, Toronto.

Question. Did you pay your board by the week or day?

Answer. I boarded by the week.

Question. What was the price?

Answer. It was at the rate, I think, of $4 a week.

Question. Is that one of the best hotels in Toronto?

Answer. No, sir; it was a second-class hotel.

ALEXANDER B. BUTTS, a witness for the prosecution, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by the judge advocate.

Question. What is your present occupation?

Answer. Clerk in the Adjutant General's office.

Question. What was your last occupation?

Answer. Private in the regular army.

Question. Were you attached to any regiment or were you unassigned?

Answer. I was unassigned.

Question. Where were you stationed?

Answer. I was stationed at the headquarters Carlisle barracks, but I was on the recruiting service part of the time in New York city.

Question. On what duty were you at the time you were at Carlisle barracks?

Answer. Clerk in the Adjutant's office.

Question. At what time was that?

Answer. That was from about the 1st of November, 1862, to the latter part of February, 1863, being about four months.

Question. Are you acquainted with the handwriting of Major Hastings, the accused in this case?

Answer. Yes, sir; I think I am.

Question. Did you ever see him write?

The judge advocate produces voucher No. 3, for the month of November, 1863, and asks the witness the question whether the name of Alexander B. Butts, item 83, in the right-hand column, is his writing.

Answer. That is not my handwriting.

Question. Have you any opinion with regard to the writer of that? If so, state it.

Answer. I can say this, the first time I looked at that signature it struck me as resembling Major Hastings's handwriting.

Question. You say "the first time you looked at it," is that your present opinion?

Answer. My present opinion is that it resembles his handwriting.

Question. Have you an opinion as to whether it is or is not his handwriting?

Answer. No, sir; I have no opinion.

The direct examination of the witness was here closed.

Cross-examination by the accused.

Question. Were you aware of the desertion of Mr. Orsay, or d'Orsay, in February last?

Answer. Yes, sir; I was.

Question. When did you first know it?

Answer. I do not know that I would like to answer those questions; I refuse to answer them on account of criminating myself.

Question. Did you correspond with Mr. Orsay, or d'Orsay, after he deserted?

Answer. I wrote him one letter after his desertion, I think; I will not be positive. I wrote him one letter that I know of.

Question. What was the subject-matter of that letter?

Answer. The subject-matter of that letter was for him to meet me in New York city. Mr. Orsay is a friend of my family. He corresponded with my wife's sister for some time before this affair occurred, and he was intimate with the family, and, of course, I felt an interest in him on that account. When he was in Canada, a friend of mine came to me and told me that he was trying to get Mr. Orsay to come back; that he had got his pardon; that he had been trying to get his pardon to him but had not succeeded, and, knowing that I was a friend of his, and Mr. Orsay would place confidence in me, he asked me if I would use my influence to have him return. I went to Major Turner and asked him about the pardon, &c. Major Turner told me that he wished I would use my influence to get him back; that he had granted him his pardon if he would return within twenty days; that that twenty days was nearly up, so nearly up that he could not return so as to come within the limits, and therefore he would grant fifteen days additional if I would do so. Having that understanding, I wrote Mr. Orsay to meet me in New York city, as I was going there at the time to be married, and he being a friend of the family, that would be the best way to meet, and the surest way not to have this certificate get out of our hands to be lost. I took the certificate to New York city. Mr. Orsay met me on those conditions. I showed him the certificate, explained to him the case, and he returned here and reported himself to Major Turner.

Question. Who is the friend of whom you speak in that answer?

Answer. Mr. N. F. Onion.

Question. What was the object of getting Mr. Orsay pardoned?

Answer. I do not know what the object was; I know what my object was; that is, my object when I consented to take so much responsibility in the matter, or to meddle with the matter so much.

Question. What was that?

Answer. That was that I believed Mr. Orsay to be innocent of forgery, and a friend of my family, and in order to sustain the reputation of the family, I would do all I could to clear him of all guilt and responsibility in the matter.

Question. Your own family or Orsay's family?

Answer. My wife's family.

Question. You were not married at that time, I believe?

Answer. I went to New York for the purpose of getting married at that time.

Question. Was it not your understanding, when that pardon was talked of, that it was given for the purpose of inducing Mr Orsay to give testimony against Major Hastings?

Answer. No, sir; I did not understand it so.

Question. What explanation did you make to Mr. Orsay when you met him in New York?

Answer. I simply explained the document I had in my hands, that I had seen Major Turner; that Major Turner seemed to be frank on the subject, and clever; and that he would abide by what the document said, and Mr. Orsay might feel free and easy in the matter.

Question. Did not the document itself explain that he was to give testimony against Major Hastings?

Answer. Yes, sir; but from the lips of an old friend, or from a friend, it would be very acceptable under the circumstances.

Question. What was your object in making a trip to Carlisle and visiting Major Hastings about that time?

Answer. As I said before, I refuse to answer that question on the same ground as the first.

Question. Did you not demand five thousand dollars of Major Hastings?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Did you not demand a sum of money?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Did you not tell Orsay that you had demanded a sum of money of Major Hastings?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Did you not tell him that you intended to demand a sum of money of Major Hastings?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Did you not go there for the purpose of extorting money from him?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. What did you go there for?

Answer. I refuse to answer that question on the same grounds as before.

The cross-examination of the witness here closed.

By the court:

Question. Have you a copy of the letter that was sent with the pardon?

Answer. The pardon was not sent with the letter.

Question. Did you take the pardon to him?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. And the letter?

Answer. No, sir; I sent the letter by mail.

Question. Were the conditions as to what he was to do expressed in this pardon?

Answer. It was expressed in it that he should report to Major Turner before the expiration of the time allowed.

Question. Was that all the condition there was attending the pardon?

Answer. I think it was. It was a very short note.

Question. Was there anything said in it about his giving testimony in this case?

Answer. I think not. I am pretty sure there was not.

Question. Have you not got a copy of that document on file in the office?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Who wrote it; in whose handwriting was it?

Answer. At first I believe it was in the handwriting of one of Major Turner's clerks and signed by himself. The additional fifteen days were simply matter below, in his own handwriting; I know the postscript below was in his own handwriting; I am not so sure about the other.

Question. How long have you been acquainted with Orsay?

Answer. Since the 1st of November, 1862.

Question. Had he been acquainted with your wife's family before that?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Do you know anything of his previous history before that?

Answer. Nothing definite.

The court then adjourned until to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock.

EDWARD W. HINKS,
Brigadier General U. S. Vols., President.
GARRICK MALLERY,
Lieutenant Colonel and Judge Advocate.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Thursday, August 11, 1864.

The court met at ten o'clock a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

Present: All the members of the court, the judge advocate, the accused, his counsel, and the reporters.

The record of yesterday was read and approved.

NEWELL F. ONION, a witness for the prosecution, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by the judge advocate.

Question. What is your present occupation?

Answer. Clerk in the Adjutant General's office.

Question. How long have you been in that position?

Answer. About a year and a half.

Question. What was your last previous occupation?

Answer. I was a soldier previous to my going into the Adjutant General's office.

Question. Were you attached to any regiment?

Answer. No, sir; I belonged to the permanent party at Carlisle barracks.

Question. What was your duty at Carlisle barracks?

Answer. I was sergeant major at the time I was there.

Question. State fully the whole nature of your duties.

Answer. I was employed in the office of the superintendent of the mounted recruiting service previous to my being appointed sergeant major, and my duties were almost exclusively clerical duties.

Question. At what time did you first go on duty in the office of the superintendent of the mounted recruiting service?

Answer. In September, 1860.

Question. How long did you remain in that position in any manner connected with the office of the superintendent?

Answer. I remained there until the 28th day of April, 1863.

Question. During that time did your position change? If you were in more than one capacity in that office, state in what different capacity you were.

Answer. I was always a clerk.

Question. You were, then, in no other capacity than as a clerk?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. What was your duty in reference to the payment of bounties to recruits? State fully the whole custom of the office in respect to the payment of bounties to recruits.

Answer. When bounties first commenced to be paid in August, 1862, the custom was, on the arrival of a detachment at that post, to first examine the men. Then, after the examination, their signatures were procured on the bounty receipt rolls by myself, with the assistance, sometimes, of another clerk. Those receipt rolls, after their signatures were procured, were taken to Major Hastings, with the enlistment of the men, in every case where there was a signature made. Then, in cases of small detachments, he gave me the money to pay the men their bounty; but those cases were very rare while I was there. It was not an invariable custom at that time to give the bounty to me for the payment of the recruit. After I had paid the recruits their bounty, Major Hastings filed the enlistment himself with the bounty receipt roll. This he kept until another detachment came in, and had passed the doctor. Then the receipt roll was given to me again to procure the signatures, and get the enlistments of the men as they signed it. The receipt rolls then passed into the hands of Major Hastings.

The witness testifies that, having closely examined the descriptive books of the post, the following names are not found on them. There may be one or two of them found. There are names that he recollects hearing while there that he cannot find. He gave them as thorough an examination as one man could in examining three books, two of which were without an index. 108. Milton Braheley, item 160, voucher No. 18, for the fourth quarter of 1862.

Question. Turn to vouchers Nos. 12 and 13, for the fourth quarter of 1862, and state, if you can, which of those vouchers is genuine, if either; and which, if either, is false.

Answer. Voucher No. 13 I know is correct, because that was completed in one day before it left my hands.

Question. Turn to voucher No. 13, for the fourth quarter of 1862, and give the names on that voucher, if any, which in your opinion are false, and give what reason you have for that opinion.

Answer. There is the name of John Estelle, item 27. There was no such man as that ever at the post, according to the list I have just given. I do not see any names here that I would like to swear to, because I cannot say what they are, I am sure.

Question. State fully what you have to say with reference to those vouchers, comparing one with the other, with reference to the period of time covered by the vouchers, and whether the names on the two vouchers correspond.

Answer. I commenced before with voucher No. 13, but voucher No. 12 was completed after voucher No. 13 had been completed. Voucher No. 13 was made on purpose to embrace a large number of men who were to be paid on one day at the post, voucher No. 12 being too small to contain the number of men that were required to be paid. I do not know whether the names correspond or not. I have not examined them.

Question. Examine them now and see whether there are any names on the one voucher that are on the other voucher; and if so, how many?

Answer. Richard Gill, item 17, voucher No. 12, is also borne on voucher No. 13, item 43. The payment on voucher No. 13 is the proper payment. Samuel Garren, item 51, voucher No. 13, is also borne on voucher No. 12, item 76. The payment on voucher No. 13 is the proper payment. Joseph Keizer, item 62, voucher No. 13, is also borne on voucher No. 12, item 71. The payment on voucher No. 13 is the correct payment.

Question. What have you to say with regard to the payment on voucher No. 12 in that case?

Answer. In all cases that I have named, where the names are borne on voucher No. 12, they are not proper payments.

Charles G. Hardy, item 58, voucher No. 13, is also borne on voucher No. 12, item 73. The payment on voucher No. 12 is an improper payment. I do not know which of them is genuine; the G is left out in one of them.

The answer of the witness with regard to the name of Charles G. Hardy having been read to the witness, he desired to correct it as follows:

I wish to say that the payment on voucher No. 13 is correct, and the payment on voucher No. 12 may be correct possibly. On voucher No. 13 there is a reference mark made to the name of Charles G. Hardy on voucher No. 12. I do not know whether they are the same men or not. The reference mark is in red ink.

Question. Was that reference mark a portion of the original voucher, or was it put on subsequently to the completion of the voucher?

Answer. I do not know when it was put on; it was not a part of the original voucher.

Question. Proceed with your answer to the general question.

Answer. Patrick Kane, item 63, voucher No. 13, also appears on voucher No. 12, item 69. The payment on voucher No. 13 is a genuine payment. One was put on November 6, and the other November 14. The payment on the 14th is the proper payment. The other may be another man; I do not know. They are both the same name.

George V. Kelly, item 65, voucher No. 13, is also borne on voucher No. 12, item 67. The name is George Kelly on voucher No. 12. If it is the same man, the proper payment is made on voucher No. 13.

Andrew Lind, item 66, voucher No. 13, is also borne on voucher No. 12, item 65. The payment on voucher No. 13 is genuine; the payment on voucher No. 12 is not.

Eli H. Sawyer, item 68, voucher No. 13, is also borne on voucher No. 12, item 64, with the exception of the "H." There is no middle name to the name on voucher No. 12. If they are both the same man, the payment on voucher No. 13 is the proper payment.

Frank Ludwig, item 69, voucher No. 13, is also borne on voucher No. 12, item 57. The payment on voucher No. 13 is genuine; the payment on voucher No. 12 is not.

Perkins C. Lane, item 70, voucher No. 13, is also borne on voucher No. 12, item 58, with the "C" omitted. If they are both the same man, the genuine payment is on voucher No. 13.

Joseph Leroy, item 71, voucher No. 13, is also borne on voucher No. 12, item 62. The payment on voucher No. 13, signed with a cross, is correct. The other is not a genuine payment.

John N. Mains, item 75, voucher No. 13, is also borne on voucher No. 12, item 61. The payment on voucher No. 13 is correct, and the one on voucher No. 12 is not; that is, if they are both the same man. The "N" is omitted in voucher No. 12.

Thomas S. Monroe, item 78, voucher No. 13, is also borne on voucher No. 12, item 60, with the "S" omitted. The payment on voucher No. 13 is genuine. If they are both intended for the same man, the payment on voucher No. 12 is not genuine.

Thomas Mullen, item 79, voucher number 13, is signed with a cross. There is a reference mark here which refers to item 28 on voucher 12, but that is not a corresponding name. The name on that voucher is Thomas Mullen, and is not signed with a cross.

Robert Mayer, item 82, voucher number 13, is also borne on voucher number 12, item 86. If they are both intended for the same man, the genuine payment is on voucher number 13.

James Nelson, item 85, voucher number 13: there is a reference mark here to item 37, voucher number 12, but the name there is James G. Nelson. If they are both intended for the same man, the genuine payment is on voucher number 13.

Thomas Morey, item 72, voucher number 13, is also borne on voucher number 12, item 63. If they are both intended for the same man, the genuine payment is on voucher number 13.

Thomas O'Connor, item 89, voucher number 13, signed with a cross, is also borne on voucher number 12, item 30, without a cross. If they are both intended for the same man, the payment on voucher number 13 is genuine.

Question. In any of these cases where you say there is a receipt that is not genuine, when you know anything with regard to the handwriting, or have any opinion with regard to it, state that opinion. Take the case of Thomas O'Connor, item 89, where it is written without a cross; who wrote it?

Answer. I could not swear who did write that; I do not see any resemblance to anybody's writing that I know. In the case of the genuine payment the name was written by a clerk in the office by the name of Lewis B. Webb, I think; that is my impression. I see a resemblance between his handwriting and this signature; I am pretty sure it is his writing.

Question. With regard to the name on the other voucher that you say is not genuine, have you any opinion about that?

Answer. I have said I do not know anything about that.

Charles Pearson, item 90, voucher number 13, is also borne on voucher number 12, item 31. It is spelled differently; it is spelled Pierson. The payment on voucher number 13 is signed by a cross, and the name is written by Webb. The payment on voucher number 12, if intended for the same person as that on voucher number 13, is an improper payment. I cannot say in whose handwriting the name on voucher number 12 is.

Michael Ryan, item 95, voucher number 13, is also borne on voucher number 12, item 32. If the payment on voucher number 12 is intended for the same person as that on voucher number 13, the payment on voucher number 13 is the proper payment.

John Ridge, item 96, voucher number 13, signed by a cross, the name written by Webb, is also borne on voucher number 12, signed by a cross. I cannot say who wrote the name on voucher number 12, though there is a resemblance in the two last letters of the man's name, "ge," to the writing in the left-hand column, which was written by Major Hastings.

Philip Roche, item 98, voucher number 13, is also borne on voucher number 12, item 33. It is spelled Rouch in voucher number 12. The name on voucher number 13 is signed by a cross, written by Webb. If the payment on voucher number 12 is intended for the same man as that on voucher number 13, the payment on voucher number 13 is the proper payment. The name on voucher number 12 purports to be signed by the man himself without a cross. There is a resemblance in the letters "hillip" in the signature to the writing in the left-hand column. I cannot say who wrote it; it might have been written by some one else, but I see a resemblance between this man's first name and Major Hastings's writing in the other column. I could not swear that he wrote it at all.

Lyman Robinson, item 99, voucher number 13, signed by a cross, name written by Webb, is also borne on voucher number 12, item 34, without a cross. The payment on voucher number 12, if intended for the same man as that on voucher number 13, is an improper payment; the payment on voucher number 13 being the genuine payment.

Charles H. Richter, item 100, voucher number 13, is also borne on voucher number 12, item 35, the "H" omitted. The payment on voucher number 13 is the genuine payment if they are both intended for the same man.

Charles S. Stanton, item 108, voucher number 13, signed by a cross, written by Webb, is also borne on voucher number 12, item 50, without a cross, and without the "S" also. If they are both intended for the same man, the payment on voucher number 13 is the proper payment.

Patrick Simon, item 109, voucher number 13, signed with a cross, is also borne on voucher number 12, item 51, with no cross. The name "Patrick" on voucher number 12, I think, was written by Major Hastings. The name on voucher number 13 was written by Webb.

Joseph H. Sharp, item 112, voucher number 13, is also borne on voucher number 12, item 45, with the "H" omitted. If they are both intended for the same man, the payment on voucher number 13 is the proper payment.

John Sprague, item 114, voucher number 13, is also borne on voucher number 12, item 46. If they are both intended for the same man, the payment on voucher number 13 is the genuine payment. I do not think both signatures could have been written by the same man. I cannot say whose writing it is in voucher number 12.

Conrad Weisman, item 122, voucher number 13, is also borne on voucher number 12, item 42, signed by a cross. The name Conrad Weisman is written by Major Hastings, and signed by a cross on voucher number 12. On voucher number 13 it is signed by the man himself. If they are both intended for the same man, the payment on voucher number 13 is the proper payment.

H. Werner, item 124, voucher number 13, is also borne on voucher number 12, item 43, signed by a cross, the name written by Major Hastings. If they are intended for the same man, the payment on voucher number 13 is the proper payment.

J. H. Walker, item 125, voucher number 13, is also borne on voucher number 12, item 47, without the H. If they are both intended for the same man, the payment on voucher number 13 is the proper payment.

John Swain, item 127, voucher number 13, item signed with a cross, written by Webb, is also borne on voucher number 12, item 44, without a cross. If they are both intended for the same man, the payment on voucher number 13 is the proper payment.

Question. When I desired you to give any expression of opinion that you had with reference to handwriting, I did not limit you to the names that were subsequently in order read by me, and you will give your testimony in reference to any previously given names, or names that were alluded to by yourself, as well as those to which testimony was given.

Answer. The signature of Frank Ludwig, item 67, on voucher number 12, was written by Major Hastings, I should say, and also the name of Frederick Wagner, item 56, same voucher.

Question. What have you to say about the name of Perkins Lane, item 58, same voucher?

Answer. I would not swear who wrote that, but the "L" resembles Major Hastings's L's sometimes.

Question. Is your name attached as a witness to vouchers numbers 12 and 13 the same that have been the subject of the evidence?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. You have several times stated that if the two names in vouchers 12 and 13 were intended to be the same man, the instance in voucher number 13 was the correct payment, and the one in voucher number 12 was not the correct payment. Have you no further or other reason for that opinion?

Answer. In some cases I have—those that I stated.

Question. Do you not know whether in any instance any man whose name is on voucher number 12 was not paid on that voucher?

Answer. Judging from the comparison that I have made of them, I should say there was quite a number of them, but I cannot designate any particular one more than I have done.

Question. Did you yourself pay out the moneys that were paid on voucher number 13 that has been alluded to by you?

Answer. No, sir, I did not. I might have done so in one or two cases where the men were absent at the time of payment. The signatures were all procured at one time. The men were again called up to receive the money. I paid those who did not answer to their names at the time the roll was called for them to receive their money.

Question. Did you pay any men yourself whose names appear on the voucher number 12 for the fourth quarter of 1862?

Answer. I do not recollect of making any payment on that voucher at all myself.

Question. Are you familiar with the handwriting of Major Hastings?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Have you seen him write?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Did you make an affidavit to support the accounts of Major Hastings for 1862?

Answer. Yes, sir, I did.

Question. State who framed that affidavit, and under what circumstances it was given.

Answer. The accounts, I think for the fourth quarter of 1862, were disallowed at the Second Auditor's office, as the enlistments of the men purporting to be paid on that quarter were not filed with the bounty receipt rolls.

Question. Is this the affidavit you made? (Referring to the exhibit already in evidence, marked Exhibit D.)

Answer. Yes, sir. Some time in January, 1863, Major Hastings received notice that his accounts had been disallowed on account of the enlistments not being filed with them, and he drew up a rough copy of an affidavit and gave it to me, and told me to make a copy of it and take it into town and have it sworn to. I made a copy of it, and while doing so I examined every record within my reach to see that all the statements were correct. Finding that they were correct as far as I was able to judge at the time, I took the affidavit into town and swore to it with Webb.

Question. Did Major Hastings at any time direct you to prepare the vouchers in a manner different from the regulations?

Answer. There was no regulation for those vouchers at all.

Question. Did you prepare a voucher to which at any time Major Hastings made an objection and directed you to prepare it differently?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. At what time was that? State the whole circumstances, and produce the voucher if there is any voucher to be produced.

Answer. This is the voucher—voucher No. 9 for August, 1862. I prepared this voucher, and the heading and footing were put in by me. The first page I ruled, showing when, where, and by whom the men who received payment were enlisted. Major Hastings then directed me to leave that out when I ruled the next page.

Question. When you say "then," at what time was that?

Answer. The first payment was made July 26, 1862. It was about the last of July or the 1st of August that the voucher was made or ruled out.

Question. In whose possession were the bounty receipt rolls, that afterwards became the vouchers, kept?

Answer. Major Hastings kept them. I only had charge of them while I was procuring the signatures of the men.

Question. Did you, at any time, sign your name as witness at the time of the receipt of the payment of the money to a recruit?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Can you specify the vouchers in which that occurred, and the instances?

Answer. I cannot tell what vouchers they are on. They were on the first one or two vouchers that were made. I cannot pick them out.

Question. Did you sign your name as a witness, in any instance, to voucher number 12, for the fourth quarter of 1862, at the time of payment?

Answer. No, sir; I did not sign that voucher at all at the time of payment.

Question. At what time did you sign as a witness?

Answer. At the end of the month, just before the papers were to be sent off.

Question. Were or were not those bounty receipt rolls certified to and prepared by any person before they were handed to you to be signed as a witness?

Answer. No, sir; I do not think they were signed; I do not recollect any case of Major Hastings having signed them before. I witnessed them; but the names were written in the left-hand column, and they were numbered, and the amounts put in by Major Hastings, and the voucher footed up.

Question. Did you pay any recruit on voucher number 12, for the fourth quarter of 1862?

Answer. I do not recollect of any particular case.

The direct examination of the witness was here closed.

Cross-examination by the accused.

Question. When that voucher was presented to you to be witnessed, did you have any idea that there was anything fraudulent about it?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. You spoke of some clerk assisting you in the prosecution of the business at that time. Who was that clerk?

Answer. There were several; there were Webb, and Orsay, and Butts. I had different clerks in there at different times. I do not recollect any particular one; any one that I happened to call on would assist me.

Question. Did Orsay ever make payments during that time?

Answer. No, sir, not to my recollection. I never recollect him making a payment while I was there.

Question. In your affidavit, which is Exhibit D, you state, "We carefully verified every payment with the original enlistment of each recruit as the payment was made to him." Is that statement true?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. According to your affidavit that statement applies to Major Hastings's recruiting accounts for the months of July, August, September, October, November, and December, 1862?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Was it true with regard to those accounts?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Do you believe, at the present time, that the statements in this affidavit are true and correct?

Answer. That affidavit was not made to cover the present time. It only included the months of July, August, September, October, November, and December, and at the time that affidavit was made, it was fully believed to be true by myself. If there were any fraudulent payments, they were not known to me at the time. The statement, in that affidavit, that the payments were carefully verified by the enlistments was true. Every payment that was made, actual payment I mean, (I allude to actual payments now,) was carefully verified by the enlistments; but if there were any other payments that I knew nothing about, of course I cannot say anything about that; I did not know anything about them at the time.

Question. Did you have the vouchers before you when you made this careful examination?

Answer. No, sir; I do not think I had the vouchers then.

Question. You say this in your affidavit: "We were present at the payment of the bounty by Captain D. H. Hastings, 1st cavalry, superintendent of the mounted recruiting service, that appears in his recruiting accounts for the months of July, August, September, October, November, and December, of 1862, and we carefully verified every payment with the original enlistment of each recruit as the payment was made to him." Is that true?

Answer. That is true. We were present and saw every actual payment.

Question. But you say you were present at the payment of the bounty that appears in his recruiting accounts for those months?

Answer. I was present at all actual payments of the bounty.

Question. But you say here in your affidavit that you were present at the payment of the bounty that appears in his accounts for those months; do you make any distinction in this affidavit between payments that were actually made and payments that only appear in his recruiting accounts?

Answer. I make this distinction: that I did not know of the existence of any fraudulent payment at the time, and when that affidavit was made it was made in perfect good faith.

Question. When you signed those payments, as a witness, were you conscious that you were signing for any payments that you had not actually seen?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Did you interest yourself in getting a pardon for Mr. Orsay for his desertion?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. What induced you to do so?

Answer. My own interest.

Question. What do you mean by your own interest?

Answer. It was perfectly plain to me, from what I had learned in the Second Auditor's office when Mr. Chase called me up there to explain the accounts which I had witnessed, that there were many fraudulent payments during the time I was at Carlisle barracks, and if there was any blame attached to Orsay there would positively be blame attached to me; and if the crime of committing those fraudulent payments was persisted in against him, I had naturally to suppose that it would be against me. In order to clear myself, therefore, of all blame, I interested myself enough to get him pardoned, and get him back here to clear up the case. I was not going to suffer for anything I did not do.

Question. Did you inform him that you were about to get a pardon for him, or had got a pardon for him?

Answer. No, sir; I did not directly, but I did indirectly inform him that I had a pardon for him.

Question. Did you inform him the reason for which you procured the pardon?

Answer. I did not have an opportunity to do so.

Question. Have you done so since his return here?

Answer. I do not recollect whether I have or not. He knows it is perfectly plain, or he ought to know it if he does not.

Question. Then, if I understand you correctly, you got that pardon for the purpose of making him witness against Major Hastings?

Answer. I got him pardoned for the purpose of having the case settled, let it affect whoever it would.

Question. Was Mr. Butts the man with whom you had this correspondence?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. How did you ascertain where Mr. Orsay was?

Answer. I do not know, I am sure; I heard, on three or four occasions, where he was by hearsay.

Question. From whom?

Answer. I do not recollect any particular occasion. Butts might have spoken to me that he had heard where he was, or some one else might have done it. I presume, though, it was probably through Butts that I found out where he was.

Question. Did you know that Butts was corresponding with him?

Answer. No, I do not think Butts corresponded with him; I do not know.

Question. Did Mr. Butts show you any letters from him?

Answer. I do not recollect of seeing any letters from him; I do not recollect any occasion, I am sure.

Question. Did Mr. Butts ever tell you that he had been up to see Major Hastings since the desertion of Orsay?

Answer. No, sir, not that I know of.

Question. Did he ever tell you that he had demanded a sum of money from Major Hastings?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Did Orsay ever tell you so?

Answer. I do not know; somebody told me so; I heard it somehow; I think it was Major Hastings who told me.

Question. I wish you could remember who it was that told you.

Answer. I think it was Major Hastings—I am pretty sure it was.

Question. Is Orsay boarding at your house now?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. How long has he been there?

Answer. Ever since he came back.

Question. Have you and Mr. Orsay been in daily consultation about this case?

Answer. I do not know that we have had any special meetings on the matter; of course we have spoken about it as we would of anything else that was going on. I do not know that we have had any daily consultations, or anything of that kind.

Question. Did Orsay inform you that he had tried to extort money from Major Hastings?

Answer. He told me he had asked for a certain sum of money when he came back.

Question. How much was the sum mentioned?

Answer. Five thousand dollars, I think.

Question. Did he say what he intended to do if he had received the money?

Answer. I do not recollect that he said what he would do if he had received it. He might have told me, though, and he might not.

Question. Were you to have any share in that money?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Was Mr. Butts to have any share in it?

Answer. I do not know. It was none of my business, I am sure, whether he was or not. I never heard anything about it. I never heard it alluded to.

Question. Why did Mr. Orsay tell you such circumstances, then?

Answer. I do not know; he merely made the remark to me, as he would about anything else.

Question. Have you been intimate with Mr. Orsay for any length of time?

Answer. I do not know that we are very particularly attached to each other, any more than an acquaintance. I have known him ever since he came to Carlisle.

Question. Do you still keep up your friendship for him?

Answer. Yes, sir; I do not entertain any hard feelings against him at all. I feel the same towards him now as I did before.

Question. What did you think of his attempt to extort money from Major Hastings?

Answer. That was his affair, not mine; I also think that he ought not to have done it. It was none of his business as long as he got out of the way. If he was the man that did all this, I should not think he would have asked anything after he got away; but he would have been glad to get off. That is the way I looked at the case when I heard that.

Question. Then, upon the whole, you think it was a fair game on his part, do you?

Answer. I know I should not have done it if I had been in the same fix. I do not suppose I should. I do not know. It depends on circumstances, you know Question. At all events, then, I suppose you do not look upon it as a very serious offence on his part ?

Answer. I do not know. One thing that I know is, I do not see how, under the circumstances, it could be considered an offence at all. I do not know anything at all about the matter, and do not care. That is the way I am situated.

Question. You have the same respect for him that you had before ?

Answer. I do not know that I would regard him in the same light exactly, but I do not think, under the circumstances in which he asked the amount, that he committed any very great error. At the same time, knowing, as he must have known, that he was not in fault, he should have come back and straightened up the matter without making any stipulations at all. That is the way I think he ought to have done, but still, at the same time, I had no control over him.

Question. When you made your affidavit, which is on exhibit here, did you write another one in your own handwriting at the same time ? (Exhibiting a paper to the witness.)

Answer. I do not recollect writing it. I suppose I did, for here are two.

Question. Is that all in your handwriting ?

Answer. With the exception of the name of Abraham Dehuff, the magistrate, and the signature of Webb, it is all in my handwriting.

Question. What were Mr. Orsay's habits at the time he lived in Carlisle ?

Answer. Very good, as far as I know.

Question. What time did you leave there ?

Answer. I think it was the 28th of April, 1863, that I left there.

Question. Did Mr. Orsay succeed you in the same position that you held ?

Answer. He did in regard to the papers.

Question. What was Mr. Orsay's monthly pay while you were at Carlisle ?

Answer. I think he had five dollars a month extra-duty pay. I think that was the amount that he had the last part of the time I was there. When he first came he had only ten cents a day extra-duty pay.

The cross-examination of the witness was here closed.

By the court :

Question. What is the date of the second copy of your affidavit ?

Answer. I think they are both of the same date.

Question. Did you sign voucher number 12, for the fourth quarter of 1862, as a witness to the signature ?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. At the time you signed it did you suspect that any of the names were fraudulent ?

Answer. No, sir. In signing these receipt rolls they all had to be done very quick. I did not have an opportunity, and did not have time, to examine anything, except to get my name down ; and I think you will find my name written on some lines where there is no signature on the left-hand page.

Question. Did you ever have any instruction from Major Hastings, or any one else, to witness the signature of recruits ? I mean to observe the signatures of recruits as they were signed.

Answer. No, sir.

Question. How happened you to sign as a witness to the signatures of names that you never saw written ?

Answer. Because they had to be done in a hurry, and I had to sign them to get papers off by the mail. I very seldom paid any attention to the other side of the page, but just hurried over them as fast as I could, to get the signature in and to get them all witnessed.

Question. The preparation of the vouchers was a matter that was very hastily and very loosely done, was it?

Answer. No, sir; there was nothing very hasty about the preparation of the vouchers until we came to sending them off in the mail. We had to get them away, and the vouchers were never given to me to be witnessed until the other papers were all ready to go away. That was generally the custom.

Question. Voucher number 13, for the fourth quarter of 1862, was all made on one day?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Was it signed by all the recruits on one day?

Answer. I think it was.

Question. And you witnessed the signatures as they were written?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. How do you know that voucher number 13, dated the 14th day of November, 1862, is a correct voucher?

Answer. Because it was completed before it left my hands, with the exception of witnessing. I call it in my hands when it was not in the hands of Major Hastings. I had the charge of it when he did not.

Question. Who was in charge of it when it was being signed?

Answer. There were different clerks. Any one that I asked to see that the recruits signed in the proper place would attend to it. I do not know that it was any particular one.

Question. Was it possible for any clerk who had charge of that voucher while it was being signed to place names upon it without your knowledge?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Was it possible for any clerk to place names upon any other voucher without your knowledge?

Answer. I think not.

Question. You have stated that certain names appearing to be the names of the same individuals are contained in voucher number 12 and voucher number 13, for the fourth quarter of 1862. Will you state upon which voucher those names appear in the order of time?

Answer. I think on voucher number 12. Those that we looked over this morning, on voucher number 12, I think were all entered as paid on November 6, but the genuine payment was made November 14, on voucher number 13.

Question. You stated that voucher number 13 was prepared to pay a large number of recruits on a certain day, because voucher number 12 was not large enough. Had voucher number 12, when voucher number 13 was prepared, been signed up to a certain point?

Answer. Yes, sir. There had been some paid on voucher number 12 when voucher number 13 was made.

Question. Will you point out the place to which it had been signed?

Answer. I cannot tell, but I think there were only a few names on it—perhaps one on two pages, perhaps not as many as that.

Question. Did you prepare those two vouchers yourself?

Answer. Yes, sir; I prepared those two vouchers; that is, I made the heading and footing of voucher number 13. The names were filled in after the signatures were put down by Butts. You see they are in Butts's handwriting in the left-hand column. In voucher number 12 you will find that the left-hand column is mostly, if not all, in Major Hastings's handwriting.

Question. Who placed the dates of payments upon the vouchers?

Answer. As a general thing, Major Hastings; but in the case of voucher number 13 it was done by the man who filled in the names, Butts.

Question. Do you know that for every name signed upon voucher 13 Major Hastings made the amounts of disbursements charged?

Answer. Yes, sir; I saw him make it.

Question. Do you know that none of those men had been previously paid?

Answer. Yes, sir. I questioned every man myself. At that time men were enlisted into the regular army out of the volunteer forces, and there were so many of them coming on that it was impossible to get descriptive lists of each of them; and in order to know who were entitled to bounty and who were not, they were questioned upon their arrival at Carlisle before payment of bounty; and if there was any reason to suspect that they had received bounty while in the volunteers, they received no bounty whatever at Carlisle.

Question. Had not the signatures upon voucher number 12, before the making up of voucher number 13, been signed to a point beyond the gold in the voucher?

Answer. I cannot say where that was stopped.

Question. You say you questioned each recruit as to whether he had been previously paid bounty?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Was that the only check where there was so large a number?

Answer. Not always. Sometimes we had a descriptive list of the men; but we questioned those that had not just the same as those that had, and then referred to their descriptive list. We could only get descriptive lists for a few of them.

Question. You will describe to the court the circumstances of the payment of that large body of men—that is, the manner in which they were brought to the rendezvous, who brought them, and by whom the first list of their names was prepared. All the circumstances pertaining to the payment of so large a number of men must be fresh upon your mind, as it was an unusual day's work.

Answer. Some time between the 1st and 14th of November, 1862, Major Hastings received a check for some funds for paying bounty, and not having sufficient money to pay the men as fast as they came on, he was obliged to send an officer to Philadelphia, I think to the assistant treasurer there, to get the check cashed; twenty-five thousand dollars I think it was. While he was gone the men were coming in very fast, there having been an order issued by the War Department that volunteers could enlist into the regular army for the balance of their time, and we had some six or eight, or perhaps more, recruiting stations out. They were brought there while Major Hastings was waiting to get the money on this check. When he received the money the bounty was paid.

Question. Were they all examined by the surgeon on the same day?

Answer. No, sir; they were examined as they came in detachments.

Question. They had been at the depot, then, for some days?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Do you know, of your own knowledge, that none of those men had been paid previous to the 14th of November, as charged upon voucher number 12.

Answer. I know that none of the men paid on voucher number 13 had been paid at Carlisle before that, because if they had I would have had a better recollection of it.

Question. Do you know it to be so?

Answer. Yes, sir, I know they could not be paid there.

Question. Were you furnished with a list of the men to be paid on that day by Major Hastings?

Answer. No, sir; I had the descriptive lists as they came from the stations, and called them in to sign the vouchers from the descriptive lists.

Question. Did you at any time during the course of that month, when you had the vouchers in your hands, observe the same names upon vouchers numbers 12 and 13?

Answer. No, sir, I did not notice them. As I was seeing so many names, I would not remark that I had seen them before.

Question. Why is it not possible, then, if you could witness the same name twice in the same month, that you could pay the same name twice in the same month by the same inadvertence?

Answer. Because I would have some recollection of the man. I was amongst the men all the time, saw them, and I would have some idea whether I had ever seen the man before or not. I could recollect that. A man would not have cheek enough to walk up to the same man and tell him he had not received any bounty when he had received it only a day or two before. I do not think any one could do it.

Question. Would you have known whether the recruit had ever been paid before if he had been paid?

A. Yes, sir, I would.

Question. Did you make all the payments yourself?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. How would you have known it?

Answer. When I called a man in to sign the voucher, I called him from a descriptive roll sent from the station with the men. Every man that received bounty I checked it off. Every man that was not entitled to bounty I wrote "Not entitled to bounty" as the reason why he was not paid bounty on the descriptive list. That was the general custom. After all the men on that descriptive list had been called in, that was laid away, filed, and the men that came from another station would be called in from another descriptive list. Consequently, the same man could not be called in the second time, unless he had gone in some other man's place, and that man would have been up in a few days after his bounty again.

Question. Was there any system of keeping accounts of the amount paid to each man in the office other than the mere signing of the voucher?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Was it kept by items; the amount paid to each man?

Answer. Before that descriptive list, to which I alluded in reply to the last question, was filed, the names of the men that were paid bounty, and had been checked off, so having received bounty, as having signed the rolls, were taken from the descriptive list and charged on the descriptive book. In the case of those who had received bounty in the volunteers, it was done in red ink, I think, and those who received bounty in Carlisle in black ink; I will not be certain about that; it might have been the other way.

Question. Then each item that was paid was entered in the descriptive book?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. At what time was the entry made?

Answer. Directly after the payment.

Question. When you made your affidavit concerning payments in 1862, did Major Hastings ask to examine it and see if it was correct?

Answer. No, sir; I do not think so.

Question. When you made the affidavit, did you examine the descriptive book, in order to ascertain if the vouchers were correct?

Answer. No, sir; I did not examine the descriptive book at all, because that would not have done any good.

Question. Who made up the detachment roll?

Answer. I do not know; all hands went to work on it, everybody in the office.

Question. Did you ever make any?

Answer. Yes, sir; I presume I have.

Question. From what source did you obtain the data for charging upon the detachment rolls the amount of bounty that had been paid to the recruit?

Answer. From the descriptive book. The descriptive rolls of the men that went away at that time all show probably that all the men received bounty. That I can account for in this way: that those who did not receive it in Carlisle received it in the volunteers, so that the amount of $25 is charged against every man. There was no distinction made in charging it. They were all charged $25 just the same as though they had all received it at Carlisle.

Question. You say there was a difference in entering it, in the color of the ink?

Answer. In the descriptive book there was, but not in the descriptive list.

Question. Did not the descriptive book afford at all times evidence as to the amount of money that had been disbursed as bounty and to whom it was paid?

Answer. Yes, sir, all the descriptive books. The descriptive books of the first and second cavalry regimental recruits, on the table in the other room, would show the amount of money disbursed as bounty, but that was not the way we did it. At the end of the month Major Hastings would hand me a piece of paper with the amount of bounty disbursed during the month on it. That I would put on the account current, and when I got the voucher, the amount disbursed that he had handed to me on the paper and the voucher were both the same.

Question. If you at any time had any doubts in your mind as to the correctness of these vouchers, could you not have satisfied yourself whether they were correct or incorrect by examining the descriptive book?

Answer. Yes, sir, by comparing the vouchers with the descriptive book I could; but I never had an opportunity of doing so.

The court then adjourned until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

EDWARD W. HINKS,

Brigadier General U. S. Vols., President.

GARRICK MALLERY,

Lieutenant Colonel, Judge Advocate.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Friday, August 12, 1864.

The court met at ten o'clock a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

Present: All the members of the court, the judge advocate, the accused, his counsel, and the reporters.

The record of yesterday was read and approved.

NEWELL F. UNION.—Examination by the court continued.

Question. Who was the officer that Major Hastings sent to Philadelphia to obtain money prior to the payment of those recruits on the 14th of November, 1862?

Answer. Lieutenant Amory, of the 4th cavalry. He is not of the service now.

Question. Did you ever have an instance at Carlisle barracks where a man presented himself and claimed bounty that you supposed had been paid to some other man previously, and who had given the same name?

Answer. No, sir; I do not recollect of such an occurrence.

Question. Did you ever examine the rolls to make certain that such cases did not occur?

Answer. I do not recollect that I ever examined the rolls at all for that purpose.

Question. While you had charge of vouchers numbers 12 and 13, for the fourth quarter of 1862, was a recruit ever permitted to sign his name, or to have his name placed upon those vouchers without first examining the detachment descriptive roll upon which he came into the depot?

Answer. No, sir; there might have been an occasional exception where a recruit came to the depot with a detachment without his name being on the descriptive list; once in a while they would send them from the recruiting stations, and the name would not appear upon the descriptive list at all ; but those were not very frequent occurrences.

Question. Who devised the form of this voucher ?

Answer. There were two forms commenced.

Question. Who devised the form of this voucher, number 12, for the fourth quarter of 1862 ?

Answer. Major Hastings.

Question. For what purpose are these names entered in the right-hand column ?

Answer. They are entered there as witnesses to the payment of the bounty.

Question. Are they entered as witnesses to anything else ?

Answer. I do not know, I am sure.

Question. Are they or are they not entered as witnesses to the signature of the recruits who received this bounty ?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Are the signatures to which you refer entered in the middle column ?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. When the witness signs his name against a signature, is it a declaration that he saw the money paid to the recruit, and that he witnessed the signature made by the recruit ?

Answer. Yes, sir ; I think it is.

Question. Would it, in your opinion, be right for a man to sign his name in the column against a signature who had not seen the money paid nor the signature made ?

Answer. No, sir ; not if he did it knowingly.

Question. Would it be right for a man to sign his name in this column as a witness against a signature who did not at the time know that he had seen the money paid and the signature written ?

Answer. No, sir ; not if he did it knowingly.

Question. Is this column of witnesses' names of any value to the government in the settlement of recruiting accounts, if the witnesses have not, as a matter of fact, seen the payments and the signatures ?

Answer. The witnesses are supposed to have seen the payments. I do not see how they could be of any use if it was known at the time that the witnesses had not seen the payments.

Question. When you made the affidavit, marked " Exhibit D," did you mean to state on oath that you were present at all the payments alleged in Major Hastings's recruiting accounts for the months of July, August, September, October, November, and December, 1862 ?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Were you present at all the payments alleged in these accounts ?

Answer. I think I was present at all actual payments ; I was present and saw all the actual payments that were made.

Question. Were you present at all the payments alleged in those accounts ?

Answer. But at the time that affidavit was made I did not know that there were any fraudulent payments.

Question. I will ask you the same question again. Were you present at all the payments alleged in those accounts ?

Answer. From what I know now, I know I was not ; but at the time the affidavit was made it was supposed to be correct by me.

Question. You then meant to swear that you were present at every payment set up in those accounts when you made this affidavit ?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. And you now know that that affidavit was incorrect.

Answer. Yes, sir, because I have had an examination of the vouchers that are enclosed there, and I find that there were payments purporting to be made which I knew nothing of at the time.

Question. When you swore that you had carefully verified every payment with the original enlistment of each recruit as the payment was made to him, did you mean to swear that you had verified every payment alleged in those accounts by comparing it with an original enlistment?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. How then did you make mistakes in verifying those accounts?

Answer. I am not aware that there were any mistakes made.

Question. If you verified every alleged payment for those months, by comparing it with an enlistment, how does it happen that you now say that you were mistaken in your affidavit as to some of the payments?

Answer. The fact of there having been fraudulent payments made on those vouchers without my knowledge will account for the mistake, as you call it.

Question. Have you any other answer to that question?

Answer. I do not see what other answer I can give.

Question. If you then had the accounts from July to December, 1862, alluded to in this affidavit, and examined them and compared them with the rolls in your office, would you have made this affidavit?

Answer. No, sir; I could not have done it.

Question. You have stated that the large number of men paid on voucher No. 13, for fourth quarter of 1862, was owing to the fact that Major Hastings was out of money. How long had the major been out of money?

Answer. I could not say how long; he might have been entirely out, or he might have a little, but not enough to pay the men that were there. Perhaps they might have been there a week or more accumulating before he could get a sufficient amount of money to pay them.

Question. What had become of the vouchers from July to December, 1862, at the time of your making the affidavit marked Exhibit D?

Answer. I do not know where they were, I am sure. They had been sent to the Second Auditor's at the end of the month or quarter, and I am not sure whether they were returned or not when the amounts were disallowed, and the retained papers were in the possession of Major Hastings.

Question. Do you know whether any of them had been returned?

Answer. I am not positive whether there were any of them returned at all or not.

Question. Do you know whether any of them had not been returned?

Answer. I do not recollect.

Question. Was a cash account kept by Major Hastings?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Who kept the cash book?

Answer. I kept the book while I was there.

Question. Did you make all the entries on the cash book?

Answer. All the entries of money disbursed to recruiting officers, and at the end of the month the amounts paid for bounties during the month were put down. It was a mere form of a recruiting account current ruled in a book.

Question. Was the cash account kept expressly for that, or was it a general cash account for all the disbursements he made?

Answer. No, sir; it was not for all the disbursements; he had the form of a recruiting account current ruled in a book. All recruiting funds that were disbursed by Major Hastings during the month were entered in that book. In another book was the form of an account current for subsistence funds. The amounts disbursed to recruiting officers were entered in that book.

Question. A separate book was kept for each branch?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Did you balance the cash account at the end of the month in that book?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Did you ever have any trouble in making it balance?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Did it always come out just right?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Where was this book kept?

Answer. I kept it.

Question. It was in your possession?

Answer. I think so; I will not be certain whether I had it, or Major Hastings had it. I do not know positively where it was kept.

Question. Was the cash book kept where it was at all times accessible to you or others?

Answer. Not at all times; not if it was kept by Major Hastings; if I kept it myself it was.

Question. Who made the entries. Cannot you recollect a book that you used so frequently and constantly as that, and where you kept it?

Answer. I did not use it frequently at all, may be three or four times in the month.

Question. Where were you when Major Hastings gave you the rough draught for the affidavit which appears here marked as Exhibit D?

Answer. I was in the adjutant's office, or in the office of the superintendent.

Question. Who was there besides yourself and Major Hastings?

Answer. I suppose all the clerks were there; I do not know who was there and who was absent, I am sure.

Question. What did Major Hastings say to you there?

Answer. He told me that his accounts had been disallowed on account of there not being enlistments filed with the vouchers, which it was impossible to do on account of the enlistments having passed out of his hands, and he told me to make a copy of the affidavit and take it to town and have it sworn to.

5. Brigadier General H. E. Paine, United States volunteers, is relieved from general court-martial duty in this city, and will repair, without delay, to Springfield, Illinois, from which place he will report by letter to Major General Heintzleman, commanding northern department, for assignment to the command of the military district of Illinois.

By order of the Secretary of War.

E. D. TOWNSEND
Assistant Adjutant General.

Official:

R. WILLIAMS,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Lieutenant Colonel G. MALLERY,
Judge Advocate General Court-Martial.

Whereupon General Paine retired from the court.

The witness desired the following questions and answers to be re-read to him, in order that he might correct or further explain one of his answers:

"Question. When you swore that you had carefully verified every payment with the original enlistment of each recruit as the payment was made to him, did you mean to swear that you had verified every payment alleged in those accounts by comparing it with an original enlistment?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question. How, then, did you make mistakes in verifying these accounts?

"Answer. I am not aware that there were any mistakes made."

The witness. I wish to add to that last answer that the accounts were verified at the date of payment, before the fraudulent entries were made, and consequently were not seen by me and could not be verified; and when the affidavit was made I was under the impression that I had verified the whole of them, and that only genuine payments were included in the vouchers, having implicit confidence in Major Hastings, and not thinking or supposing for a moment that he would give me a thing to do which he knew was wrong, or that he thought was wrong.

Question. What was the date of your affidavit?

Answer. Some time in January, 1863, I think.

The witness requested the following question and answer to be re-read to him, in order that he might make a correction in his answer:

"Question. Where were you when Major Hastings gave you the rough draught for the affidavit which appears here, marked Exhibit D?

"Answer. I was in the adjutant's office, or in the office of the superintendent."

The witness. I wish to make that read that Major Hastings called me into his office when he gave me that rough draught.

The following question and answer were re-read to the witness, at his request, for the purpose of making a correction in his answer:

"Question. Who was there beside yourself and Major Hastings?

"Answer. I suppose all the clerks were there. I do not know who was there and who was absent, I am sure."

The witness. The clerks would not be in his office; they were in another office by themselves. I do not know whether any one was there. There might have been or might not. I do not recollect.

Question. You stated that Major Hastings told you that his accounts had been disallowed on account of there not being enlistments filed with the vouchers, and for you to make a copy of the affidavit and take it into town and have it sworn to. Was that all the major said?

Answer. That is all I recollect now. It was some two years ago. I cannot recollect everything.

Question. Can you describe pretty nearly the manner of his giving you that direction, the language he used, and whether you understood it in the nature of an order or a request?

Answer. I understood it in the nature of a request to do it, and not as an order. He wished me to do it, and I did it.

Question. Did he tell you whom he desired to have sign it in addition to yourself?

Answer. No, sir; any one of the clerks. I think he said, "Take some one else." I cannot recollect the exact words he used.

Question. Why did you examine the rolls and books in the office to ascertain if the draught of the affidavit was correct?

Answer. Because I knew the nature of an affidavit; that if I took an affidavit I had to swear to it, of course, and that I ought to know something about it if I made an affidavit of the fact. I merely looked over it to prove that everything was correct, as far as I knew.

Question. State what rolls and books you examined.

Answer. The principal point that I examined in the affidavit was the point of the enlistments having all passed out of the hands of Major Hastings in pursuance of recruiting regulations, I think he said. I examined all the retailmen peistments that we had on file there and could not find any enlistments for the months mentioned in the affidavit. That was the principal examination that I made. I could not arrive at any definite conclusion or anything else, for I had nothing to guide me by at all.

Question. In entering the item of disbursements for bounty upon the cash book at the end of each month, did you take it from the voucher, or was it handed you upon a separate sheet of paper by Major Hastings?

Answer. The amount disbursed during the month was handed me on a slip of paper. If there was more than one voucher the amount would be put down in the cash book voucher No. so and so, such an amount: voucher so and so, another amount; and I would enter the whole amount as the total disbursements for bounty.

Question. In one entry?

Answer. I think it was invariably in one entry. It was not put down in one amount, but so much on a voucher, giving the number of the voucher. That is the way it was put down.

Question. At what time in the month were these items usually handed to you?

Answer. At the end of the month, or it might be the first or second day of the month, when the accounts for the preceding month were being made up.

Question. These items, then, were handed to you when the accounts were being made up?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. If there had been a difference in the amount given you by Major Hastings of disbursements made during this month upon each voucher and the amount that appeared as the footing of the voucher, would you have been likely to observe it?

Answer. Then I could not balance the account.

Question. Then the item charged upon the cash book as being disbursed for voucher of such and such a number was precisely the same as that that actually appeared upon the voucher in the case, was it?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Do you know that of your own knowledge in the accounts that you had anything to do with?

Answer. I used to make up the papers from the books. That was the guide. When there was a disbursement made during the month it was put down in the book, and at the end of the month I made the accounts from this book.

Question. If at any time there had been included fraudulent payments in the vouchers it would have been apparent by examining the cash book together with the descriptive book?

Answer. No, I do not think that it would.

Question. All the names upon the descriptive book are names of real persons, are they not?

Answer. Yes, sir. The way this would occur, if I took a month where the accounts had all been settled up, and had gone through the amounts of disbursements charged on the descriptive book for that month and compared it with the amount charged on the cash book, it would have been seen that there was a difference; but during the time I was there I never had any occasion to mistrust that there was anything of the kind, and never thought of doing such a thing. The difference would have been seen if there had been a date of payment placed on the descriptive book, which there was not, and then if the payments had been dated as they were charged, I could not tell whether they were put in one month or any other month. I might have run over the book and seen when the men came there and not known when it was paid.

Question. The descriptive book shows the date of the time when the man arrived and left.

Answer. It shows the date arrived and left, but not the date of payment.

Question. Can you tell what the entries on the cash book are for November, 1862, for the bounty disbursements ?

Answer. I am sure I cannot recollect. We might not have commenced that book at the time. I do not recollect when we commenced the book.

Question. Can you say whether it is a single entry ?

Answer. Each voucher was a single entry, because we wanted to show the number of the voucher. In making up an abstract of disbursements you have to show the number of the voucher. This account current that was ruled in this book was ruled in such a way that it answered for an abstract of disbursements and an account current, too, on account of its showing the number of the voucher.

Question. When Major Hastings handed you the memorandum to enter, did he hand you this voucher or any other ? (Exhibiting a voucher to witness.)

Answer. No, sir, I do not know that he did.

Question. When you entered the amount of disbursements you got it from a memorandum given you by Major Hastings ?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Did he also give you the voucher ?

Answer. No, sir, he did not give me the voucher at that time at all.

Question. He simply gave you the memorandum, and you entered it from that ?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. How long had you been in the service ?

Answer. I enlisted in September, 1860, and was discharged October 9, 1863.

Question. What was your business before you enlisted ?

Answer. I was a clerk.

Question. In what place ?

Answer. In Boston, Massachusetts.

Question. Were you engaged there during the summer of 1860, prior to your enlistment ?

Answer. No, sir; I was in Louisville, Kentucky, then.

Question. Were you engaged in business in Louisville ?

Answer. I went there to accept a situation, but when I got there it did not suit me, and I did not take it.

Question. Where did you enlist ?

Answer. In Louisville, Kentucky.

Question. Did you ever live in Canada ?

Answer. No, sir; I have been there; I have travelled through there, but never lived there.

Question. Were you in Canada in 1860 ?

Answer. I do not think I was; I was there in 1859, or about that time. I just travelled through; that is all.

Question. You did not stay any time ?

Answer. No, sir; I did not stop anywhere while there, at all.

Question. Were you acquainted with Orsay then ?

Answer. No, sir; I never knew him before he came to Carlisle.

Question. What kind of an establishment were you clerk in; in what business were you engaged ?

Answer. The boot and shoe business and clothing; it was a small establishment. I was engaged with Cheever & Thayer at one time, a small establishment; they had a store in the country.

There being no objection, the following questions were put by the accused :

Question. What induced you to correct the testimony you had previously given since General Paine received the order relieving him from service in this court ?

Answer. I spoke to the judge advocate of the court, during the interval that succeeded the reception of the order relieving General Paine, and I told him that I wanted to correct two or three answers that I recollected I had made; that I had recalled the subject, and I found there were several answers that I had given that I was mistaken in.

Question. What I wanted to get at particularly was, whether you had seen Mr. Orsay in the interval?

Answer. No, sir; I did not.

The court then adjourned until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

JUDGE ADVOCATE of General Court Martial,
No. 205 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C.

The court was cleared for deliberation.

The court being opened, the judge advocate announced that in consequence of the order being received, and at the request of the counsel for the accused, the court adjourned until Wednesday morning, August 17, at ten o'clock, in the town of Carlisle, at such place as the judge advocate may provide.

EDWARD W. HINKS,

Brigadier General U. S. Vols., President.

GARRICK MALLERY,

Lieutenant Colonel, Judge Advocate.

WAR DEPARTMENT,

Bureau of Military Justice, September 26, 1864.

To the Secretary of War :

Major David H. Hastings, U. S. A., was tried July 21, 1864, before a general court martial convened at Washington by order of the Secretary of War, upon the following charges :

" 1st. Embezzlement of money of the United States.

" 2d. Knowingly using forged and counterfeit signatures upon vouchers, for the purpose of obtaining from the government of the United States the allowance of false and fraudulent claims.

" 3d. Forging and counterfeiting signatures upon vouchers, for the purpose of obtaining from the government of the United States the allowance of false and fraudulent claims."

To the first charge were ten specifications, each alleging the embezzlement at various dates, from September, 1862, to January, 1864, of sums of money belonging to the United States, amounting in all to about twenty-seven thousand (27,000) dollars, which money had been intrusted to him at Carlisle, Pennsylvania, to be used in the payment of advance bounty to recruits.

To the second charge were also ten specifications, which alleged that accused did, at various times between the dates above specified, present, or cause to be presented, at the office of the Second Auditor of the Treasury, in Washington, sundry accounts of moneys expended by him in the payment of advance bounties to recruits, which accounts he well knew to be fraudulent, and did use and present, at the same time, false vouchers, purporting to be receipts from recruits for such advance bounties, which vouchers contained, in all, upwards of eleven hundred names fraudulently inserted therein.

The specifications to the third charge were nine in number, and alleged the forging and counterfeiting by accused, with his own hand, upon the vouchers referred to in the specifications to the second charge, of, in all, one hundred and forty-six (146) names of recruits.

The court found the accused guilty of all the specifications under the first charge, making some few changes which reduced the amount said to be embezzled to twenty-six thousand six hundred and seventy-five (26,675) dollars; and guilty of the charge.

Under the second charge, its findings were guilty of all the specifications and of the charge.

Under the third, of three of the nine specifications alleging actual forgery with his own hand, not guilty, and of the remaining six, guilty; reducing the number of names alleged to be so forged, from one hundred and forty-six (146) to fourteen (14).

The court sentenced accused to be cashiered, and forever disqualified from holding office under the United States government; to refund to the treasury the amount found to be embezzled, viz., twenty-six thousand six hundred and seventy-five (26,675) dollars; to pay a fine of five thousand (5,000) dollars, and to be imprisoned for the term of one year, at such place as the Secretary of War may direct; and to remain so imprisoned until the fine and the sum embezzled be paid, such imprisonment not to exceed five years. Also that the charges, findings, and sentence should be published in the newspapers of Washington and Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

It is believed by this bureau, after a very careful examination of the record and its exhibits, that the accused is not guilty of fraudulent conduct in the transactions for which he has been brought to trial, and that the findings of the court-martial are erroneous. Great and culpable carelessness in the system followed by accused for the management of his affairs, by which carelessness the frauds undoubtedly perpetrated were rendered easy of execution, is clearly shown by the testimony; but it is thought that the accused, however responsible pecuniarily for the losses sustained by the treasury, is not guilty of the crimes of forgery and embezzlement of which he has been convicted.

The history of the case is briefly as follows:

Major David H. Hastings, the accused, enlisted in the regular army as a private soldier in July, 1837, and served by successive enlistments until July, 1848, when he was promoted to a second lieutenancy in the 1st dragoons. From this position he rose, by gradual promotion through the various grades, to the rank of major in the 5th cavalry, which he obtained September 5, 1863. In December, 1861, he was placed on duty at Carlisle as superintendent of mounted recruiting service for the United States army, and as such was called upon to disburse large amounts of money in the payment of advance bounties to recruits. He had previously been a disbursing officer for the government for many years, without dishonor.

These bounty disbursements he accounted for quarterly, and a part of the time monthly, to the Second Auditor of the Treasury, by regular accounts of expenditure, accompanied by lists of the recruited men as vouchers. The settlement of his accounts for the third and fourth quarters of 1862 was suspended by the Second Auditor, because of the absence of the enlistment papers of the men alleged to have been paid; without which papers it was difficult to verify his expenditures. The accused was at once notified of this, and, in reply, forwarded to the Auditor's office the affidavit of two of his clerks, Onion and Webb, both enlisted men, who swore that they had been present at the payment of all the bounties specified in his accounts for July, August, September, October, November, and December, 1862; that they had carefully verified every payment with the original enlistment of each recruit as the payment was made to him; that these enlistments had passed out of the hands of the accused; and that no other evidence of the alleged disbursements could be furnished than the bounty receipt rolls filed with the accounts.

Upon receipt of this affidavit Major Hastings's accounts were provisionally passed; but some suspicions arising from the state of his subsequent accounts, he was required to furnish, in place of the enlistment papers, the names of all recruiting officers whose recruits he had paid bounty. This he did so far as he was able, though his return was imperfect in consequence of the destruction of many of his papers at the time of the rebel raid upon Carlisle. An examination of this list by the Second Auditor showed the existence of great frauds in the accounts, in the introduction of fictitious names of recruits, of the names of deceased and discharged soldiers, and in the repetition of the names of men who had already once received their bounties.

After the notice received by accused of the suspension of his accounts for the third and fourth quarters of 1862, he continued to send in quarterly or monthly accounts of his disbursements, accompanied by bounty receipt rolls as vouchers, up to January, 1864, all of which were found to be replete with fraud. The entries of forged and fictitious names increased in number with each successive account, until in one of the vouchers for the account of January, 1864, there were but twenty-seven genuine signatures out of a total of two hundred and forty-eight names; the balance were forgeries.

A commission was appointed to proceed to Carlisle to examine Major Hastings's books and papers, and they reported that he was free from suspicion, and that the frauds had been committed by his clerks. One of these, an enlisted man of the name of Orsay, (not, however, his real name,) was arrested, in February, 1864, by the accused, in consequence of this report, and sent to Washington to be delivered to Judge Advocate Turner; but on the day of his arrival in the city he escaped from his guards and fled to Canada. These guards, Sergeant Ryan and Private White, were tried by court-martial for their negligence, and convicted. They rested their defence solely on their own carelessness, and implicated no one else in any way. The investigation of Major Hastings's papers went on, and it was determined to bring him to trial. Orsay was induced to return from Canada by the promise of a full pardon; and his testimony, if to be relied upon, was fatal to the character of the accused, as he testified that the accused saw him at Willards' hotel, while under guard, and that he confessed to him his guilt, and persuaded him to make his escape by threats and promises.

In the course of the trial the court was ordered to transfer its sittings to Carlisle; and while in session there, another witness, Sergeant Ryan, who had been one of Orsay's guards, and who had given the judge advocate to understand he would confirm Orsay's testimony as to the circumstances of his escape, also disappeared. His brother, James Ryan, was sent to bring him back, and after the interval of a week did so, under the inducement again of a full pardon; whereupon Sergeant Ryan testified that accused had ordered him to let Orsay go, and had also bribed him, Ryan, to leave Carlisle and go to Canada. The amount said to have been given him was eighteen hundred dollars. Orsay swore on the stand that accused had promised him ample means of support in Canada, and that he had written accused from Toronto, demanding $5,000; and he produced a letter purporting to have been written by Major Hastings, in which the latter begged him not to aid in his ruin, and stated that he was already a beggared man. This letter was addressed to Edward Oliver, Toronto, which Orsay swore was the name he bore while he was there.

It was proved at the trial that accused purchased in 1863 thirty-five thousand dollars' worth of United States bonds; and it was also proved by Mr. Rheem, a United States assessor, that on inquiring of the accused, at an interview in September 1863, the amount of his taxable property, he answered that he had not a dollar in the world.

If the testimony which established the circumstances of the escape of Orsay and Ryan is to be believed, these facts alone are so damnatory as to lead at once to a belief in the guilt of the accused. Still more absolute is our conviction of his guilt if we accept the evidence of Orsay and others of his clerks, as to the method in which his frauds were committed. But it is the opinion of this office that this testimony is not to be believed; and that others were seeking to shield themselves from punishment by fastening the responsibility upon an innocent man, the multiplicity of whose affairs led him to place too unguarded a confidence in their integrity.

The accused is charged substantially with "embezzling" government funds, by presenting forged documents with a guilty knowledge of the fraud. No other method of accomplishing his object has been hinted at by the prosecuting officer. No suggestion is offered of his being connected with confederates in the business. No testimony in the record points at any other individual as the perpetrator of the eleven hundred forgeries in the vouchers; yet the court, though they convict the accused for knowingly using for his own benefit this immense number of fictitious receipts, convict him of the actual forging with his own hand of less than one-tenth of the names, which Orsay, the chief witness, swears are undoubtedly in Major Hastings's own handwriting. They thus, while relying on Orsay's testimony, plainly discredit his statements, and they convict accused of a fraudulent use of counterfeited names, which, as they acquit him of being the forger, they must, of course, have believed to have been done by a confederate; and that confederate, from the way in which the business of the office is carried on, could have been no other than the chief witness to his frauds. This, of itself, is sufficient to lead to a very cautious weighing of Orsay's testimony before accepting it, since he positively swears that he was innocent of any knowledge of the embezzlements, and there is no suggestion that any one else was or could have been a particeps criminis. There is no suggestion of his assuming the position of State's evidence. He fully inculpates Major Hastings, and Major Hastings alone, while he entirely exonerates himself. With the opportunities given to him, and the fellow clerks who corroborate him, for defrauding the accused, he and they should present a clean and unassailable record of character and conduct before their testimony can be taken as proof to condemn their employer. It will appear hereafter whether they do so or not.

On the arrival of recruits at Carlisle—and since the beginning of the war their number has been large—they were taken to Major Hastings's office to be examined by the surgeon. Thence they passed into another office in the same building and there signed the bounty receipt rolls. These rolls were kept open for fresh arrivals, and not finished up after each squad of recruits had signed. After the names had been obtained—it does not appear how long after—the rolls were brought back by Orsay or Onion, to Major Hastings, and the money received from him for the payment of $25 to each man, and the money thus obtained was paid to the recruits by Orsay or Onion, as the case might be, in their own office, and not in Major Hastings's presence. The only exception to this course was in the case of voucher No. 13, of September, 1862, when a very large number of recruits were collected at the post; and this voucher is not impeached. Orsay testified at the beginning of his examination that he had control of and access to all the records and papers in the superintendent's office, as also in the adjutant's office; but subsequently, to avert suspicion of participation in the discovered forgeries, he alters this statement and swears that after each squad of recruits had signed, the rolls were at once returned to the accused, and kept by him under lock and key until they were again required. But this statement is successfully controverted by other testimony, and there can be no question that his first and unguarded statement is the true one; that he had access to all the papers in the office; that they were at all times subject to his examination, and that he took them when he pleased, and returned them at his discretion. He further swears that at the end of each month the accused gave him the various papers and vouchers tied up in a package, and ordered him to seal and post them, with particular instructions not to examine them. This assertion, considering his relations with his employer, is improbable; and it is difficult to believe that Major Hastings would have so recklessly awakened suspicions and directed them upon himself. Orsay testifies that at the end of each month Major Hastings would produce the rolls from his desk, and order him to witness them. This he did, as he states, because so ordered; and when asked why he should have been willing to attest, with his own name, so many fictitious signatures on each roll—for instance, the roll containing twenty-seven genuine and ten times as many fictitious names—when he must have known, by having himself paid them, that the number of recruits actually received was far less than appeared upon the voucher, he answered that he did so because he acted under the orders of a superior officer!

That he should have been willing to commit a written falsehood in so many hundred instances certainly tends to discredit his testimony.

Again, in several of the vouchers the false names are largely made up of those men who had previously died or deserted, or had been transferred to other places, as shown on the books of the office. These books are proved to have been in the keeping of Orsay, Onion, and Butts, another clerk. To make such extensive use in the fraudulent vouchers of these names must, it can scarcely be doubted, have been done by one or more of those who had charge of these books. The accused could no doubt have sent for them; but Orsay does not pretend that he ever did so, and it is not probable that he would thus have exposed himself to almost certain detection.

A part of the fraudulent vouchers, containing hundreds of forged signatures, are witnessed by Onion on those occasions when he, and not Orsay, saw to the payment of the bounties. He also, it will be observed, thus certified in hundreds of cases to a palpable falsehood.

A small number of the signatures on the receipt rolls are found by the court to be in the handwriting of Major Hastings. Orsay swears to many; but the court, in the exercise of its own judgment, convict him of fourteen only. It is shown, however, by the testimony of the Rev. J. A. Ross, chaplain of the post, that Orsay had, on one occasion, shown to him his skill in imitating Major Hastings's hand, so that he was wholly unable to distinguish the false from the genuine; and had also imitated witness's writing at sight with a truly remarkable accuracy. Alexander T. Ewing, a cabinet-maker, testifies that Orsay boasted to him, and produced from his pocket papers to prove, that he had frequently imitated the "old man's" signature so exactly that he would never have known that it was not his own writing. Possessed of this accomplishment, it is difficult not to suspect at least that Orsay has purposely strengthened his case by availing himself of his chirographic skill in the preparation of the vouchers.

Orsay swears that he expressed his suspicions of Major Hastings's dishonest practices to O'Brien and Maynard, fellow-clerks. This is denied point-blank by both these men. On the call being made upon accused by the Second Auditor for his old enlistment papers, Orsay represents himself as saying to O'Brien and Maynard, "if any frauds should be committed, Major Hastings would be the author of them." He made no sign when he attested the signatures of two hundred and forty-eight recruits, knowing at the time that he had paid only twenty-seven of that number. The suggestion of his suspicions on the mere call for old enlistment papers would seem to show a knowledge of the use to which they might be put for dishonest purposes.

In weighing the probabilities of the guilt of Major Hastings, it should be borne in mind that at the opening of Orsay's testimony he says: "As superintendent's clerk, I had charge of all the papers pertaining to the recruiting service, such as keeping the records of the superintendent, keeping his papers, making out his accounts at the end of the month, and every other duty, in fact, pertaining to the recruiting for the mounted service." His sole business was to attend to these things. The accused had many other matters to arrange and oversee, and his engagements had vastly increased since the commencement of the war. The probabilities, therefore, seem to be in favor of the accused.

Major Hastings is shown by unimpeachable testimony to have led a quiet and inexpensive life, and to have earned the respect of the community. Orsay, on the other hand, is shown to have been in the receipt of a corporal's pay, with some extras, and presents for extra work. He testifies, also, that he was without funds when he enlisted. Yet it is proved that he occupied permanently a furnished room at a house of ill fame, to which he also resorted on his occasional clandestine returns from desertion ; to have exhibited a large roll of bills, fifties, twenties, and tens, to Mr. Ewing ; to have told O'Brien that he had thousands ; and to have engaged Ewing to make for him a box with a secret compartment, to resemble a bunk, in which he said he wished to conceal a sword and a pair of pistols.

It is scarcely necessary to analyze the testimony of this witness any further.

To enter into an examination of the evidence of the other witnesses upon the conduct of affairs at the office in Carlisle as minutely as has been done with that of Orsay, would extend this report to an interminable length.

It is enough to say that Onion, who was a clerk in the office a portion of the time, and who corroborates Orsay in his details to a considerable extent, is shown to have certified to the payment of hundreds of fictitious and forged signatures ; to have sworn, in an affidavit referred to previously, that he had carefully verified every voucher for six months in 1862, and that they were accurate in every respect, whereas they are found to be full of false entries ; and to have testified that he saw no harm in Orsay's attempt to levy hush-money on Major Hastings to the extent of five thousand dollars in gold.

Butts, another clerk, who identifies some of the forged signatures as being in Major Hastings's handwriting, is shown to have gone to Carlisle after Orsay's flight, and to have had an interview with the accused. The latter, in his address to the court, states that Butts demanded five thousand dollars as a consideration for Orsay's keeping out of the way. Whether this is the case or not does not appear ; but Butts, on his examination, declines to say why he went to the accused, on the ground that it would criminate himself.

Mr. Frederick Chase, a clerk in the Second Auditor's office, and the only other important witness in this branch of the case, testifies at great length to the existence and discovery of the frauds. His testimony is unimpeachable, nor does it require to be impeached.

It will be seen from the foregoing review, and it is demonstrated by other discrepancies and falsehoods too numerous to particularize, that the testimony of those witnesses who fix directly upon the accused the knowledge and perpetration of the forgeries, is so contradictory and interested as to be unworthy of belief, unless corroborated by other and circumstantial evidence.

Major Hastings is accused of having prompted and assisted the escape of Orsay, and the subsequent flight of Ryan ; and if this is believed, it is more than sufficient to justify the findings of the court.

Orsay was arrested by Major Hastings as the suspected perpetrator of the frauds, and sent to Washington under guard of Sergeant Ryan and Private White. He escaped and fled to Canada. He testified that the accused took him up into his room at Willards', and terrified him by threats ; that the accused then called Sergeant Ryan up and said to him, "You may let Orsay do what he likes ; you may let him go if he likes." Orsay further states that, while in his room, the latter admitted his guilt in so many words, and said, if convicted, it would be ten or fifteen years for him. Ryan and White both corroborate him to a certain extent, and implicate the accused in Orsay's flight. But the character of these men, the inherent improbability of the story, and their contradictions of Orsay, render their statements more than unreliable. Orsay testifies that the accused confessed his guilt, and urged him to desert ; but swears that, though he immediately did so, he made no promise to that effect. He testifies that the accused came down stairs at Willards', and ordered the guards to let him go. Ryan and White contradict this statement. They heard no such order. Ryan states that Orsay told him he wished to escape to save himself from the penitentiary, while Orsay swears that he was so reluctant to fly that he refused to make any promise to the accused. There are thought to be inherent improbabilities also in the story. Why should Major Hastings have arrested Orsay at Carlisle and sent him to Washington, there to let him escape by bribery, with the certainty of two additional witnesses to his guilt, when he could more easily have provided for his disappearance at once from Carlisle. It seems improbable, too, that the accused should so needlessly have confessed his guilt to Orsay; nor does it appear likely that an innocent man like Orsay would, on vague promises of assistance, have consented under any circumstances to fly, and thus take upon himself the character of a criminal for the benefit of another. By so doing, he consents to become infamous to screen another from just punishment. He produces at the trial two letters, signed "H.," one of them addressed to "Edward Oliver, Toronto," and postmarked "Carlisle;" the other, without address or envelope, which he states was written by accused in answer to his demands for five thousand dollars. They bear a remarkable resemblance to Major Hastings's writing, and, if genuine, are extremely suspicious even in their very vagueness of allusion. But, on the other hand, the only evidence of Orsay's assuming the name of Oliver while in Canada is his own assertion, and his skill in forgery is found to be so great as to make it not incredible that his own dexterous penmanship produced them.

Again, abundant opportunities for Orsay to consult with the witnesses for the prosecution, and to arrange the details of their story, is demonstrated to have existed. During the trial in Washington, Orsay boarded at Onion's house; (at Carlisle, in his room at the house of prostitution.) Within an hour after the arrival in Washington of Ryan and White, they meet Orsay, drink with him, and are with him constantly and daily during the progress of the trial, as he himself admits on cross-examination. Assuming that a conspiracy exists, here was abundant time for the arrangement of the plot. It is a noticeable circumstance, in estimating the veracity of the witnesses, that on the court's reassembling, after its daily adjournments, the principal witnesses are constantly asking and receiving permission to alter and amend their testimony.

After the transfer of the court to Carlisle, Michael Ryan repeats the precise line of conduct of which Orsay had set the example, and disappears. He is brought back after a week's delay, under promise of pardon, and testifies that Major Hastings told him he should stick to the story he told on his trial as to the escape of Orsay; and that he ran away for fear that his present testimony might again get him into trouble; that he stayed in New York, where his brother, James Ryan, a lance corporal, came to find him, bringing eighteen hundred dollars, given by the accused, and presumed by him to be intended for Michael. James Ryan swears that the accused gave him not eighteen hundred, but two thousand dollars, without saying for whom, and, presuming it to be for his brother, he gave him the whole of it. According, however, to repeated statements of this James Ryan, made to his companions and testified to upon the stand, Michael Ryan stole and ran away with this money; both, then, assert under oath that the accused gave it to them. James Ryan receives this money back from his brother on the morning of his examination, and secretes it; on being pressed, he states that it is in his bureau drawer, where he has "thousands," an expression which he subsequently alters to hundreds. The drawer, on being examined, proves to contain thirty-three hundred dollars, an unlikely sum for a lance corporal in the regular army to be honestly possessed of. Five questions he declines to answer at his examination, on the ground that they would criminate himself. His testimony, with that of his brother, is full of improbabilities. He is sent to New York to bring back his brother, yet states that he carries with him and delivers the bribe of two thousand dollars, which was his brother's inducement to desert. He reports officially to his employer that his brother was in Canada, and that he had gone there after him, and then admits on the stand the falsity of this statement. He refuses for so long a time to disclose to the court where he had concealed his brother's money, that he leaves the impression that it is his own. Both Michael Ryan and White are proved to have repeatedly given a different explanation of Orsay's escape, and to have relied on it in their defence at their own trials.

It was proved, and admitted by Major Hastings, that he gave to Ryan and White each one hundred dollars on their return to Carlisle after their release from confinement. This was certainly a singularly unwise thing to do under the circumstances, but it is thought to be insufficient to outweigh the many improbabilities and falsehoods in the narratives of the witnesses for the prosecution. His own explanation is, that having had perfect confidence in both these men while under his command, he believed the story of their hardships which they told him on their return from imprisonment, and felt sympathy for them, and that neither of them had ever hinted to him that they had connived at Orsay's flight.

The events of Orsay's and Ryan's disappearance at different stages of the trial bear a remarkable resemblance to one another, and suggest the thought that they were both conceived in the same subtle brain; nor, on studying the evidence, does suspicion turn upon the accused to the exclusion of other hypotheses.

Major Hastings succeeds, it is believed, in showing the possession of means very nearly if not quite sufficient to cover his investments in government bonds, without resorting to embezzlement. This he does by producing a series of letters from the firm of Robert Campbell & Co., of St. Louis, the first dated April 5, 1859, which demonstrate, if genuine, the possession of many thousands of dollars on loan in that city even at that early date, and subsequently increased by accumulation of interest. These letters are verified by witnesses who testify to their familiarity with Robert Campbell's hand, and are accompanied by their envelopes, postmarked regularly of their respective dates. They have every appearance of genuineness, and would seem to prove satisfactorily that accused had accumulated upwards of thirty thousand dollars before his appointment to Carlisle barracks. He proves that one check of $18,074 01 was actually applied out of these western means to the payment of the larger of his two investments in United States securities. One very serious stumbling-block in his path to an honorable acquittal is thus successfully removed.

The testimony of Mr. Rheem, the United States assessor, is damaging to the accused, and his conduct in the interview with that gentleman is difficult of explanation. He explains it himself by saying that the meeting was in the street, and that when Mr. Rheem inquired of him if he had any property subject to taxation he supposed he referred to real estate. Whether this be correct or not, it is certain that Mr. Rheem neither required him to answer under oath, nor furnished him with any blanks on which to certify to his taxable means; and its damaging effect in this case is very materially diminished by the proof that accused was at the very time possessed of considerable personal property in the west.

It is the opinion of this bureau that the following points are deducible from the testimony:

1. That other persons besides the accused had better opportunities and more powerful motives for the commission of the frauds.
2. The method in which the business of Major Hastings's office was carried on, turns suspicion upon others with greater force than upon himself.
3. The evidence of personal forgery by accused is very unsatisfactory, and Orsay, who enjoyed ample opportunities for fraud, is shown to be an adept in counterfeiting the handwriting of others, and especially of the accused.
4. The unskillfulness, audacity, and persistence, with which the frauds were committed for so many months after the first discoveries were made, show a disregard of detection which it is difficult to believe the accused would have been capable of.
5. It is not difficult to conceive that the same men who would thus defraud their employer, if it be admitted that they have done so, would conspire to protect themselves by a concerted tale, supported, if necessary, by abundant falsehood under oath.

6. Most of the witnesses whose testimony tends to implicate the accused, are shown to have repeatedly falsified themselves, and more than one of them is proved to be of abandoned character.

It is noticeable also that they convict themselves repeatedly of an utter want of principle. If they witness signatures, they falsify on the stand their own attestation; if they fly, it is to shield the accused; and, while they acknowledge themselves ready to be bribed, they confess in the same breath the baseness of betraying the man whose money they receive.

The accused offers in his behalf the very strongest testimonials to the integrity of his character, from officers of all grades in the regular army. These, though of little influence in reducing the weight of reliable proof of guilt, are, it is thought, well worthy of consideration when, as in the present case, the character of the testimony excites such grave suspicions of the existence of a conspiracy against an innocent man.

Undoubtedly, when a loss is incurred by the government, it is incumbent upon the officer responsible for the safety of the funds intrusted to him to account for their loss, or to show his innocence of a fraudulent appropriation of them. This, it is believed, the accused has succeeded in doing.

He is shown to have been too much at the mercy of dishonest assistants in the disbursement of his money; he is shown to have possessed sufficient funds for the investments which so greatly aggravated suspicion; and the witnesses against him are proved to have had every opportunity for fraud, and with many of them their evidence appears to be self-convicted of falsehood; while the extravagances and debauchery of Orsay, his display of large sums and his boast of larger, and the large amounts in the possession of Ryan, a private soldier, seem to point the direction in which the embezzled funds of the government have gone, and to indicate that parties who availed themselves of Major Hastings's responsibility as a shelter for their frauds are now combined in a conspiracy to bring down upon him the punishment which should fall upon their own heads.

It is recommended that the findings and sentence be disapproved.

Question. Did you know his real name?

Answer. I have not.

Question. Was your statement at that time the substance of your affidavit?

Answer. It is so long since I made the affidavit that I can scarcely recollect; but, to the best of my knowledge, I said that, in the payment of bounties to recruits, after the recruits were assembled in the front of the office, Orsay would take the enlistments to Major Hastings and get the vouchers, and the recruits would sign them, and he, Orsay, would pay the money after they were properly signed.

Question. Did you say anything in that affidavit tending to fix criminality upon Major Hastings?

Question. What sort of a place is that?

Answer. In what respect?

Question. Is it a hotel—is it a respectable place or not?

Question. Where did he say he was going?

Answer. To Canada.

The cross-examination of the witness was here closed.

There being no other witness in attendance, the court, at the request of the judge advocate, adjourned until this afternoon at two o'clock.

Wednesday, August 17, 1864—2 o'clock p. m.

The court met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: All the members of the court, the judge advocate, the accused, his counsel, and the reporters.

Direct examination by the judge advocate.

HENRY E. WHITE, a witness for the prosecution, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Question. What is your position in the service?

Answer. A private, unassigned—a clerk.

Question. Where are you clerk?

Answer. At Harrisburg.

Question. To whom?

Answer. To Lieutenant MacDonald.

Question. At what time did you enlist in the service?

Answer. In May, 1860.

Question. Were you at Carlisle barracks in the month of February, in this year?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Do you recollect having charge of Corporal Henry Orsay, to conduct him from the barracks to Washington?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Do you know at what time that was in February?

Answer. I think it was the 15th or 16th of the month.

Question. Were you alone in the guard, or was any one else with you?

Answer. There was a sergeant with me.

Question. What was the name of that sergeant?

Answer. Sergeant Michael Ryan.

Question. What rank did you at that time hold?

Answer. I was a private.

Question. Were you acting as lance corporal, as it is called?

Answer. Not at that time.

Question. Had you been acting before as lance corporal?

Answer. Yes, sir; about a year before.

Question. What were your instructions in reference to the custody of Corporal Orsay, and where were you ordered to report to him?

Answer. To Major Turner, in Washington, and my instructions were to keep close watch of him.

Question. During the time between taking him in custody and your arrival at Washington, did Orsay manifest any disposition to escape?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. What was his manner in reference to that subject?

Answer. Indifference.

Question. At what time did you arrive in Washington in custody of the prisoner?

Answer. I think it must have been near 12 o'clock; I cannot tell exactly. It was after arriving in the railroad cars, and riding up in the street cars.

Question. Can you tell on what day it was?

Answer. I think it was Wednesday or Thursday.

Question. Where did you go when you first arrived in Washington? I mean, where did the guard and prisoner go?

Answer. We went to Major Turner's office.

Question. What occurred there?

Answer. Major Turner was away. He had gone to the Old Capitol to examine prisoners. The clerk said "He would be in in the afternoon," and we went away to get dinner.

Question. What did you do after leaving Major Turner's office?

Answer. We passed down street and stopped at Willards' hotel.

Question. Can you tell about what time that was?

Answer. It could not be more than half an hour after arriving.

Question. What occurred at Willards' hotel?

Answer. We went in there—Sergeant Orsay, Ryan, and myself; we went in to see Major Hastings, to see what we would do with the prisoner. Sergeant Ryan turned over the leaves of the book and could not see his name. He then inquired of the clerk if Major Hastings was stopping there, and he said "Yes." He looked for his key, and he said "he was not in." We then went away; we went down the avenue to a house kept by a man of the name of Delacey, and had dinner.

Question. What did you do after dinner?

Answer. We then went back to Willards' hotel; we went in there and inquired if Major Hastings was there. Whilst we were standing in the passage, Major Hastings came out of the bar-room, met Orsay and spoke to him. What they said I do not know; I did not hear. He then beckoned to the sergeant and said something to him about being responsible for the prisoner, and took Orsay up stairs. In about fifteen minutes he came back and beckoned to the sergeant, and took him up stairs.

Question. Who came back?

Answer. Major Hastings.

Question. What occurred next?

Answer. In a short time Sergeant Orsay and Ryan came down. We then came out and went up the street. After we got outside Ryan asked Orsay what he would do. He said he supposed he would go up to Major Turner's office. Ryan then told him that if he wanted to escape he would give him half a chance, and asked me if I was willing. We then went up the street and stopped at the corner awhile, talking about the means of escape. Ryan proposed that the prisoner should run, and he would shoot his pistol after him. I objected to his shooting, because if he did that he would be taken immediately. We then went on down sundry streets and passed Willards' hotel again. Ryan went inside again to see Major Hastings. The prisoner and myself passed on up the street and waited at the corner for him. In a few minutes Ryan came out and came up to the crossing. I asked him if he had seen Major Hastings, and he said no, and he told the prisoner to go.

Question. Did he go, and how?

Answer. He walked across the street and went down one of the back streets.

Question. When did you return to Carlisle?

Answer. It was about the middle of May. I do not remember the date.

Question. Did you then call with Ryan upon Major Hastings?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. At what place did you call upon him?

Answer. At his residence.

Question. Did you see him?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. What conversation took place then in your presence between you there? What did Major Hastings say? State the whole.

Answer. He said he was very glad to see us; he said he had used all the influence he had in Washington to get us out of the Old Capitol prison; and, besides, he had men employed in Philadelphia to try and buy us out.

Question. Did he say anything else with regard to your sentence?

Answer. He asked us what our sentence was. We told him. He said he would make our pay good.

Question. Was there anything else said that you remember, by yourself or by Ryan, in the presence of Major Hastings?

Answer. No, sir; I went outside and left Ryan standing talking with him. That is about all I remember.

The direct examination of the witness was here closed.

Cross-examination by the accused.

Question. When were you tried in Washington for permitting Mr. Orsay to escape?

Answer. It was three weeks after being confined.

Question. Did you make a statement in reference to that matter to Judge Turner?

Answer. Yes.

Question. What was that statement?

Answer. I told him that Orsay was left outside of the hotel with me and slipped away.

Question. Was that statement true or false?

Answer. False.

Question. When were you summoned to Washington to give evidence in this case?

Answer. I think it was Wednesday of last week.

Question. How soon after you got there did you see Mr. Orsay?

Answer. I do not know; two or three hours, I think, or an hour. I saw him at the court-martial rooms about an hour after I got there.

Question. Did you not go away from there with him?

Answer. I went across the street with him.

Question. To a grocery?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Well, to a drinking saloon?

Answer. Yes, sir; to a drinking saloon.

Question. How much were you with him during that day?

Answer. About three-quarters of an hour at that time.

Question. Were you with him much any other time while you were in Washington?

Answer. I was with him twice for a little while during the evening.

Question. Did you converse about the testimony you were going to give?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Why did you make the false statement to Judge Turner?

Answer. To save Sergeant Ryan. We thought that by making that statement we would get out of it.

Question. Did you hear anything that was said by Major Hastings at Willards' hotel?

Answer. No, sir, except that he would be responsible for the prisoner. Those were about the only words.

Question. That was when Orsay went up to his room?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Orsay came back after that into your charge?

Answer. He came back into Ryan's charge and mine.

Question. You did not hear Major Hastings say anything else?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Have you been much acquainted with Orsay?

Answer. About the same as I would be with any other soldier at the garrison.

Question. Were you at all intimate with him?

Answer. About the same as I would be with any room-mate or any man belonging to the company.

Question. Was he not an intimate friend of yours?

Answer. No more than any other person.

Question. Did you not correspond with him when he was absent?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Never?

Answer. Never.

Question. Did you get any letter from Orsay while he was in Washington?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. When was that?

Answer. It was some time in June, I think.

Question. What was that letter about?

Answer. He merely said that he was sorry we were so long in confinement, and that Major Hastings was the cause of it, and that if he ever got reinstated or any chance he would make our pay good, or something of that kind. It was a very short letter; he said he was very sorry we suffered so long a confinement on Major Hastings's and his account.

Question. What did you do upon the receipt of that letter?

Answer. I did not do anything.

Question. Did you communicate it to anybody?

Answer. I showed it to Ryan.

Question. Did you write about it to anybody else?

Answer. No, sir; I do not think I did.

Question. Did you not write to Major Hastings?

Answer. Yes, sir; I did.

Question. Tell us what you wrote to Major Hastings.

Answer. I wrote a letter to Major Hastings for money.

Question. In that letter, did you tell him what Orsay had proposed to do?

Answer. I do not remember whether I did.

The cross-examination of the witness was here closed.

Re-examination by the judge advocate.

Question. Why did you write that letter for money; under what circumstances was it written, and what were the reasons for writing it?

Answer. Because Major Hastings had promised us that if we wanted anything and would let him know it, he would do anything he could for us. Major Hastings told me at his own house that neither of us should ever want for anything.

Question. Is that a full explanation of the reason of your writing that letter, or have you any other explanation?

Answer. That is all, sir.

By the court :

Question. Did you have any further conversation with Major Hastings in reference to pay, and making your pay good to you ?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Did you ever have an interview with him since that time ?

Answer. No, sir ; I saw him once in Harrisburg. He asked me what I was doing there—that was all.

Question. Was there nothing said about pay at that time ?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Had you no letter or communication from him ?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Was Major Hastings a witness against you on your trial ?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Or Orsay ?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Did you ever have any trouble with him ? Were you ever put under arrest or punishment in any way ?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Did you obtain an answer from Major Hastings to the letter you wrote to him ?

Answer. No, sir.

The court then adjourned, to meet to-morrow morning at nine o'clock.

EDWARD W. HINKS,

Brigadier General U. S. Vols., President.

GARRICK MALLERY,

Lieutenant Colonel and Judge Advocate.

CARLISLE, PENN., Tuesday, August 18, 1864.

The court met at 9 o'clock a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

Present : All the members of the court, the judge advocate, the accused, his counsel, and the reporters.

The record of yesterday was read and approved.

The accused produces the cash book called for by the judge advocate yesterday.

GEORGE E. WHITE, a witness for the prosecution, recalled at his own request, for the purpose of making a correction in his testimony.

Direct examination by the judge advocate.

Question. State what you said yesterday in reference to receiving money from Major Hastings.

Answer. I stated that I received no money from him after writing the letter I wrote to him. I wish to correct that statement. The question was asked me if I received any money from Major Hastings, and I said no. I understood it to mean after writing this letter ; but I had received $100 before writing the letter. I received the $100 the day after coming from Washington. I received it from Lieutenant McGregor at the garrison.

The direct examination of the witness was here closed.

Cross-examination by the accused.

Question. From whom did you say you received that letter ?

Answer. From Lieutenant McGregor.

Question. Was it the day after you came from Washington ?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Was that before or after you had seen Major Hastings ?

Answer. After.

Question. When had you seen Major Hastings ?

Answer. The night before he said he would send a letter out to the garrison in the morning.

Question. Did you see Major Hastings the very day you got from Washington ?

Answer. Yes, sir ; the same evening.

Question. Did this money you speak of come in a letter ?

Answer. It was handed to me, I think, out of an envelope or a piece of paper.

Question. Was there any person present, when that money was received, besides yourself and Lieutenant McGregor ?

Answer. None, sir.

Question. Was that envelope addressed to you or to Lieutenant McGregor ?

Answer. I did not see the address ; it was in the evening ; it was in the dark ; I merely saw him take it out of an envelope or something of the kind.

Question. Did you count the money in the dark ?

Answer. No, sir ; I put it in my pocket and did not count it then.

Question. What did Lieutenant McGregor say when he gave you this money ?

Answer. He merely handed it to me and said there was $100 for me.

Question. Did he say where it came from ?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. How do you know it came from Major Hastings ?

Answer. Because Major Hastings told me the night before he would send a letter out to the garrison. He told us he would make our pay good, and gave us to understand he would send money out to us.

Question. Was that sufficient to make your pay good ?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. That was all he promised ?

Answer. Yes, sir ; more than he promised.

Question. Why, then, did you ask him for money afterwards ?

Answer. Because he told me that if I wanted money or anything else to write to him or make it known.

The cross-examination of the witness was here closed.

Answer. Some time near the middle of May ; I do not remember the date.

Question. About a month afterwards ?

Answer. Yes, sir ; fully a month afterwards.

Question. Do you know now that all these men left at the time specified?

Answer. There might have been some who remained here, being on the sick report, but they went shortly afterwards. Just as soon as they got well, they left to rejoin their regiments and companies.

Question. If any had remained on duty or otherwise than on the sick report, would you know it or be able to tell it?

Answer. I am certain there were none that remained on duty at Carlisle barracks. I might add that just as soon as they were well they were transferred immediately to these regiments, and consequently could not have been on duty at Carlisle barracks.

Question. Did they remain at all except as you have stated, on sick report?

Answer. They did not remain unless they were sick.

The direct examination of the witness was here closed.

Cross-examination by the accused.

Question. Do you profess to know anything about those men except as you find their names on the records you produced this morning?

Answer. Do you mean the departure of the companies or any men in particular?

Question. I mean as to the time of their departure and the other facts of which you have spoken.

Answer. I have already stated that it was impossible for me to remember the dates of the departure of the troops from the post. I had to look over the order-book so as to find the dates of the orders on which they were forwarded to their regiments.

Question. Then I understand that you know it from the record, and not otherwise?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. When did you first see Sergeant Ryan and Private White after they arrived in Washington last week?

Answer. I saw them opposite the court martial-rooms. I understood then that they had just arrived.

Question. You were conversing with them on the pavement in front of the court room?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Where did you take them from there?

Answer. I did not take them anywhere. They took me with them to Hammack's to take a drink. From there they wished to go and see one of their friends whose name is Myers, a messenger in the Surgeon General's office. We went there, and conversed a short time with him. Then we went to another place, of which I do not remember the name, opposite the Treasury building. It was a restaurant. I stayed with them a short time, I do not know how long, and left them immediately after.

Question. How often did you see them again during the day?

Answer. I think I did not see them again until the night, if I remember aright.

Question. Were you much with them the next day?

Answer. I do not remember. I might have seen them the next day, but I do not remember it exactly.

Question. And the day after?

Answer. I do not doubt that I saw them the next day also.

Question. Have you not been with them almost continuously?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. In your conversations with those two men, Ryan and White, did you rehearse the circumstances of your escape at the time of your desertion?

Answer. I do not remember that I did. I refused, or at least I took all the measures possible not to have any conversation with them with reference to this court-martial.

Question. Did you make any threats to Sergeant Ryan about his testimony in this case?

Answer. No, sir; I did not make any threats, and very far from that; he one day asked me what I said in the court-martial here, and I told him that I should certainly not tell him, and that far from that, I did not wish to have any conversation whatever with him on account of the court-martial; that he was old enough to tell what he knew; and that, consequently, he did not require to be prompted by me in any way.

Question. After you came to Washington, before the trial of Major Hastings commenced, did you say to anybody in Mr. Onion's house that if Major Hastings would give you $3,000 you would run away again?

Answer. I never said so. I deny it positively.

The cross-examination of the witness was here closed.

Re-examination by the judge advocate.

Question. Do you know at what time Ryan and White left Washington for this place?

Answer. They left on Saturday night.

Question. What time did you leave Washington?

Answer. Monday evening.

There being no other witness in attendance, the court, at the request of the judge advocate, adjourned until this afternoon at two o'clock.

EDWARD W. HINKS,

Brigadier General U. S. Vols., President.

GARRICK MALLERY,

Lieutenant Colonel and R. C., Judge Advocate.

CARLISLE, PENNSYLVANIA,

Thursday, August 18, 1864—2 o'clock p. m.

The court met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: All the members of the court, the judge advocate, the accused, his counsel, and the reporters.

The judge advocate produces and puts in evidence the official army register for 1863, and calls the attention of the court to page 17, from which it appears that David H. Hastings was appointed captain in the 1st regiment of cavalry January 9, 1860, original entry into service as brevet second lieutenant June 28, 1848, born in Ireland, appointed from the army.

The accused admits that he was appointed major of the 5th United States cavalry September 23, 1863.

W. M. BRETEEM, a witness for the prosecution, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by the judge advocate.

Question. What is your occupation?

Answer. Cashier of the Carlisle Deposit Bank.

Question. Are you acquainted with Major Hastings, the accused in this case?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Have you had business transactions with him?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Have you ever bought any stocks, loans, bonds, or any matters of value for him?

Answer. On two occasions I purchased for Major Hastings, on the 8th of October, 1863, $20,000, and on the 29th of October, of the same year, $15,000 of five-twenty United States bonds. I was the agent for the sale of these bonds.

Question. What did Major Hastings pay for both gross amounts?

Answer. $35,000.

Question. He paid that, and you delivered him over the bonds?

Answer. Yes, sir.

The direct examination of the witness was here closed.

Cross-examination by the accused.

Question. How long have you known Major Hastings?

Answer. I can scarcely answer that question, sir. I have known Major Hastings a long time now.

Question. You can probably state somewhere near the time?

Answer. I cannot do it with accuracy, I am sure; I suppose I might have known the major ten or fifteen years; it might have been more, and it might have been less.

Question. What has been his position during all that time?

Answer. During my knowledge of him, very good. He was a man of high character here, and always looked upon as such.

Question. What have been his habits of living, as far as you know—economical or extravagant?

Answer. That I really could not say. I cannot answer anything about his mode of living. The major and I have been very intimate, but as to his manner of living I, of course, know nothing about it.

Question. Has he been an extravagant man, or has he been a saving man, laying by his money?

Answer. I have never noticed anything about the major that was extravagant at all. He lives, I presume, in the ordinary style that we have all been living in.

Question. Have you noticed, within the last year or two, any difference in his mode of living?

Answer. I have not. I have always noticed him to be very regular in his habits and manners.

Question. Prior to 1863, do you know whether he had possessed any real estate?

Answer. No, sir; I have no knowledge of anything of the kind.

Question. Has he kept an account in your bank for any length of time?

Answer. I cannot speak with accuracy as to the time; but my impression is that he has done so for two or three years, perhaps. That is my conviction now.

Question. Did he not keep an account prior to that time?

Answer. It is possible that he might have done so; I cannot say from memory. It might have been more, and it might have been less.

Question. Are you able to say what was his usual deposit in the bank?

Answer. I could not say from memory. From the manner in which he drew upon us, on his private account, there was nothing to indicate, to my mind, that he was living by any means extravagantly. I presume my impression as to the investment of the bonds would not be of any value as testimony; but the impression created on my mind at the time the major purchased the last $20,000, I think, of those bonds was—how I got it I cannot say—that it was from the proceeds of some real estate that the major had been disposing of. That was the impression that got into my mind, in some way; I really do not know how it originated.

The cross-examination of the witness was here closed.

By the court.

Question. Were the $35,000 worth of bonds that you sold to Major Hastings coupon or registered bonds?

Answer. Coupon bonds.

Question. In what shape did you receive the funds in payment for the $20,000 worth of bonds?

Answer. I think the major gave me a draft for eighteen thousand and some hundred dollars, or perhaps it was a few thousands less, and the balance, I think, he made up either with his check upon us, or gave me the money, I cannot recollect distinctly. One reason why my convictions were strengthened in the belief that he was purchasing those bonds from the proceeds of the sales of property was, that this draft came from the west on some New York institution. I was going to relate that in connexion with the other.

Question. Do you know of any real estate transactions which Major Hastings has had during the time of your acquaintance with him?

Answer. I have no knowledge of any transactions of the kind.

Question. Was the major engaged in any other business than his official business connected with the army?

Answer. Not to my knowledge.

Question. How did he pay you for the other $15,000 purchase?

Answer. I can only give you my impressions; I cannot speak accurately about it, as those things were of such daily occurrence with so many persons coming in. My impression is that he gave me the money, but in what shape I can hardly answer. Of course he must have given me the money.

Question. Do the records of the bank show?

Answer. No, sir. There is nothing to show it more than the entry that I got the money from the major and furnished him the bonds. It was a transaction with which the bank was not connected. I was simply the agent for the sale of these bonds.

Question. The books of the bank will show the state of the major's account, I suppose?

Answer. Yes, sir; his private account. The major never had any account in bank except a private account.

The judge advocate stated that one of the important witnesses for the prosec-cution had disappeared, and thereupon requested an adjournment of the court from day to day until such time as his whereabouts can be ascertained.

The court thereupon adjourned until to-morrow morning at nine o'clock.

EDWARD W. HINKS,
Brigadier General United States Volunteers.
GARRICK MALLERY,
Lieutenant Colonel V. R. C., Judge Advocate.

CARLISLE, PA., Friday, August 19, 1864.

The court met at nine o'clock a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

Present: All the members of the court, the judge advocate, the accused, his counsel, and the reporters.

The record of yesterday was read and approved.

The judge advocate announced to the court that the same reason for which he desired the adjournment of the court at its last session still remains. He also stated, in explanation of the delay requested, that he deemed it necessary to the ends of justice in the prosecution of this case, that it was not only the importance of the testimony of this witness for which the delay is asked, but because the manner and circumstances of his eloping may become, and must become, an important element in the case, and they should be known. Furthermore, there was reason to believe that one of those who had been summoned by the accused as a witness had been instrumental in the disappearance of the absent witness. It was very desirable to know whether this was true or not, and how far it was true, before that witness was placed upon the stand, as would be the case if the facts are not more developed, and his testimony might not receive the proper attention. No further delay than a reasonable one will be asked by the judge advocate; and what he considers reasonable is, until he can ascertain from what is now in progress whether that witness is accessible or not. Of course, if he is permanently inaccessible, that fact will induce the judge advocate not to ask any further delay.

The court was cleared for deliberation.

The court being opened, the judge advocate announced that the court adjourned until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

EDWARD W. HINKS,
Brigadier General U. S. Volunteers, President.
GARRICK MALLERY,
Lieutenant Colonel V. R. C., Judge Advocate.

CARLISLE, PA., Saturday, August 20, 1864.

The court met at ten o'clock a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

Present: All the members of the court, the judge advocate, the accused, his counsel, and the reporters.

The record of yesterday was read and approved.

The judge advocate stated that the same reason for which he had asked an adjournment yesterday still continued, and he would therefore ask for an adjournment until Monday. If on Monday morning he had no further knowledge than he now has of the whereabouts of the missing witness and his accessibility, he would not think it proper to ask any further delay.

Whereupon the court adjourned until Monday morning at 9 o'clock.

EDWARD W. HINKS,
Brigadier General U. S. Volunteers, President.

Question. Under what circumstances did you give them the money, how much was it, and from whom did you receive it? State fully the circumstances of the case.

Answer. The money was sent to me in a letter by Major Hasting to hand to them. It was $200.

Question. Have you that letter?

Cross-examined by the accused.

Question. During the time Mr. Orsay was clerk for Major Hastings, who had charge of all the papers in the office?

Answer. Corporal Orsay.

Question. Do you know whether he had access to the papers at all times?

Answer. He had charge of all the papers in the office.

Question. Do you know who kept the bounty pay rolls?

Answer. I do not.

Question. Do you know in what manner the bounties were paid during the time of Mr. Orsay's clerkship?

Answer. Yes, sir, I do.

Question. State how it was done, and all the circumstances attending the payment, as far as you know.

Answer. The recruits would go over to the office and sign the bounty roll in Corporal Orsay's office, under his direction. He would then come in with the receipt roll to Major Hastings. Major Hastings would give $25 for each man who had signed the papers. Corporal Orsay would take the receipt roll and the money into his own office, and there pay the men the bounty.

Question. Do you know whether Corporal Orsay signed his name as a witness to the payments at that time, or at any other time?

Answer. I do not. I never saw him sign his name to the receipt roll.

Question. What became of the receipt rolls after the men had been paid?

Answer. I do not know. I never saw them until we were paying accounts again.

The cross-examination of the witness was here closed.

Answer. I am the United States government assessor at present.

Question. How long have you been in that office at this place?

Answer. Going on three years.

Question. Are you acquainted with Major Hastings, the accused in this case ?

Answer. I am.

Question. Did you, in the year 1863, have any conversation with him in your official capacity in relation to the amount of his property—in reference to the tax upon it.

Answer. I had.

Question. State what that was fully, and what the accused said in relation to his property ?

Answer. I called upon Major Hastings in my official capacity to assess him, as, under instructions from the government, I was authorized by the government to assess him as a military officer in the first place. In the next place I was called upon by the government to assess him upon any personal or real estate from which he derived any resources whatever. I called upon him. He told me, I think, to the best of my knowledge and belief, that he was not worth a dollar other than his salary from the government as an officer. I think, to the best of my knowledge, that was what he told me. He further remarked, that I might suppose that an officer could not accumulate anything from his salary. He told me what his salary was.

Question. At what time in the year was this ?

Answer. I think it was in September.

Question. Did you have any conversation with him in reference to his being sworn to the truth of that statement ?

Answer. I think I had ; but I replied that I was dealing with a man of honor, and I did not ask him to qualify to that fact.

Question. Did he state his willingness to be sworn to the truth of that statement ?

Answer. I think he said to me that he was willing to be qualified. I met him upon the public street, and the conversation took place.

The direct examination of the witness was here closed.

Cross-examination by the accused.

Question. Was it not your duty to give a written notice to persons and require them to make a statement on oath ?

Answer. No, sir ; not in a case of that kind.

Question. Were you not the assessor for the United States ?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Is there any difference in the assessment of military officers and others ?

Answer. There is not ; but, if I may answer, where a man asserts that he is not worth anything other than what he has stated, and I believe it to be so, that such is the fact, it is altogether a matter of option with the assessor.

Question. Did you tell him what were the subjects of taxation ?

Answer. I did, sir.

Question. What were they ?

Answer. The taxation as a military officer, after being assessed, was overruled and dropped by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. A man's income over $600 was assessed, deducting house-rent, taxes, and repairs such as are absolutely necessary, which the law provided for, applying to persons as tenants.

Question. Did you inform Major Hastings what sources of income were included within the taxation ?

Answer. I think I did. I am sure I did.

Question. Did he make any statement at all ?

Answer. He made a verbal statement to me, just what I have stated, that he was not worth a dollar, or worth nothing other than his salary.

Question. Did he deduct his house-rent ?

Answer. I had no occasion to do that, because, when he stated that he was not worth anything on earth, I had no occasion to deduct it. The last assessment I did deduct those things.

The judge advocate requested the court to adjourn in consequence of the continued absence of the missing witness, without whom it was impossible to proceed.

The court was cleared for deliberation.

The court was opened.

The court was again cleared for deliberation.

The court was opened.

The court adjourned to meet to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock.

EDWARD W. HINKS.

Brigadier General U. S. Vols., President.

GARRICK MALLERY,

Lieutenant Colonel V. R. C., Judge Advocate.

CARLISLE, PA., Tuesday, August 23, 1864.

The court met at nine o'clock a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

Present: All the members of the court, the judge advocate, the accused, his counsel, and the reporters.

The record of yesterday was read and approved.

The accused applied to the court to be permitted to introduce Hon. Samuel Hepburn, of Carlisle, Pennsylvania, as additional counsel; which application was granted, and he appeared as additional counsel for the accused.

The judge advocate stated that the reasons for which he had heretofore requested an adjournment of the court, in reference to the missing or absconding witness, continued in greater force than before, and there was more certainty of his speedy arrival to give evidence before the court. He had been in communication with him (the witness) and with the War Department, and he had every reason to believe that he would arrive within forty-eight hours, and that his evidence would be full and important. The judge advocate therefore respectfully requested an adjournment of the court.

The counsel for the accused requested that the case be proceeded with at once.

The court was cleared for deliberation.

The court was opened.

The court adjourned, to meet on Thursday next, at nine o'clock a. m.

EDWARD W. HINKS,

Brigadier General U. S. Vols., President.

GARRICK MALLERY,

Lieutenant Colonel and Judge Advocate.

CARLISLE, PA., Thursday, August 25, 1864.

The court met at nine o'clock a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

Present: All the members of the court, the judge advocate, the accused, his counsel, and the reporters.

The record of Tuesday was read and approved.

The judge advocate stated to the court that the witness whose absence had occasioned so much delay was now in New York, he understood, and had started from there, according to a despatch received from him, this morning at six o'clock, and was expected here some time to-day. The judge advocate therefore requested the court to adjourn until nine o'clock to-morrow morning.

The counsel for the accused renewed their objections to the adjournment.

The court was cleared for the purpose of deliberation.

The court was opened.

The court was again cleared.

The court was opened.

The court adjourned until three o'clock this afternoon.

EDWARD W. HINKS,

Brigadier General U. S. Vols., President.

GARRICK MALLERY,

Lieutenant Colonel and Judge Advocate.

CARLISLE, PA., Thursday, August 25, 1864—3 o'clock p. m.

The court met, pursuant to adjournment.

Present: All the members of the court, the judge advocate, the accused, his counsel, and the reporters.

The record of this morning's proceedings was read and approved.

The judge advocate stated that he had a few minutes ago received a despatch from the brother of the witness, on account of whose absence he had heretofore requested an adjournment of the court, and who went to Harrisburg in this morning's train, by his direction, to meet his brother, who was expected to be there. The despatch is as follows:

HARRISBURG, August 25, 1864.

If it is not late, shall have my brother by nine o'clock to-morrow.

JAMES RYAN.

Col. MALLERY, Martin's Hotel, Carlisle.

Hon. F. P. Stanton, one of the counsel for the accused, observed to the court that this despatch was exceedingly indefinite; it did not assert that the missing witness was at Harrisburg or on the way. They had been waiting patiently now for a week for this witness. They were ready to go on with their defence.

The judge advocate stated that he did not desire to close his case without this witness; and as it would be but a very short time before he would arrive, in his opinion the ends of justice would be promoted by an adjournment until to-morrow morning at nine o'clock.

Hon. F. P. Stanton said the counsel for the accused desired to resist this motion again. They had heard this same statement, in effect, from day to day for a week.

John A. Wills, esq., one of the counsel for the accused, thought it proper for them to state that they understood the judge advocate to say, that if he did not have this witness this morning he would not ask for any further adjournment. The court then, as it appeared from the result, strained a point in his favor, and adjourned until this hour. Here they were; and there was now no more rational prospect of having this witness to-morrow than there was in having him three days ago, and the question was whether the court would allow itself to be amused from day to day by this hoping against hope.

The court was cleared for the purpose of deliberation.

The court was opened.

The court adjourned until to-morrow morning at half past nine o'clock.

EDWARD W. HINKS,

Brigadier General U. S. Vols., President.

GARRICK MALLERY,

Lieutenant Colonel V. R. C., Judge Advocate.

CARLISLE, PA., Friday, August 26, 1864.

The court met at half past nine o'clock, pursuant to adjournment.

Present: All the members of the court, the judge advocate, the accused, his counsel, and the reporters.

The record of yesterday afternoon was read and approved.

MICHAEL RYAN, a witness for the prosecution, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by the judge advocate.

Question. What is your rank in the service?

Answer. A private, at present.

Question. Are you attached to any regiment?

Answer. No, sir; I belong to the general mounted service.

Question. When did you enter the service?

Answer. In July, 1860.

Question. What was your rank in the service in the month of February of this year?

Answer. First sergeant of permanent company at Carlisle barracks.

Question. Did you, in the month of February, and if so on what day as near as you can fix it, receive instructions to take Corporal Orsay, under guard, to Washington?

Answer. About the 16th of February I received instructions from Lieutenant McGregor.

Question. What were those instructions?

Answer. That I should turn him over to Judge Turner, the judge advocate of the War Department.

Question. Were there no special instructions in addition to those general instructions in regard to your conduct in custody of him?

Answer. He told me I should not take my eye off him until I should turn him over to Judge Turner; and that if I stopped in Baltimore over-night, I should sleep with him.

Question. What was the manner in which you did obey those instructions from the time you left Carlisle with Corporal Orsay?

Answer. I obeyed them until I arrived in Washington and saw Major Hastings.

Question. Proceed to state when you saw Major Hastings the first time, where, and exactly what occurred.

Answer. I saw him at Willards' hotel; he asked me what I came to Washington for; I told him I came in charge of Corporal Orsay; he said he was very glad to see me; he asked Orsay up stairs, and I believe he told me he would be responsible for him; he then came down for me and took me up stairs; he asked me if I could persuade Orsay to get away; I told him I was afraid I would get into trouble by it; he told me he was my chief support; that my welfare laid in his hands. I then left. I did not tell him I was going to let Orsay go away.

Question. Did he tell you to let Orsay go away—to allow him to desert?

Answer. No; he asked me if I could not persuade him to go away.

Question. Had Orsay made any attempt or shown any disposition to leave your custody before that time?

Answer. No.

Question. What was his manner in respect to that?

Answer. He appeared to be very quiet. I asked him what he thought he was going to Washington for, and he said he could not tell me; that is all I know about it.

Question. Did you, in pursuance of the request of Major Hastings, which you have stated, that you should persuade Orsay to go away, persuade him yourself so to do?

Answer. When I left Major Hastings, Orsay told me, I believe, that he expected to get either five or seven years in the penitentiary. I asked the man who was with me, White, if he would consent to let him go away, and he told me he would take the whole responsibility on himself. I said, no; I would share it with him.

Question. At the same time that Orsay said he expected to get some time in the penitentiary for himself, as you mentioned, did he say anything about what would become of Major Hastings?

Answer. No, not to my knowledge.

Question. Did you see Major Hastings again on that day or night?

Answer. I saw him that night.

Question. What was his conversation with you?

Answer. That was the first time I told him that Orsay had escaped. He asked me how, and I told him. I went into a house in Washington and reported to Judge Turner; Judge Turner was very angry with me.

Question. What did Major Hastings say about the escape, and about your conduct in allowing him to escape?

Answer. As far as I can recollect, he did not say much about it.

Question. Did he not at that time tell you he would provide for you liberally, and make some promise in relation to reward?

Answer. He told me he would reward me handsomely for this.

Question. What was the date of your first return to Carlisle after your sentence?

Answer. Some time in May of this year; I do not know the date exactly.

Question. Did you see Major Hastings at that time?

Answer. Yes, sir; I went to see him when I came home.

Question. Did you go to see him alone, or in company with any one?

Answer. In company with White.

Question. What was the conversation that occurred on that visit?

Answer. I do not exactly remember the conversation; he told me he was very glad to see me; he asked me what my sentence was; I told him I was sentenced to be reduced to the ranks, and to forfeit $10 of my pay every month for six months; he said that he would make my pay good.

Question. Did he give you any sum of money at any time after that?

Answer. No.

Question. Did you receive any from him through any third party?

Answer. I received $100 from Lieutenant McGregor; I believe it was from him.

Question. At what time did you receive that?

Answer. The next morning.

Question. Can you state what day or night it was that you called upon Major Hastings and had the conversation that you mentioned last?

Answer. I cannot exactly tell the date; it was the night I came from Washington.

Question. Did you have any conversation with Major Hastings, or any one in his behalf, when you were in Washington city?

Answer. I saw Major Hastings at Willards' hotel. He asked me if I wanted to see him. I told him no. I asked him if he had subpoenaed me on this court-martial, and he said no. I told him I had suffered enough about him before, and did not want to suffer any more. That is all the conversation I had with him.

Question. Did you have any conversation with any one with reference to any story, or mode of testimony, or character of testimony, that you were requested or advised to give in this case?

Answer. Sergeant Major O'Brien told me I had better stick to the statement I made in Washington when I came before the court-martial. I told him that I could not perjure myself; that I would do all I could.

Question. Did you see any one in Carlisle with whom you had any conversation on that subject?

Answer. I had a conversation with O'Brien after coming back from Washington. The direct examination of the witness was here closed.

Cross-examination by the accused.

Question. What was the statement you made to Judge Turner in reference to Orsay's desertion?

Answer. I cannot recollect the whole statement now.

Question. State the substance of it as near as you recollect.

Answer. I told him that I went to his office with Orsay, and he was not in; that I then went and got my dinner, and on my going back I left him in charge of White, outside of Willards' hotel, while I went in to see Major Hastings to know if I could turn him over to some provost marshal, and that while I was in the hotel he ran away from White. After that I told him I searched for him and could not find him, and then reported to Judge Turner that he was gone. That is the statement as near as I can recollect.

Question. Which statement was true—that one, or the one you are now making?

Answer. The one I am now making.

Question. Was that the substance of the defence you made on your trial?

Answer. Yes.

The cross-examination of the witness was here closed.

By the court:

Question. Did you have any communication with Major Hastings, directly or indirectly, with reference to your leaving the presence of this court?

Answer. No; I had no conversation myself with him.

Question. The question is, whether you had any communication with him, directly or indirectly, on that subject?

Answer. My brother went to see him, and I believe he said he would leave a thousand dollars with my brother if I would stick to the statement I made in Washington. I told him I could not.

(The accused, through his counsel, objected to the testimony of the witness as hearsay, and not admissible testimony.)

Question. What induced you to go away?

Answer. I was fearful my evidence might convict me, together with receiving some money.

Question. Did you receive any money?

Answer. I received something over one hundred dollars from my brother before I left here.

Question. Have you received any since?

Answer. I received about eighteen hundred dollars in New York from here.

Question. From whom?

Answer. From my brother.

Question. How did you get that money?

Answer. I do not know; he always gives me money.

Question. How was it sent to you?

Answer. He was down there to see me. Major Royall sent him after me to see if he could not persuade me to come back.

Question. On what day did you receive this $1,800?

Answer. I cannot exactly tell.

Question. Was that $1,800, or any part of it, a consideration for your going away?

Answer. I could not swear to it.

Question. What was it sent to you for? For what purpose?

Answer. To the best of my opinion it was to induce me to go away.

Question. Did your brother owe you money?

Answer. He owed me about one hundred dollars, I believe.

Question. Your brother paid you this $1,800 in money in New York since your absence from the court?

Answer. Yes.

Question. What was the character of the funds given to you?

Answer. Greenbacks.

Question. What did your brother tell you was the reason for giving you this $1,800?

Answer. I do not exactly recollect what the reason was.

Question. What did he say when he gave it to you?

Answer. He told me Major Hastings gave it to him. He did not say for me. He told me he gave it to him.

Question. He did not say for what purpose?

Answer. No.

Question. Were you summoned as a witness to attend this court?

Answer. Yes.

Question. Where?

Answer. Harrisburg. I was summoned to attend it in Washington when I was stationed in Harrisburg.

Question. At what time did you receive the summons?

Answer. I do not know. I was out with Lieutenant McDonald in western Pennsylvania when the order came there, and I do not know exactly what time it came. I believe it was on the 19th of the month that I received orders to report there.

Question. Have you got the summons with you?

Answer. No.

Question. Why did you not obey the summons?

Answer. I did obey it until I was ordered to be confined here.

Question. By whom were you ordered to be confined?

Answer. I believe by order of Colonel Mallery.

Question. Were you confined?

Answer. No; the order was countermanded.

Question. By whom was the order countermanded?

Answer. By Colonel Mallery.

Question. Why did you not then obey the summons of the court?

Answer. I was afraid my evidence might get me into trouble.

Question. What did you do with the $1,800 you received?

Answer. I spent some of it, and I gave the balance of it to my friends.

Question. What friends?

Answer. My brother.

Question. Was it on the consideration of this money, or for fear of being imprisoned, that you ran away?

Answer. Both induced me to run away.

Question. Do you not think you ought to pay that money back?

Answer. I should think not. It is a long time earned.

Question. What induced you to come back?

Answer. I wrote to Major Royall, telling him that if he got me pardoned I would come back. I never joined the army with the intention of deserting.

Question. Then you made the offer yourself to come back?

Answer. No; Major Royall sent my brother after me, and proposed it to me.

Question. Do you know why you were ordered to be imprisoned this last time?

Answer. Yes; I believe it was for fear I should hold communication with Major Hastings, or any of his friends. That is what I understood it to be.

Question. How much of that money did you give your brother?

Answer. I could not swear to that.

Question. State it as nearly as you can from your recollection.

Answer. I gave him over $1,700.

Question. Did you understand that your brother was to hold it for your benefit, or for his own?

Answer. I gave it to my brother to keep for me. I gave it to him in a parcel a few minutes ago down stairs. I do not believe he knew what was in the parcel. I do not know whether he knew that it was money or not.

Question. Did your brother make more than one visit to New York?

Answer. No, sir; only one visit.

Question. And he went on to New York and made a proposition to you to return here, and at the same time gave you $1,800 from Major Hastings. Is that so?

Answer. He went on to New York and told me Major Royall wanted me to come back, and nothing should happen to me, and gave me $1,800, but did not say who it was from. I knew he had it before I left.

Question. Do you think this money was fairly earned, and that you ought not to give it back to Major Hastings?

Answer. Certainly I do.

Question. Do you mean by that that you earned this money by leaving now, or by what you had previously suffered at Washington?

Answer. I earned it by what I had suffered at Washington.

Question. You have testified that your brother went to see Major Hastings. How came he to go and see the major?

Answer. I do not exactly know.

Question. You do not know?

Answer. According to my recollection I did not.

Question. What reason did he give you for going there?

Answer. I believe I told him to go to Major Hastings to excuse me, as he could not have any hard feelings against me for my giving evidence against him, as I could not take a false oath. That is as near as I can think.

Question. Did you know Orsay before he joined the service at Carlisle barracks?

Answer. I had an acquaintance with him there.

Question. Did you know him before that?

Answer. No.

Question. Do you know anything of Orsay's mode of life here in Carlisle; what his habits were, and so on.

Answer. I know him to be a very steady, quiet man.

Question. Is that statement as true as the rest of your evidence?

Answer. Yes, as far as I am concerned.

Question. Did you hold any communication with any person in Carlisle or Washington, after you left Carlisle, by telegraph or mail?

Answer. I telegraphed this morning to Colonel Mallery, saying I would be here by nine o'clock.

Question. Was that the only communication you sent to any one?

Answer. I had a communication with my brother. He telegraphed to me three or four times to come on.

Question. From what place did you telegraph to him?

Answer. I telegraphed from New York.

Question. Did you send all your despatches from New York?

Answer. All my despatches were from New York.

Question. Did you receive any despatches sent to you at any other place than at New York?

Answer. No.

Question. You were in New York all the while then?

Answer. All the while.

Question. Were you in Canada at any time since you have been absent from Carlisle?

Answer. I was not in Canada. I dated a letter from Niagara Falls; I wrote it so as to screen me from being caught, until I could get my pardon. I intended to go on there if I did not get pardoned.

The court was cleared for the purpose of deliberation.

The court was opened.

JAMES RYAN, a witness for the prosecution, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Have you had any conversation at any time with Major Hastings in reference to the testimony that your brother Michael Ryan might give in this case?

Question. Did you have any conversation with Major Hastings since the return of Major Hastings from Washington?

Answer. Yes. I spoke to him since the time he arrived from Washington.

Question. You will state the whole of that conversation; and, if more than one, state all the conversations.

Answer. I was talking to Major Hastings; Major Hastings did not ask me anything about what testimony my brother would give in the case, but Major Hastings said my brother should stand by the statement that he made in Judge Turner's office. That is all I know about it.

Question. Did Major Hastings give any sum of money to give to your brother?

Answer. I got some money from him. He did not say give it to my brother exactly; I could do what I liked with it.

Question. Can you state more exactly the words of Major Hastings at that time?

Answer. I do not recollect the words. I did not give any money to my brother, telling him it was from Major Hastings.

Question. What amount of money did Major Hastings give you?

Answer. I did not count the money at that time.

Question. Did you count it at any other time?

Answer. I put it into my drawer. I had several thousand dollars in my own possession. To the best of my belief, there were two thousand dollars there.

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. What did you do with that two thousand dollars after you had put it in your drawer?

Answer. Yes; my brother gave me a package this morning.

Question. Have you it with you now?

Answer. No, I have not got it now.

Question. What did you do with it?

Answer. I have not got it with me, but I have got it put away.

Answer. I think it was money.

Question. Do you know how much money?

Answer. No, sir; I do not know how much money exactly.

Question. Did you examine it at all?

Answer. I looked at it and saw it was money.

Question. Do I understand you to say that you counted it, or did not count it?

Answer. No, sir; I did not count the money.

The witness desired to make the following statement in addition to his testimony:

Major Hastings told me that as I had lost about five hundred dollars on account of my brother's trial in Washington, I should take it out of that money. I forget all about the conversation I had with him. He said many a thing that I do not recollect now, and, therefore, when I think of anything I will correct my testimony.

The direct examination of the witness was here closed.

Cross-examination by the accused.

Question. Did you go after your brother?

Answer. No, I did not go after my brother. I took that money down to where he was, and told him I had money, and he could do what he liked with it. I did not go after him.

Question. Where was that?

Answer. He did not stop at my house.

Question. Was it in Carlisle?

Answer. No, he did not stop in my house in Carlisle.

Question. Was he in Carlisle?

Answer. He was in Carlisle.

Question. Did you go after your brother to Canada?

Answer. I went after my brother. I did not exactly get into Canada. I got in the State of New York.

Question. How far did you get?

Answer. I got in the State of New York.

Question. What part of the State of New York?

Answer. Outside of New York, on the road to Canada.

Question. Did you go as far as Niagara Falls?

Answer. I did not go as far as Niagara Falls.

Question. Did your brother?

Answer. I do not know. I got a letter from him dated at Niagara Falls. The letter was given to me by another person.

Question. Did you report that your brother was in Canada?

Answer. Yes, sir; I reported that my brother was in Canada.

Question. Did you report that you had seen him in Canada ?

Answer. I did report that I had seen him in Canada, so that he could not be arrested, in order that the authorities might not find him out.

Question. Did you meet your brother at all while you were gone ?

Answer. I met my brother.

Question. Where did you meet him ?

Answer. In the State of New York.

Question. Did you give him the money of which you have spoken in New York or in Carlisle ?

Answer. I gave him the money in Carlisle, and he gave me back the money, and told me he would send for the money. I took it, and gave it to him in New York.

Question. What was your purpose in going to New York ?

Answer. To bring my brother back.

Question. Why did you not bring him back ?

Answer. I was not going to bring him back a prisoner, except he got his pardon.

Question. What were your orders ?

Answer. I had not any orders no more than to ask him if he would come back, and he would get his pardon. I had no orders to arrest him.

Question. Who gave you the orders ?

Answer. Colonel Mallery gave me orders. I expect it was through him that I got a pass. I went and spoke to him. Of course I was not going to arrest my brother. I did all I could, and he said he would come back as soon as he received his pardon.

Question. Did you give him that money to enable him to go off to Canada ?

Answer. I will not answer that question for fear I might criminate myself.

Question. Did you report that you had seen your brother in the city of New York ?

Answer. I did not report that I had seen my brother in the city of New York. I reported that I had seen him at Niagara Falls, in order that they could not catch him.

Question. Did you state what that money was given to your brother for by Major Hastings ?

Answer. No, sir, I did not state anything at all about it.

Question. Do you know ?

Answer. I have an idea of it; I do not know it exactly.

Question. Did you have any interest in that money ?

Answer. I had no interest in that money no more than that I had lost some by my brother's trial, and I told him I would have nothing to do with it. I told him how I had lost by it, but I would make him a present of that, and would have nothing to do with it; that I could get along in the world without it.

Question. Did you know that your brother was a witness in attendance on this court at the time of these transactions of which you have spoken ?

Answer. I will not answer that question, as it might criminate myself.

By the court:

Question. Did you know where your brother was in New York when you left here to go after him ?

Answer. I knew he was going through there. My parents were there, and I knew well that if he was going away he would call to see them.

Question. When did you leave here to go to New York ?

Answer. I left here in the afternoon of the day after my brother left.

Question. Did you go directly to New York city ?

Answer. I went directly to New York city in the first train.

Question. How long were you there before you found your brother ?

Answer. To the best of my belief, I left here on Thursday, at three o'clock, in the afternoon train, and the next night at about eleven o'clock I saw my brother. I do not know whether it was on Wednesday or Thursday that I went away; but on the night following, about nine, or ten, or half past ten o'clock, I saw my brother.

Question. Where did you see him first, in New York city?

Answer. I saw him first in the State of New York, not in New York city. I saw him in a town outside of New York city, at my brother-in-law's house.

Question. What town was that?

Answer. A town on the Hudson river, Spuyten Duyvel.

Question. How did you go to Spuyten Duyvel from the railroad that carried you to the city of New York?

Answer. I went on the cars, I think, as far as Harlem, to the best of my belief. From there I took a carriage. It was late at night, and the cars did not run exactly to the place; I therefore took a carriage to take me out there.

Question. What time did you get in New York city?

Answer. To the best of my belief, I got there some time about two o'clock.

Question. What did you go to Spuyten Duyvel for?

Answer. I went there to influence my brother to come back here.

Question. You knew, then, when you left Carlisle, that your brother was at Spuyten Duyvel, or would be there?

Answer. I knew well that my people would tell me, on his leaving there, where he went to. They knew I was not going to take him. I was not sent to take him.

Question. You knew that he would go to Spuyten Duyvel?

Answer. I knew he would call there before leaving. I knew he would call to see my mother, or some one belonging to him, before leaving the country. I had an opinion of it. He did not tell me he was going there. When I got to New York I received information that he was there from some friends of mine. To the best of my belief he did not tell me. I am not sure whether he did tell me or not.

Question. Were you ordered to go to New York city?

Answer. I was not ordered to go to any place in particular. I said I would go and bring him back if I could, and therefore I got a pass. I said that I would influence him to come back.

Question. To what place was the pass given for you to go?

Answer. The pass said, "Corporal Ryan can be absent from the garrison from two o'clock to-day until two o'clock on Saturday." It did not say that exactly, but that is what it meant—from two o'clock on the 17th to two o'clock on the 20th. To the best of my belief that is the way the pass read; it did not state any place.

Question. Did you get transportation on that pass?

Answer. No, sir; I paid my expenses myself in hopes that they would be refunded to me. I did not ask the question, though, whether they would or not, and I did not ask for transportation either.

Question. What train did you take from Harrisburg?

Answer. To the best of my belief, I took the six o'clock cars.

Question. And did not get to New York until two o'clock?

Answer. Yes, sir; I took the six or half past six o'clock cars, I am not sure which.

Question. Can you state why it was that you were selected on the following day after your brother's departure to go after him to induce him to come back?

Answer. I do not know any reason any more than that he was wanted to give evidence in this court-martial.

Question. I repeat the question: Can you state why it was that you were selected on the following day after your brother's departure to go after him to induce him to come back?

Answer. No more than to give evidence in this court-martial; that is the only reason I know of. I cannot prove that, but that is to the best of my belief.

Question. Did you repeat to anybody before you were thus selected the transaction which you have testified to here as having had with Major Hastings?

Answer. I will not answer that question, as it might criminate me in some way.

Question. Did you know that your brother was a witness before this court, or was wanted as a witness before this court, before he went away?

Answer. I have known that he was a witness in this court before he went away.

Question. Did you know when he went away?

Answer. Yes. I think he went away between nine and ten o'clock, because I saw him about half past nine o'clock.

Question. Where did you see him?

Answer. I saw him here in Carlisle.

Question. Do you know how he went away?

Answer. He told me he went away afoot from here, and walked to Harrisburg.

Question. Did your brother tell you where you could find him, or write to him, or see him, if you wanted to see him?

Answer. No; he did not. He said he would write to me. I knew he would write to me, and therefore I did not ask him where he would be. I did not want to have anything to do with his going away, because I would criminate myself.

Question. You knew he was going away?

Answer. I will not answer that question, as it might criminate me.

Question. Was any arrangement made between you and your brother that you were to follow after him to bring him back?

Answer. No, sir; there was no arrangement made between us that I should follow after him or bring him back.

Question. Was there any arrangement made that you should inform upon him—inform of the facts?

Answer. There was no arrangement made that I should inform upon him, or bring him back.

Question. Who first suggested the pardon?

Answer. My brother wrote a letter to Colonel Mallery, or to the commanding officer of the barracks; I do not know which.

Question. Was any arrangement of any kind made between your brother and yourself on any subject before he went away?

Answer. There was no arrangement whatsoever between us before he went away.

Question. You have stated in your examination-in-chief that the money was given to your brother in Carlisle, and then left with you to be sent to him; where was that arrangement made.

Answer. That arrangement was made in the town of Carlisle.

Question. Do you know whether there was anything in the package that was handed you by your brother this morning as he came into court except money or notes?

Answer. To the best of my belief there was not, except paper and money. There may have been something; I did not examine the package thoroughly.

Question. Is that package now in your charge?

Answer. Yes, sir, it is in my charge; I have put it away. It is not on my person.

Question. Will you produce that package?

Answer. I will, if my brother is satisfied. I will go back and count the money if no one comes with me, and I will come back here and swear how much money is there, and what is in it.

Question. Have you stated, or intended to state, in your testimony-in-chief, that there were several thousand dollars of your own money in the drawer in which you placed this money when you first got it.

Answer. I am willing to swear there were several hundred; I do not know how many, because Major Royal had some of my money. There were several hundred there. I have said "thousands," but I will correct it, I meant several hundreds.

Question. How much of your own money had you in your possession prior to Major Hastings giving you this money?

Answer. To the best of my belief I had about $3,300 between Major Royal and myself. I had $1,300 or $1,400 in my drawer of my own money that I earned. I never kept an exact account.

Question. Where is that drawer. In what house?

Answer. In my house.

Question. Where is that?

Answer. In Carlisle.

Question. What street in Carlisle?

Answer. It is right here on Main street.

Question. Do you live alone, or with any person?

Answer. I have been married for the last seven years.

Question. Do you keep house by yourself?

Answer. I keep house, myself and my family.

Question. Between what streets in Carlisle is that house located?

Answer. It is in this very street.

Question. And what other street?

Answer. I have spent six months in Carlisle, and I could not tell you the names of three streets in the town, except Main street and a few more.

Question. Is that money there now in that drawer?

Answer. That money is there now in that drawer, to the best of my belief. I left it, when leaving this morning, but my wife may have taken it away from there.

Question. You have not taken that money away yourself?

Answer. I have not taken that money from that drawer myself.

Question. Was there any of your own money there this morning when you put that in?

Answer. I did not put it in this morning, but I saw it there this morning. It is always there, except when I want some of it and take it out.

Question. I mean when you put this package there?

Answer. I did not swear that I put the package there.

Question. You received it this morning?

Answer. I did receive it this morning.

Question. You say it is in the drawer?

Answer. No, sir.

Question. Then it is not in the drawer?

Answer. I will not answer the question.

Question. Did you mean that the $1,300, or the $3,300, was in the drawer?

Answer. No, sir; I did not mean that the $3,300 was in the drawer. I meant that I had that much money entirely, between what Major Royal has and what I have in the drawer; and to the best of my belief there are $1,300 in my drawer. That is the evidence I gave. I have $3,200 or $3,300 altogether. I cannot exactly swear to the amount I have.

Question. How long is it since you have been to that drawer?

Answer. I saw that drawer this morning.

Question. Did you or did you not put the package you received from your brother into that drawer?

Answer. If the money is not to be taken away from my brother, I will say that the money I got from him is in the drawer.

At the request of the witness his testimony was re-read to him, in order that he might correct it.

The witness desired to correct the accompanying answer to the following question :

“Question. Did you have any interest in that money?

“Answer. I had no interest in that money, no more than that I had lost some by my brother's trial, and I told him I would have nothing to do with it. I told him how I had lost by it, but I would make him a present of that, and would have nothing to do with it; that I could get along in the world without it.”

The witness. Major Hastings gave me one thousand dollars first to take down to my brother. He refused taking that one thousand dollars, and told me to take it back to Major Hastings. Then I got the other thousand dollars. I said I would throw it there; that I would not take the money. He said I need not throw it away; that if I wanted to throw it away he would take the money. He said that $500 from what I told him was justly mine; that he would not begrudge the thousand dollars between my brother and myself. He said he wanted my brother to make that statement that he had made in Judge Turner's office. I told him my brother had told me he would not do it. So he gave me the two thousand dollars. I told my brother I had two thousand dollars. I did not tell him I got it from Major Hastings, exactly. I gave him a hint of it. I did not tell him plainly that I got it from Major Hastings. I promised Major Hastings I would not tell him. I told Major Hastings that if my brother did not take the money I would bring it back to him again, the same as I took the other thousand. He told me if my brother would do this thing I need not go back to him. Major Hastings told me I would ruin him if I came in this court against him.

The witness desired to correct the accompanying answer to the following question :

“Question. Were you ordered to go to New York city?

“Answer. I was not ordered to go to any place in particular. I said I would go and bring him back if I could, and therefore I got a pass; I said that I would influence him to come back.”

The witness. Major Royal told me to hunt around the town here and look for him, but my wife told me that he had gone. He did not tell me that he was going away, because I did not want to know anything about it. I knew by his movements that he was going away, but as I was an enlisted man, I did not want to have anything to do with a man deserting. Major Hastings did not give the money to me to tell my brother to desert. He did not say desert. He only said that he should not appear in that court against him if he could not give that evidence; that is the statement he made in Judge Turner's office. I know nothing about the statement as to what it is.

By the court:

Question. Is the money in the same envelope now that it was in when it was given to you?

Answer. No, sir, it is not. First, there was the first thousand dollars I told you about, and then he afterwards gave me the other thousand.

Question. Is it in the same envelope in which it was given to you this morning?

Answer. It was not in an envelope. It was a package with a kind of bandage around it, and a newspaper rolled around it.

Question. Is that in the same package?

Answer. It is in the same package, if my wife has not disturbed it.

Question. Is it in the same package as when you got it from Major Hastings?

Answer. No, sir, it is not.

At the request of the accused, the court ordered Sergeant S. L. Gerould, the clerk of the court, to inspect the drawer referred to in the testimony of the witness and report the contents.

The court then adjourned until this afternoon at two o'clock.

Brigadier General U. S. Vols., President.

GARRICK MALLERY,

Lieutenant Colonel V. R. C., Judge Advocate.

CARLISLE, PA., Friday, August 26, 1864—2 p. m.

The court met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: All the members of the court, the judge advocate, the accused, his counsel, and the reporters.

JAMES RYAN—Examination resumed.

The reading of the testimony of the witness was continued for the purpose of allowing him to make any corrections he desired.

The witness desired to correct the accompanying answer to the following question:

"Question. You have stated in your examination-in-chief that the money was given to your brother in Carlisle, and then left with you to be sent to him; where was that arrangement made?

"Answer. That arrangement was made in the town of Carlisle."

The witness. I asked my brother whether he wanted to take all this money away, or would he leave some of it in my hands to send it to him. He said the best thing he could do was to leave the money with me, and he would write for it. At that time I did not give him any of the money in his hand. He took about $100 out of it. It was to be left with me in case he might see some one on the road and his money be taken from him.

Sergeant S. L. GEROULD, clerk of the court, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by the judge advocate.

Question. Have you, in obedience to the order of the court, inspected the contents of the drawer referred to in the testimony of James Ryan?

Answer. I have.

Question. State what was the result of that inspection.

Answer. I hold in my hand a memorandum made upon the spot by myself. When I went into the room I discovered the top drawer of a bureau open. There were several papers, one or two books, and various other little matters lying around loose in the drawer. Ryan looked into it, and asked his wife where the money was. She made no reply, and was in evident fear that the money was to be taken away from them. I assured her that all I wished was to see the money—to see the drawer. She produced the money from beneath her clothes, where she had hidden it. It was in three packages. The first package was marked $1,850. In that package were four smaller packages, marked, respectively, $300, $200, $300, and $1,000. I counted these smaller packages, and found the amount to correspond with the amount as stated in the packages. It consisted entirely of United States treasury notes and notes of a national bank. The majority of them were United States treasury notes.

Question. What national bank?

Answer. I did not take notice of the particular bank, but it was of some national bank. The other package consisted of $1,090 in notes of the United States and of national banks, $65 of the State Bank of Ohio, and $40 of various banks of the State of Ohio. The whole of this second package was in bills ranging from $5 to $100. Besides this, there were two certificates of deposit for $100 each on the Carlisle Deposit Bank in the same package.

Question. In whose name was the certificates?

Answer. I think it was the name of James Ryan, the name of the witness.

Question. What was the total amount of the second package?

Answer. $1,395, including the two certificates.

Question. Was that the whole of your examination?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. These several packages you speak of made up in one package of $1,850?

Answer. That is the first package. There were not $1,850; there were only $1,800. It was marked $1,850, but it contained but $1,800.

The prosecution was here closed.

The court then adjourned to meet to-morrow morning at nine o'clock.

EDWARD W. HINKS,

Brigadier General U. S. Vols., President.

GARRICK MALLERY,

Lieutenant Colonel V. R. C., Judge Advocate.

CARLISLE, PA., Saturday, August 27, 1864.

The court met at nine o'clock a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

Present: All the members of the court, the judge advocate, the accused, his counsel, and the reporters.

The record of yesterday was read and approved.

Jno. A. Wills, esq., one of the counsel for the accused, stated that they proposed to offer in evidence certain letters of Robert Campbell, of St. Louis, authenticating the handwriting in lieu of his testimony.

The judge advocate waived the legal objection with regard to the absence of the writer of the letters, Robert Campbell, on the ground of his residence being at a great distance, and the length of time before he could attend in obedience to the summons, or his deposition could be taken and forwarded.

J. P. HASSLER, a witness for the defence being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct-examination by the accused.

Question. Do you reside in this town?

Answer. Yes, sir, at present.

Question. What is your business?

Answer. I am a teller in the Carlisle Deposit Bank.

Question. How long have you resided here?

Answer. I have resided here since 1855.

Question. Are you acquainted with the handwriting of Robert Campbell, of St. Louis?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. In what way did you become acquainted with his handwriting?

Answer. Whilst I was in business in Philadelphia on Market street.

Question. State the nature of the business and your opportunities for knowing his handwriting.

Answer. I was bookkeeper in a wholesale dry goods house from 1844 to 1854, and we had a large Missouri trade, and had business connexions with the house of Robert Campbell & Company.

Question. Look at the letter dated "St. Louis, July 8, 1861," and the letter dated "St. Louis August 21, 1861," and say in whose handwriting they are? [Exhibiting two letters to the witness.]

Answer. I think they are in Robert Campbell's own handwriting.

Question. Look at the letters dated "St. Louis, April 5, 1859" and "October 3, 1863," and say in whose handwriting they are?

Answer. Those, I think, are in the handwriting of Robert Campbell. The account which is attached to one of them is in a different kind of writing.

(The letters and account were exhibited to the court, put in evidence, and appended to this record, marked "Exhibit No. 2.")

Question. In your position as teller in the bank with which you are connected, do you know anything about a draft or check of the Merchants' Bank of St. Louis, on the Bank of America, New York, for $18,074 01?

Answer. I do.

Question. State your knowledge in reference to it?

Answer. We received a check of that amount from Major Hastings, October 8, 1863, which we sent to our corresponding bank in New York, the Mercantile Bank, to be passed to our credit.

Question. State what it was given for by Major Hastings to your bank.

Answer. It was given to us in payment of some $20,000 of five-twenty bonds which we had ordered for him.

Question. Have you any knowledge of an investment made by Major Hastings in 1861 in seven-twenty bonds?

Answer. Nothing further than that the major told me he had invested some $7,000 in the seven-twenty bonds.

Question. Did you collect the coupons of those bonds for the major?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. In what year was that?

Answer. I think it was the year 1862.

Question. At what time?

Answer. I think it was in August some time.

Question. State further whether Major Hastings kept his bank account with your bank?

Answer. He kept a private account with us.

Question. State whether, to your knowledge, Major Hastings was in the habit of receiving drafts from time to time from Robert Campbell and others, of St. Louis, and depositing them in your bank for collection?

Answer. I think the greater portion, probably the entire deposit to his own private account, was on drafts received from St. Louis.

Question. Do you know by common rumor a house in this town kept by a Mrs. Miller?

Answer. I have heard of a woman of that name keeping a public house in this town, and having some fast ladies living with her.

Question. State the character of the house by common fame?

Answer. It was pretty generally known in Carlisle that it was a house of prostitution, and visited by some of our fast young men in and about Carlisle.

Question. You say you have resided in Carlisle some ten years?

Answer. Nine years and over.

Question. Have you known Major Hastings since you have been here?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. State his character and reputation in this community since you have known him.

Answer. His character, so far as I know, has been that of a highminded, honorable gentleman—a man having means of his own to live comfortably.

Question. Before the charge that is now brought against the major, was there any imputation against his integrity and honor as a man, to your knowledge?

Answer. Never, to my knowledge.

The judge advocate declined to cross-examine the witness.

Sergeant Major CHARLES O'BRIEN, a witness for the defence, being duly sworn, testifies as follows :

Direct-examination by the accused.

Question. What is your position in the service ?

Answer. Sergeant major.

Question. How long have you been at Carlisle barracks ?

Answer. About four years and two months. I have not been all the time there. I have been about eighteen months on the recruiting service in Boston.

Question. Were you at Carlisle barracks in the latter part of 1862 ?

Answer. I was in Boston then.

Question. When did you return to Carlisle ?

Answer. I returned on the 29th of January, 1863.

Question. Did you continue from that time forward until now at the barracks ?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Are you acquainted with Henry Orsay ?

Answer. I am.

Question. What was Orsay's position at that time and afterwards ?

Answer. He was superintendent's clerk.

Question. Do you know the manner in which the business of paying bounties was conducted by the superintendent and his clerk ?

Answer. I do.

Question. Describe the manner in which it was done.

Answer. Orsay had the receipt rolls signed himself, and after they were signed he got the money from the superintendent and paid it himself.

Question. Do you know whether, at any time during these payments, Mr. Orsay signed his name as witness to the payments at the time the men signed their names to the receipts ?

Answer. Yes, sir ; always that I saw.

Question. Did you frequently see it.

Answer. Often.

Question. Where did the men go to sign their names and receive their money ?

Answer. There were two offices : one was the superintendent's, and the other was called the adjutant's—that is, the sergeant major's—office, and they went in there and signed for and received the money there.

Question. What became of the rolls after the signature and payment of the bounties ? Where were they kept ?

Answer. Orsay kept them.

Question. Who had charge of all the papers in the office ?

Answer. Orsay.

Question. Do you know where the enlistment papers were kept ?

Answer. Orsay kept them in his desk.

Question. At what time were the returns finally made up to be sent to the department at Washington ?

Answer. At the end of the month, or at the end of the quarter, I am not certain which ; either one or the other.

Question. Who prepared the papers to be sent to Washington ?

Answer. Orsay.

Question. Was Orsay the adjutant's clerk as well as the superintendent's clerk?

Answer. Yes.

Question. Did he have charge of the adjutant's papers as well as the superintendent's?

Answer. Yes.

Question. Who had charge of the descriptive books in the office?

Answer. Orsay.

Question. Where were those descriptive books kept?

Answer. They were kept in the office?

Question. Which office?

Answer. There are two offices, the sergeant major's and the superintendent's. They were kept in the sergeant major's office.

Question. Were all the records kept in that office?

Answer. All.

Question. When these monthly vouchers were made up by Mr. Orsay, to whom did he present them for signature?

Answer. To the superintendent.

Question. Do you know whether the superintendent had had those papers previous to the time when they were presented to him for his final action on them?

Answer. I think not.

Question. What was Mr. Orsay's pay during the time he was the superintendent's clerk?

Answer. Thirteen dollars a month, for some months; I am not certain as to the number. He was a private at that time, and lance corporal at private's pay; and part of the time, I do not recollect how many months, he was full corporal at fourteen dollars a month.

Question. Had he any extra pay? and if so, state what it was.

Answer. He had twenty-five cents a day extra.

Question. Had he any other pay or emoluments of any kind?

Answer. There was a premium paid on recruits that enlisted at the post, of two dollars for each man. That was mine by right, but I gave him (I think it was) one-third. We might enlist twenty men during the month, or we might enlist ten, six, five, four, three, two, or one, as the case might be. He had a portion of it.

Question. Do you know of any other payments made to Orsay, or any money received by him from any source?

Answer. Not that I know of.

Question. What was Orsay's manner of living?

Answer. Extravagant for his pay.

Question. State as far as you know in what the extravagance consisted.

Answer. He hired a room in town in a certain house. He boarded there. I cannot say how much that must have cost him, but it must have cost him something more than a soldier's pay, and more than his income amounted to.

Question. In what house was that room?

Answer. A house known as Mag Miller's.

Question. What is the character of that house?

Answer. Disreputable, as far as I know.

Question. Did Orsay ever tell you that he kept a woman at that house?

Answer. Not directly.

Question. State whether he ever gave you any intimation on that subject.

Answer. He did not say exactly that he kept a woman, but he slept with women in the house.

Question. Do you know of Orsay's having any large sums of money during the time he was there?

Answer. No, I do not.

Question. Did you have any conversation with James Ryan last week, on the morning of the day when he started to go after his brother?

Answer. No, I had not, that I recollect of.

Question. Did you have any conversation with him at any time before he left to go after his brother?

Answer. No, not previous to his going after his brother.

Question. Well, after he returned?

Answer. I wish to explain that matter. The first I knew of his brother's going, he came into the office and said, in the presence of Sergeant Yaiser, that his brother had left with $2,500 of his money; and he told me that Major Royall was going to give him a pass for three days, and he would be damned if he would not bring back his brother again. He left immediately. I do not exactly recollect the time he came back, but he came into the office and told me, (I did not ask him, nor did I send for him to ask him anything at all about it,) "I saw him when I went to New York, and we both went to Niagara Falls together, and he wrote a letter to Colonel Mallery, the judge advocate of the court-martial, stating that if he got his pardon he would come back." He told me all this when he returned. I said to him, "You could not have gone to New York, and from there to Niagara Falls and back again, in that time, certainly." He said he did. I had no further conversation with him until (I am not certain of the day now) the day before yesterday or yesterday morning he came into the office. I had him detailed for some duty—I believe it was for guard. He told me he could not go. I asked him why. Said he, "Major Royal wants me to go to Harrisburg to meet my brother there." He came back that night, and he said he had been to New York, and that his brother was never coming back here again. He named the vessel in New York in which his brother would sail to Australia, and said that by the time he spoke to me his brother was a pretty good distance from here.

Question. Do you know about the time that Orsay deserted?

Answer. He left this post on the morning of the 14th of February last. Whether he went along with Sergeant Ryan and White I do not know.

Question. Was that before or after he had been taken to Washington?

Answer. I know nothing at all about his being taken to Washington. I do not know where he went to. We had no official intimation of his absence or desertion or anything else at that time.

Question. Did you see Orsay in Carlisle at any time in April last?

Answer. No; I saw him two or three days (I am not certain which) after he left this post, at the time I am speaking of.

Question. That was in February, was it?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Where did you see him then?

Answer. Guston told me one day that Orsay wished to see me at Mrs. Miller's. I went there to see him, and saw him.

Question. I wish you to try and remember whether you saw him after that, during the month of April, or about that time, before his recent return here.

Answer. I saw him once afterwards, but I do not recollect what month or time it was. I could not say whether it was in the month of March or April; I am not certain.

Question. Was that after he was reported to have deserted?

Answer. I am not certain.

Question. Where did you see him then?

Answer. At the same house.

Question. Did Orsay at any time ever express to you any suspicion that Major Hastings was committing frauds upon the government?

Answer. He did not.

Question. Did he ever say anything that implied as much ?

Answer. No.

Question. Did you ever have any conversation with Michael Ryan as to the circumstances under which Orsay escaped from him at Washington ?

Answer. I did.

Question. State the circumstances.

Answer. They were the circumstances of his escape, and the way he let him go. Ryan told me that he took Orsay to Washington, and went to Judge Turner's office. Judge Turner was not in. He went down to Willards' hotel to find somebody ; he did not say who. He said he went up stairs and looked for the person, whoever it was, and when he came back he said Orsay had run away from White. He said he went back to Judge Turner immediately, and reported that Orsay had run away from him, and Judge Turner said he must find Orsay, or he would hold him responsible. I think these were the words he used ; I am not certain. Ryan said he went out and searched every place he could. He then went into some dining saloon, or drinking saloon, (I am not certain which,) and was there some time, when the guard came in and apprehended him. That is all the statement he made to me.

Question. At what time was that statement made to you ?

Answer. It was after his return from his confinement in Washington.

Question. Did you ever hear George E. White give an account of the same circumstances ? and if so, state what he said.

Answer. No, I never heard White say anything at all about it.

Question. Were there any cupboards in these two offices that you have spoken of ?

Answer. Yes, there were cupboards.

Question. In both of them ?

Answer. Yes, sir ; there were cupboards and desks both.

Question. Were the cupboards used for keeping the papers and records of the office ?

Answer. One of the cupboards, the one in the superintendent's room, was used for keeping stationery. There was nothing in the other.

Question. What was the character of the locks on the desks and cupboards ?

Answer. They might easily have been opened. A man might open them with a penknife if he chose to do so.

Question. Who kept the key of the cupboard in the superintendent's office ?

Answer. Orsay. He had charge of the stationery.

Question. Do you know whether he had access to the desks of the superintendent's office ?

Answer. He had access to everything.

The direct examination of the witness was here closed.

Cross-examination by the judge advocate.

Question. Did you make an affidavit in the month of February in this year, before a justice of the peace in this town, in company with several others ?

Answer. I did.

Question. Did you, or did you not, in that affidavit, say that you firmly believed Orsay was a trustworthy and reliable man ?

Answer. I did, and always considered him such, from the fact of the officers of the post recommending him for a commission. I have always considered him such as long as I have known him.

Question. Did you, in the city of Washington, when you were there in attendance upon this court, have any conversation with private Michael Ryan and private George E. White, or either of them ?

Answer. I did with Ryan, and I will state the circumstance. Ryan came to me in Washington and said, "Sergeant Major, I am summoned before this court." I asked him what for. He said, "I expect it must be in this case. I have been three months in the Old Capitol prison, and I am afraid I will go there again." I asked him what for. "Well," said he, "I do not know: it appears they want to get something out of me that I have no knowledge of." I asked him, "Were you not tried for this offence—as they said—for letting Orsay go?" He said he had been. "Did you not," said I, "make a statement before that court that you did not let him go?" He replied, "I did." Said I, "Have you got any more to say about it?" Said he, "No, I have not." "Then," said I, "is not that sufficient for you?" "Well," said he, "I do not know; I wish I was out of Washington." I asked him why. "Well," he replied, "for the reason I gave you; I am afraid of getting into that prison again." Said I, "I do not think you have anything to fear as long as you tell the truth." "Well," said he, "I will tell the truth." He came to me afterwards, and he wanted my advice. I said to him, "I cannot give you any advice; you are old enough to advise yourself." "But," said he, "what shall I do?" This must have been the second or third time he came to me. "Well," said I, "you can do as you please; I do not want to have anything more to say or do with you; I know nothing at all about your affairs." I never saw him afterwards, until I saw him in Carlisle, the day we got back here.

Question. Did you not tell private Ryan that he ought to stick to the statement that he had made to Judge Turner?

Answer. I told him he had made a statement. Said I, "Can you make any other statement? Have you got anything else to say about it?" Said he, "No, I have not." "Well," said I, "why not stick to your former statement?"

Question. Did you not tell him he would get into trouble if he did not stick to the statement that he had first made?

Answer. No, I told him no such thing; but he and I were walking together one day, and White came and told him—at least Ryan told me so—that if he was seen walking with me, or keeping my company, he would be confined. Said I, "If that is the case you can keep my company no longer."

Question. Did you not tell White that he would get into trouble if he did not stick to the former statement that he made?

Answer. I did not.

Question. Did you not tell one or both of those men that the counsel for the accused desired to see them with reference to their testimony?

Answer. Yes, sir, I did so.

Question. Did you take that message from Major Hastings or from his lawyers?

Answer. I do not recollect whether I took it from any one or not. I recollect the circumstance, but I do not believe I took the message.

Question. Did any one request you to make that statement to them, that the lawyers desired to see them?

Answer. No, there was no request made at all.

Question. Did any one suggest it to you?

Answer. No, I think not.

Question. Then you acted upon your own responsibility, and at your own suggestion, in telling them that the lawyers desired to see them. Is that so?

Answer. I do not know; I forget that matter altogether.

Question. Did you not tell either or both of those men, in Carlisle, after their return from Washington, that they would get into trouble if they did not stick to their original statement?

Answer. No, I did not do anything of the kind.

Question. Did you not tell James Ryan, or did you not say in the presence of James Ryan, that those men ought to stick to their original statement?

Answer. James Ryan was speaking about it to me. He came to me and said something about Mike making some statement. Said I, "He told me in Washington he had only one statement to make, and he would do it." That is all the conversation I had with James Ryan at that time.

Question. Did you tell any of the witnesses that were summoned in Washington that they must not have any conversation with Corporal Orsay?

Answer. I did. I did not say they must not.

Question. Did you not order one or more of those witnesses not to go to Onion's house and have any conversation with Orsay?

Answer. I did not order them, for I could not do it. It was not in the line of my duty to do so. I was a witness in the matter myself as well as they. I did not order them, and could not do it.

Question. You told them then, I understand, but did not order them. Is that so?

Answer. I did not tell them any such thing.

Question. But you did tell them, as I understood you before, not to have any conversation with Orsay; was that so?

Answer. I told them it would not be right for them to have any conversation with Orsay, as they were witnesses for the defence.

Question. Did Major Hastings or his counsel request or suggest to you to tell them that?

Answer. No, they did not.

Question. Then it was at your own suggestion that you told them that?

Answer. I merely said it would not be right for them to keep company, for fear that Orsay or his companions might prejudice them.

Question. That was at your own suggestion, was it?

Answer. At my own suggestion.

Question. Did you see Major Hastings in Washington?

Answer. Frequently.

Question. Did you give any messages from him or his counsel to any of the witnesses in this case at any time?

Answer. No more than that the counsel desired to see the witnesses.

Question. State what witnesses.

Answer. Maynard and Webb. I took them there myself.

Question. Did you not give any message to Michael Ryan from Major Hastings at any time?

Answer. No.

Question. Or from his counsel?

Answer. No, I think not.

Question. Did you give any message to James Ryan, directly or indirectly, from Major Hastings or his lawyers?

Answer. No, certainly not.

Question. Did you have any conversation with Major Hastings or his lawyers with regard to the testimony to be given or expected to be given by Michael Ryan or by White?

Answer. I said that Ryan told me he would stick to his statement. He told me he had but one statement to make, and that was what I told them. I have mentioned before the statement he made to me. That was all I told them.

Question. Is that all you said to Major Hastings or his lawyers about Michael Ryan?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Was it all that you said about White?

Answer. I said nothing at all about White; did not mention him at all.

Question. Did you have any conversation with Major Hastings at any time since his return to Carlisle from Washington under any circumstances?

Answer. I did not. The last place I saw Major Hastings was in Baltimore on the way coming here, and I have not seen him since until now.

Question. Did you see his counsel in Carlisle since they came from Washington, and did you have any conversation with them?

Answer. I saw Mr. Stanton in company with Sergeant Turner and Sergeant Yaiser relative to what Mr. Ewing has got to say in the case as regards Orsay.

Question. Were you or were you not active or concerned, whether active or not, in seeing the witnesses for the defence and examining into what they would prove for the benefit of Major Hastings?

Answer. Nothing more than what I have stated. That is all the conversation I ever had with them.

Question. What was about the first time that you were aware of Orsay's desertion, as near as you recollect?

Answer. In fact, I am not aware of his desertion yet. Personally I am not aware of it that he has deserted at all.

Question. At what time did you first hear of his desertion?

Answer. That I cannot say. I do not recollect it.

Question. Had you not heard of his desertion before you saw him, as you stated in the month of March or April of this year?

Answer. I knew nothing at all of his desertion then or now.

Question. Did you not know that he was in concealment in this town at the time you saw him at Mrs. Miller's in March or April, when you went to see him?

Answer. He appeared to me to be in concealment; but I did not want to mix myself up in the matter at all, and did not want to have anything to do with it. He was talking something about Washington, but I paid no attention to what he said about it.

Question. You have stated that you returned from Boston in January, 1863; and you have also stated what were Orsay's duties in connexion with Major Hastings's office. Was he engaged in those duties when you returned in January, 1863?

Answer. He was not.

Question. Then you do not undertake to give your evidence with reference to Orsay's duties at that time?

Answer. I was made sergeant major on the 23d of April, 1863, and that was the time Orsay took charge of the superintendent's affairs.

Question. Then your statement with regard to his control of papers and payment of moneys, and the other statements you have made, do not apply to the time between your return in January and the time that you have last fixed in April. Is that so?

Answer. He may have had charge of them before that, but I do not know anything about it.

Question. What were your own duties in connexion with the papers, vouchers, returns, &c., which you have spoken about?

Answer. Nothing. Orsay took charge of all; at least he had charge of all the papers.

Question. Was any one else but Sergeant Yaiser present at the time of the conversation to which you have testified with James Ryan?

Answer. There might have been two or three clerks. Whether they paid attention to it or not I do not know.

Question. Did you, as part of your duties as sergeant major, see and examine, or in any way be familiar with, the papers in the superintendent's office?

Answer. I had nothing at all to do with the superintendent's papers.

The cross-examination of the witness was here closed.

Re-examination by the accused.

Question. State whether you have ever known Orsay to imitate the hand writing of Major Hastings, or of any other person.

Answer. Yes, as far as taking a pen and going over a piece of paper is concerned. He has done it that way.

Question. State your knowledge on that subject; whether he was skilful in imitating the handwriting of other persons.

Answer. I think he was capable of doing anything at all that way.

Question. You have often seen him exercise his ingenuity in that way?

Answer. Not very often. I have taken notice of it; I have not observed it or watched it, but merely taken notice of it.

Question. Have you seen him write the name of Major Hastings?

Answer. Yes.

Question. Was it like the handwriting of the major?

Answer. I could scarcely tell the difference.

Re-cross-examination.

By the judge advocate:

Question. You have stated that you had no conversation with Major Hastings since his return to Carlisle. Have you had any message or note from or to him?

Answer. No, sir; nothing from or to him.

By the court:

Question. Have there been any desertions from the post lately?

Answer. There may have been two or three or four recruits; I do not know exactly the number; I am not certain of it.

Question. Is it any portion of your business to know when a man deserts?

Answer. It is when the company morning report is made in the office to that effect.

Question. Was Corporal Orsay ever reported as a deserter?

Answer. Not that I am aware of.

Question. How was he reported on the books from February to March and April of this year?

Answer. I do not know of any report at all made of him during that time. I am not certain that there was any report made.

Question. Did you account for him in any way? Was there not an account made of him in some way during that time?

Answer. There must have been, but I am not aware of it. The clerks make out the post returns and take them into the superintendent, the commanding officer, and he signs them.

Question. Do you not know, then, whether Corporal Orsay ever deserted?

Answer. I never heard anything at all about it; not a word one way or another—I mean, officially. I cannot take hearsay for these things.

Question. Do you know whether Corporal Orsay was ever detached from the post during the months of January, February, March, or April, 1864?

Answer. No, I do not know anything about his being detached. When he went away I heard nothing at all about it—not a word. As I said before, I saw him and Ryan leave the office together, and since then I have heard nothing official about it. That is all I can say about it.

Question. Did you make up any post returns during either of these months?

Answer. I did not, myself.

Question. Did you examine those returns to see if they were correct?

Answer. The adjutant or the commanding officer does that. I did not do it.

Question. When did you first hear of Orsay's desertion?

Answer. There was a general order published on parade one morning reducing Ryan and sentencing White to forfeit $10 of his pay for six months, and Ryan the same, for having let Orsay go. The date I do not recollect. That is the only official intimation I ever had of it.

The court then adjourned until this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

EDWARD W. HINKS,
Brigadier General U. S. Vols., President.
GARRICK MALLERY,
Lieutenant Colonel V. R. C., Judge Advocate.

CARLISLE, PA., Saturday, August 27, 1864—3 p. m.

The court met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: All the members of the court, the judge advocate, the accused, his counsel and the reporters.

GEORGE ASHTON, a witness for the defence, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by the accused.

Question. What is your rank, and where are you stationed?

Answer. I am a private. I am stationed at Carlisle barracks.

Question. Were you in Harrisburg recently when the order came from Washington for White and Ryan to go down to attend this court at that place?

Answer. I was one of a guard that was sent down with prisoners to Harrisburg at that time.

Question. Did you see White on that occasion?

Answer. I did, near the depot.

Question. State anything you heard White say in regard to the matter of their having been sent for to go to Washington.

Answer. I heard White remark that he was ordered to Washington; that Orsay had turned state's evidence; that he expected to get into trouble himself, and he had let him escape to save Orsay; and now he expected he had turned against him.

The judge advocate declined to examine the witness.

ALEXANDER B. EWING, a witness for the defence, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by the accused.

Question. Where do you live?

Answer. In Carlisle.

Question. What is your occupation?

Answer. That of an undertaker and cabinet-maker combined.

Question. Do you know Henry Orsay?

Answer. I do not know that I do know Henry Orsay. I never heard any other name than Orsay. I do not know his first name, whether it is Henry or David. I know a young man by the name of Orsay.

Question. What was his position?

Answer. To the best of my knowledge, I think he was a clerk at the barracks.

Question. State any conversation that you had with Orsay relative to making a box with a secret apartment, and state also whether you had any conversations with him at any time relative to his imitating or counterfeiting the handwriting of Major Hastings, then superintendent at the barracks.

Answer. The first of my knowledge of Mr. Orsay was that he came, I suppose for a year, off and on, to visit my shop, and we had a half hour or an hour's conversation occasionally together. After the raid into the valley here, he came to me and ordered the making of a large chest for his own private use. I cannot tell the exact time, but I think it was in and about September or October.

He got me to make that chest in a peculiar way, and had everything arranged. I asked him why he was so particular about some points of it. He said he had business matters of his own that he wanted to put there, that nobody else would know anything about. Among the rest, he said he had a very fine gun, his sword, and a pair of pistols, that belonged to himself as an individual. I said I did not know that a man was allowed to have those things out of the government; I thought everything belonged to the government. He said a man had a right to have what he pleased, when he got them as he did. I said no more about it, and went on with the chest. I was afraid to make it, he was so particular about it. I went on for weeks plotting about it, and finally he told me to get the box ready, and he would arrange the partitions for me so that I could fix it. I made the box so as to look that there would be nothing noticed about it, having it half like a bunk. I was then to make a fine hair mattress for it. I got a little uneasy of the young man, knowing his position and the amount of pay he received. I thought it would not pay for me, a poor man, to make it. I said to him, "Orsay, that will cost some money." Said he, "What will it cost?" Said I, "I do not know, really, exactly, but this mattress and chest, as you want it made, will cost a great deal of money." Said he, "I do not care a d—n if it costs me fifty dollars; I have got plenty of money." I said to him, "Then it is all right; I will make the chest." Time passed along, and he would come in of an evening and buy some small pictures from me, which he paid for. He always had plenty of money. About the first of February, I think, there was a discharge handed me by a young man of the town here, to be framed in a little gilt frame; and then, I think, from that on to the 10th, or 12th, I cannot give the exact date, Orsay came and brought in some bills to pay me for the horses and hearse for burying a soldier or two at the barracks, and I gave him my receipt. I had to sign these vouchers twice, and while I was signing them he said, "That name of yours is very easily counterfeited." Said I, "I always thought not, as I never raise my hand off the paper." Said he, "I have counterfeited a hand many a time that was harder to counterfeit than that." I asked him whose it was. He said Captain Hastings's, as he was then. I said, "I have got a writing in here with his name to it," and I showed it to him. He said, "It would be d—d hard for the old man to tell whether he wrote that or not, if he saw it." That is about the conversation that passed between us.

Question. Did you understand him to say or to mean that Major Hastings would not know whether the paper was signed by himself or by Orsay?

Answer. No, sir, I did not. I thought, from his conversation, that he wrote Captain Hastings's name so well that he could not tell whether the major wrote it or himself; or, in other words, I thought if he laid it before the major in that light, or any other, the major would hardly be able to tell whether it was his own handwriting or not, it was so perfectly done. If I may be allowed to say one word, I will state why I think so, and why it is upon my mind. I said to my wife that night when I went into the room, "That man Orsay is a dangerous man for Mr. Hastings." It bore on my mind so heavily that I could not keep it to myself. The impression rested on my mind that a man who counterfeited a name, or said he could do it, so perfectly, was dangerous to any man as an officer.

Question. Did he say how often he had counterfeited Major Hastings's handwriting?

Answer. He did not say the number of times. He said "many a time."

Question. Were you requested by Orsay to make a false bottom in the trunk, or bunk, you made for him?

Answer. Yes, sir, I was. He did not say a false bottom, but an extra bottom to the chest.

Question. Was it concealed?

H. Ex. Doc. 54—14

Answer. It was to be made so as not to show anything at all when it was finished. It is not finished now.

Question. Why did you not finish it?

Answer. Because he was arrested before I got through with the work.

Question. Have you got that piece of furniture now?

Answer. Yes, sir, I have.

Question. Did Mr. Orsay about that time say anything to you on the subject of getting furniture to furnish a house?

Answer. He said to me that after a while he would need some nice furniture, and that I should do this box up neatly and nicely for him.

The judge advocate declined to cross-examine the witness.

Sergeant JOHN YAISER, a witness for the defence, being duly sworn, testifies as follows :

Direct examination by the accused.

Question. What is your position at the barracks?

Answer. First sergeant of the permanent company.

Question. How long have you been at the barracks?

Answer. Two years and five months.

Question. During that time have you been well acquainted with Corporal Orsay?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Do you know what were his habits of living, whether extravagant or economical?

Answer. They have been extravagant.

Question. In what way?

Answer. In regard to living, carriage-riding; taking a certain lady out carriage-riding to different places.

Question. Do you know whether he kept a room in Carlisle?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. Where was that room?

Answer. It was here at Mrs. Miller's, who lives down here by the railroad bridge.

Question. What is the reputation of that house?

Answer. It is the general belief that the house is not very good.

Question. In what respect not good?

Answer. As regards the ladies who are living there.

Question. Were you present at a conversation between James Ryan and Sergeant-Major O'Brien relative to the escape or running away of Michael Ryan?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. State what that conversation was.

Answer. One morning, after I had taken the morning report to the adjutant's office, I found Sergeant Major O'Brien and Private Ryan in conversation about the desertion or absence of Michael Ryan, and I heard Private Ryan say that he went away with about $2,500 of his money, and if he knew where he was to be found he would go after him and take him up and bring him back. I then walked away, as it was going on close towards guard mounting.

Question. Was this remark made in a complaining way?

Answer. It seemed to be made on Ryan's part as a complaint.

Question. Did he complain that his brother had robbed him of his money?

Answer. Yes, sir; that is the way I understood him. I will furthermore state that he has made remarks to another non-commissioned officer at the garrison as regards his brother going away with some of his money.

Question. Who is that person?

Answer. Corporal Fisher, of the permanent company.

Question. Was it in your presence?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question. State what that conversation was with Corporal Fisher.

Answer. He allowed that his brother ran away with some of his money, and that he did not think he would do the like of that.

Question. When did these conversations occur?

Answer. It happened about the day after Michael Ryan had left, as near as I can recollect.

Question. How long ago?

Answer. I could not say exactly the day, but it cannot be more than about five days ago.

The judge advocate declined to cross-examine the witness.

The court then adjourned until Monday morning, at 9 o'clock.

EDWARD W. HINKS,
Brigadier General U. S. Vols., President.
GARRICK MALLERY,
Lieutenant Colonel V. R. C., Judge Advocate.

CARLISLE, PA., Tuesday, August 30, 1864.

The court met at 9 o'clock a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

Present: All the members of the court, the judge advocate, the accused, his counsel, and the reporters.

The record of Saturday and of Monday last was read and approved.

ALEXANDER B. EWING, a witness for the defence, recalled.

Direct examination by the accused continued.

Question. State whether, at any time after you commenced making the box of which you spoke for Orsay, he exhibited to you any sums of money, large or small.

Answer. As I said on Saturday, my fears were aroused as to his not being able to pay me for the box, and he swore he did not care if it cost fifty dollars. He came in again in a day or two afterwards, and said that if I had any fears of it he was willing to pay me some money on it, and he pulled out a roll of notes that I thought at the time, if I had it, would buy me a cemetery which I have had in view for some years. I said, "No, Mr. Orsay, I never make a practice of taking pay beforehand." I did not take the pay. I opened my eyes at seeing such a pile of money.

Question. Did you notice the size of the bills?

Answer. There were some fifties and a number of twenties that I noticed as I cast my eyes at the end of the pile; and there were some tens; that was as low as I saw.

Question. Do you know the character of the house kept by Mrs. Miller in this town?

Answer. It is considered to be a loose place.

Question. Is it reputed to be a house of prostitution?

Answer. It is so said to be by almost every person that speaks of it. Further than that, I do not know. I am not a visitor at places of that kind.

Question. Do you know whether Mr. Orsay is staying there at the present time?

Answer. I do not know of myself; I have so heard.

The direct examination of the witness was here closed.

The judge advocate declined to cross-examine the witness.

Rev. JOSEPH ALEXANDER ROSS, a witness for the defence, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by the accused.

Question. What is your position in the service?

Answer. I am the chaplain of the post.

Question. Will you state whether you have ever known Mr. Orsay to exercise his ingenuity in imitating the handwriting of any persons? And if so, state of whom, and all the circumstances connected with it.

Answer. I frequently go into the offices, and sometimes sit down for a few moments, and I recollect once taking up a pen and making capitals to the letter K, and also writing my own name, which I do peculiarly. Major Hastings had to sign my pay-roll, and I recollect that his signature was peculiar. I have tried myself to imitate his hand. I have tried with my right and with my left hand, as I write with both. I never could imitate his hand so that it could not be distinguished. I recollect that sitting in the office, as I do often, Mr. Orsay imitated the capitals A, B, C, and on to K, written by me, as I before stated. I then wrote them with my left hand, and I would defy any one to say that the same hand wrote them. He then imitated the capitals which were written with the left hand. He then imitated Captain (now Major) Hastings's hand (which is a peculiar signature in my opinion) so perfectly that I remarked pleasantly to him, "My dear sir, you can do what I cannot do; I cannot tell the difference." "I think probably you could," was the reply. I said, "No, sir; I have tried it." I then held them up; I put on glasses; I turned the paper; I examined the distances of the letters, and I said, "Sir, upon my honor, I could not, if on oath, distinguish." I wrote the word "remember," and that was imitated by him so that I thought the imitation was perfect, and I envied him his penmanship. The word "running-hand," written by me, he also imitated, and did all this in a very short time. Then I wrote the word "Harrisburg," or "Reading," I am not positive which, but my impression is that it was "Harrisburg," and I changed the "R" to an "H," and made the H in my own peculiar style, with my right hand, as though I had done it with my left, and that was imitated perfectly. That is all I know of Orsay's specimens of writing.

Question. State whether you have known Mr. Orsay to give any intimation of his possession of money or property, and of his intention to go into business and of his intention to desert, before he did desert.

Answer. Mr. Orsay visited my house. My quarters were destroyed, and I was living in Carlisle. He visited my house on my own invitation. He told me that he was a Frenchman. He said in conversation that he was sorry he had entered the service. He left upon my mind the impression that he was an educated Frenchman. He stated to me that if it was not for the disgrace of deserting he would desert. He was then in very poor health, apparently. I thought there was something preying upon his mind, and went so far as any Christian gentleman could do to ascertain, that I might do him good. He left on my mind the impression that he had means, and could return to Canada and do much better for this life than he could do in the service.

Question. Was that impression of the presence of means derived from what he said?

Answer. Certainly.

Question. State if you had any conversation with James Ryan after his return from the pursuit of his brother; and if so, what it was.

Answer. I recollect that on the Sabbath morning before the last he came to me when I was just preparing for divine service, and stated that he had been to Canada. I said, "I am very busy; I don't want to be troubled." He then stated that he had met his brother in the Clifton House, at Niagara Falls. He said that he had met General Hooker and he thought several Congressmen, and his brother, and had a long conversation with his brother. I asked, "Why did you not return him, if you are a friend of Major Hastings?" He stated that his brother said he would return, but he thought, and had left under the impression, that he was to be tried, and probably imprisoned again. I then said that if he had been a brother of mine, and I had gone that far, I would have brought him with me, for his own character's sake. That ended the conversation.

Question. Did you have any conversation with him or his brother in reference to any connexion between himself and Major Hastings as to his going away?

Answer. After Michael Ryan returned from Washington, he beckoned to me, and after a moment's hesitation I made a few paces and met him. He then commenced stating to me Orsay's desertion. I said that his desertion did not surprise me at all. The impression was on my mind, from the conversation I had had with him, that he waited for an opportunity to desert. Michael Ryan commenced saying to me that Orsay had deserted, and I said, "I think that you were selected as a brave soldier, and I think it was your duty to have kept the prisoner." He said that when they got to the city of Washington they waited upon Judge Turner, but he was not in, and they went to Willards' and he left Orsay with White, and went in, and when he came out the prisoner was gone. After my return from Washington, a friend came to me and said there was an insinuation that I was urging Michael Ryan to leave after his return from Washington city. I said that it was an infamous and infernal insinuation or lie. I called Ryan and White to me the very first time I set my eyes on them, which was in front of the tavern near the railroad. I asked Ryan if he had insinuated anything of the kind. He said no, he could not, he thought I was a man of honor. I said to him, "Ryan, I want justice done; and if you are a friend of Major Hastings, stay"—it had been talked that he was going to leave—"stay, and tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth."

Question. In your conversation with James Ryan, after his return from Canada, did you or did you not ask him whether Major Hastings had anything to do with his brother's going away, and what was his reply?

Answer. He met me afterwards, I think it was upon the last Sabbath morning. He had been relieved from duty. When he met me he complained that he had been removed. I did not ask him by whom. I told him I wanted no conversation with him. He then said to me, "Why, are you prejudiced against me?" I said "no." I then said to him, "Did Major Hastings advise your brother to leave, or did he send you, as you stated before to me, after him?" He said no; he did not want his brother to go, and he believed his brother's absence would do the major more harm than good. Ryan said that Major Hastings had nothing to do with his brother's going away.

The direct examination of the witness was here closed.

The judge advocate declined to cross-examine the witness.

CHRISTIAN INHOFF, a witness for the defence, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by the accused.

Question. What is your occupation, and where do you reside?

Answer. I am post sutler at Carlisle barracks. I reside in Carlisle.

Question. State whether there was recently any conversation in your store in regard to James Ryan having said that his brother had gone off and carried away some of his money?

Answer. I merely heard it spoken of in the store. I paid no attention to it. I do not remember who spoke of it.

Question. Was James Ryan there at the time?

Answer. I do not remember.

Question. Did you meet Michael Ryan in Harrisburg on last Friday?

Answer. I did.

Question. State the conversation.

Answer. I asked him whether it was true that he had received any money from Major Hastings for leaving Carlisle barracks. He said he had received one hundred dollars.

Question. For what?

Answer. He did not say for what.

Question. What was the impression produced on your mind by his answer?

Answer. I supposed at the time it was for a recompense, he being broken of his commission that he held there, as sergeant at the post.

Question. Did he say anything to you in reply to your question of having received two thousand dollars for going away?

Answer. He did not.

Question. Where and when was this?

Answer. At Harrisburg, on Friday morning.

Question. Did he intimate that he had ever received more than one hundred dollars from the major?

Answer. He did not.

Question. Was this while on his way back to this place after his supposed desertion to Canada?

Answer. He told me he was coming up to Carlisle that day.

The direct examination of the witness was here closed.

The judge advocate declined to cross-examine the witness.

The accused offers in evidence the deposition of Hon. Simon Cameron, taken by consent yesterday before a justice of the peace, and it is received and read as follows:

The deposition of the Hon. Simon Cameron, taken by consent, in the presence of the judge advocate, the accused, and his counsel, in the case of the United States against Major David H. Hastings, taken before me, Abraham Dehuff, justice of the peace in and for the county of Cumberland, State of Pennsylvania, at Carlisle, on this the 29th day of August, 1864; and the said witness, being duly sworn, deposes as follows:

Question by the Hon. F. P. Stanton, one of the counsel for the accused. How long have you known Major Hastings?

Answer. I heard of him first in the beginning of 1861, at the commencement of the war, as an officer here in the service of the government. I did not see him for some time after that; probably six or eight months; I do not remember.

Question. What opportunities have you had of knowing his character as a man and an officer?

Answer. When the war began, Washington was surrounded with enemies to such an extent that we had no intercourse with the country beyond the limits of the District. I sent a messenger to Harrisburg to endeavor to get some troops that were at Carlisle brought to Washington. There were a couple of hundred, either two or four hundred (I do not remember which now) recruits there. I sent a messenger to Harrisburg to see how they could be got; and in that way I became acquainted with Major Hastings. The major was here at Carlisle in some capacity, I do not know what, and he assisted in sending those troops forward. The troops came to Washington at a time when the whole city was very much alarmed, and when we needed troops very much. I believe they were equipped and mounted within two days after my order reached Harrisburg; and, as I understood, a great part of that was done through the exertions of Captain Hastings, as he was then. That brought him first to my notice. He was afterwards employed by direction of Colonel Porter to inspect horses at Harrisburg, and I heard a great deal of him while he was in the performance of that duty. There was a great deal of suspicion among the people about the department of everybody who was connected with the procuring of horses for the government. Everybody was suspected of doing wrong. It became my duty to inquire very particularly into the character of Captain Hastings. I did so, by various means which it is not necessary for me now to state, sufficient to satisfy myself of his entire integrity; and in consequence of that, I placed him in command of the garrison here at Carlisle. After that I saw a good deal of him.

Question. What reputation does he bear in the army and elsewhere, or has he borne prior to this charge against him?

Answer. In the army his reputation is of the very highest character. Everybody who knew him, and all the officers with whom I came in contact seemed to know him, thought very much of him, especially Adjutant General Thomas, on whom I called for information in regard to everybody in the army. General Thomas always spoke of him in the very highest terms as a man of ability and integrity. I have heard a great deal of him, more than I have seen. I have met him frequently since I left the War Department. I never met him more than two or three times before that; but I have heard a great deal of him, and the impression made upon my mind was that there was no purer man living than Major Hastings. If I had charge of the War Department, I would have trusted him with any post which he could have filled, especially where integrity was necessary; and so I would do now in my private capacity.

Question. Were these inquiries of which you spoke made in your character as Secretary of War?

Answer. Yes, sir; they were made for my own information as Secretary of War, and for the benefit of the service. You may remember, too, that at that time almost everybody in the army was doubted. Six or seven officers here in Carlisle, I think, perhaps more, certainly that number of men holding commissions from the general government, deserted and went over to the enemy. A great many men in the War Department itself were doubtful. A good many did go off after the firing at Fort Sumter. Among others, I remember the quartermaster general, General Johnson, ran off, and very nearly the half of the whole officers of the army. It became necessary to my own safety that I should inquire as strictly as possible into the character of everybody holding a commission under the department, but I suppose I became more acquainted with Major Hastings from his connexion with the horse business in Harrisburg. The judge advocate declines to examine the witness.

SIMON CAMERON.

Sworn and subscribed before me the day and year aforesaid.

ABRAHAM DEHUFF, [SEAL.]

Justice of the Peace.

The accused offers in evidence certain extracts from the records of the proceedings of the court-martial which tried Sergeant Michael Ryan and Private George S. White for permitting the escape of Henry Orsay when in their custody, in Washington city, in the month of February last.

1. The deposition of Judge Turner, on the trial of George E. White, as follows, viz :

" L. C. TURNER, a witness for the government, was called and duly sworn :

"Question by judge advocate :

"Question. State your name and rank, and the duty on which you are now employed.

Answer Levi C. Turner, major and judge advocate of the army in and around Washington.

"Question. Do you know the accused? And if so, state the circumstances under which you first met him?

"Answer. I have seen him before. He came into my office in the city about three or three and a half o'clock in the afternoon of the 17th or 18th of February last. He came in with Sergeant Michael Ryan, and reported, presenting to me this paper. [The paper is here given.]

"They reported that the prisoner, Henry Orsay, had escaped. I asked them the circumstances. Ryan said they came to my office about 11 or 12 o'clock that forenoon, with Orsay in charge, and asked for me, and that my clerk told them I was at the Old Capitol prison, and would be absent for an hour or an hour and a half. They did not then disclose that they had a prisoner in charge. Ryan said they then went to a restaurant, and on their return he stepped into Willards' hotel to inquire for Major Hastings, leaving the prisoner, Orsay, in White's charge, outside the door. This, as I understood, was about 1½ o'clock. The prisoner, Orsay, he stated, escaped while in the custody of White, and while Ryan was in the hotel. I then asked White how the prisoner had escaped from him? He said he did not see how he escaped; that he did not know whether he had got into a car, or where he went; that he only looked around and found that he was gone.

"Question. What was the charge against Orsay?

"Answer. He had been the confidential clerk of Major Hastings, at Carlisle barracks; was charged with having obtained money ($8,000 or $10,000) by means of false vouchers."

He made substantially the same statement on oath as a witness at the trial of Michael Ryan. After the close of the evidence on the part of the government in the case of Michael Ryan, the court proceeds to say as follows, viz :

"The accused, having no witness to produce, made the following statement :

"We were delayed at Baltimore in coming on, and did not arrive here until about one o'clock, and went to Major Turner's office immediately. Not finding Major Turner in, we went to a restaurant below Willards' to get dinner, which I paid for, coming back by Willards'. I stepped in there to see Major Hastings, to see whether I could not turn over the prisoner to some one. Coming out I met White, who told me the prisoner had escaped. We made search for him for over an hour in the vicinity, and then went to Major Turner to report."

The accused offers the affidavit of B. McIntire, (taken before an associate judge of Cumberland county, Pennsylvania,) in regard to a statement to him by George B. Geiger in January last, at that time a clerk in the adjutant's office of Carlisle barracks, and now a captain of colored troops in the army of General Sherman.

The paper was read as follows :

CUMBERLAND COUNTY, ss :

Personally appeared before me B. McIntire, who, being duly sworn according to law, deposeth and saith, that some time in an early part of last winter, George B. Geiger told deponent that a proposition was made to him by Mr. Orsay, chief clerk at the Carlisle garrison, that if he, said Geiger, (then at the same place,) would join with him, the said Orsay, that they could make for themselves each sixty dollars each week, and it would never be known by any person, and asked deponent's advice on the proposition. Deponent strongly denounced the proposition, and said Geiger agreed with deponent, and said that he would have nothing to do in it. Said Geiger had been introduced to deponent by George Blutzenberger, the grandfather of said Geiger, then quite a youth, not eighteen years of age, as deponent believes and was informed, and deponent then and still believes to be a young man of talents and moral worth, and full faith and credit ought to be given his statement.

B. MCINTIRE.

MICHAEL CORKLIN, Associate Judge.

The court was cleared for deliberation ; and when the doors were reopened, the judge advocate announced that the court had decided that the paper was inadmissible as evidence.

Sergeant Major CHARLES O'BRIEN, a citizen, for the defence, re-called.

Direct examination by the accused.

Question. State what conversation you had at any time with Mr. Orsay relative to his going into business after he should leave the service.

Answer. He told me one day that he wished his time was out. I asked him what for. "Well," said he, "I am sick and tired of the damned army." He said he was going into business. I asked, "What business ; do you expect to re-enlist ?" "No," said he, "I will have plenty of money when my time is out." Said I, "Where would you get it ?" "Oh !" said he, "I have got it." I said, "Allow me to ask you how much you have got." He said no, he could not tell me. He mentioned thousands. Of course I did not believe him at the time ; I thought he was speaking nonsense.

Question. Did he answer your question as to what business he intended to go into ?

Answer. No ; he did not say what business.

Question. State at what time this conversation occurred, as near as you can recollect.

Answer. I cannot exactly say, but it must have been in September or October, 1863.

The direct examination of the witness was here closed.

Cross-examination by the judge advocate.

Question. Have you, during the last few days, taken any action to reduce Lance Corporal James Ryan from that position ?

Answer. No ; I took no action to reduce him ; but on Saturday last I went into the recruits' quarters; the recruits were under guard, and he was corporal of the guard. I had some business with the first sergeant of the company at the time. I saw the corporal in a bunk with two recruits, playing cards, which of course is strictly against orders at all times, in non-commissioned officers particularly. Of course I could not pass it over. I went to Corporal Ryan and said, "Corporal, is that the way you do when on guard over recruits?" "Well," said he, "I was only looking on." I said "I know better; I saw the money between the three of you and the cards." I acquainted the first sergeant; he came and saw it. I came out and met Corporal Brown, and I said, "Corporal, do non-commissioned officers always associate that way with recruits, playing cards with them, &c.?" "Oh," said he, "that is nothing; it is rumored that Corporal Ryan is taking money from recruits for the purpose of letting them go." I had often heard that before. Ryan overheard the conversation. Next morning I had Ryan relieved from doing duty with the recruits on account of this. He went and reported me to Major Royal, stating that I had relieved him from the company. Major Royal asked me why I did it—by what authority. I told him by the authority I always had for doing so when I thought non-commissioned officers did not do their duty properly. Then he said that I had accused Corporal Ryan of taking a ten-dollar gold piece from a recruit to let him go. That I never spoke of at all. This was the affair.

Question. Did you not receive the reprimand of the commandant of the post, Major Royal, for your interference with James Ryan?

Answer. He told me I had no business to relieve him, without his or the adjutant's authority; and Ryan said he would make charges against me of defamation of character, unless I could prove his taking money from recruits for the purpose of allowing them to desert.

The cross-examination of the witness was here closed.

Re-examination by the accused.

Question. State to the court whether the order of Major Hastings, when in command of Carlisle barracks, authorizing the sergeant major, in his discretion, to place non-commissioned officers in charge of the companies, has ever been rescinded.

Answer. It has not been.

Question. Was it in pursuance of that authority that you changed the duties of Ryan from the recruits to the permanent company?

Answer. It was.

The court then adjourned until this afternoon at three o'clock.

JOHN B. PARKER, a witness for the defence, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by the accused.

Question. What is your occupation?

Answer. A lawyer.

Question. How long have you lived in Carlisle?

Answer. All my life, except while I was absent being educated.

Question. How long have you known Major Hastings?

Answer. Six or seven years.

Question. During that time have you had an opportunity of knowing the character he has borne among those who have known him best?

Answer. I have, in the town.

Question. State what has been his reputation as an officer and as a man of integrity.

Answer. It has been very good within my knowledge and information—I should, perhaps, add, up to the time when the matter of this accusation was agitated. Previous to that time I neither knew nor heard of anything derogatory to his character for integrity. I never have heard of anything derogatory to his character as an officer. On the contrary, I have always heard his character as an officer spoken of in very high terms.

Question. Will you state whether you have known his mode of living for the last three or four years?

Answer. Major Hastings has resided next door to me, in a house of which I have the charge, for more than five years past; I think, since January of 1859. I have been in constant friendly and familiar intercourse with him during all that time, and with his family.

Question. What has been his mode of living during that time, extravagant or economical?

Answer. It has not been in any respect extravagant in my observation. He has lived respectably and comfortably.

Question. What rent does he pay for his house?

Answer. Two hundred dollars ($200) a year.

Question. How does his mode of living since he took command of Carlisle barracks compare with his previous mode?

Answer. My observation and impression has been that it has been less expensive, more economical, since he has been in command of Carlisle barracks than it was previously.

The direct examination of the witness was here closed.

The judge advocate declined to cross-examine the witness.

Lieutenant THOMAS MCGREGOR recalled by the defence.

Direct examination by the accused.

Question. Will you state what was the nature of the business with which Major Hastings was connected in the fall of 1863 and in the beginning of the winter of 1864, while you were at the barracks?

Answer. His business was to superintend the mounted recruiting service; he was commander of Carlisle barracks, and also of the rendezvous for drafted men.

Question. State the extent of that business at those periods—whether it was much or little.

Answer. We were very busy there during that period. Sometimes 300 or 400 men would come there in a day. I recollect that once I was called to leave muster, and go and attend to the recruits coming in. I was frequently up till eleven or twelve o'clock at night; and the clerks were sometimes working all night—three or four nights in the week.

Question. State whether the effect of this rush of men to the post was such as to oblige Major Hastings to commit the detail of the business largely to his clerks.

Answer. Most of the business had to be intrusted to the clerks, because the officers at the post could not attend to it.

Question. What different accounts had the major to attend to and have settled in his position at the barracks?

Answer. The accounts of funds for paying bounties. I do not know of any other money accounts. The major had to attend to all the correspondence with the different recruiting officers, and there were sometimes from six to nine recruiting stations. All those officers furnished him with statements of their accounts; they all came under his supervision.

Question. How long have you known Major Hastings?

Answer. Two years.

Question. What has been his character as an officer and gentleman since you have known him?

Answer. Excellent. I always esteemed him as one of the best officers in the army.

Question. What has been his reputation as an officer and man of integrity, to your knowledge?

Answer. His reputation has always been excellent.

The direct examination of the witness was here closed.

The judge advocate declined to cross-examine the witness.

The counsel for the accused requested an adjournment until this afternoon at four o'clock, in order that time may be allowed for the reception of the depositions which had been sent for to Washington.

GARRICK MALLERY,

CARLISLE, PA., Friday, September 2, 1864.

The court met at ten o'clock a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

Present: All the members of the court, the judge advocate, the accused, his counsel, and the reporters.

The judge advocate stated to the court that certain witnesses were summoned more than a fortnight ago by the accused in the usual way, and all those summoned sent notice that the Secretary of War could not dispense with their services from their duties at Washington; and they suggested, by order of the Secretary of War, that their depositions could be taken. Immediately the proper steps were taken to procure their depositions, and an officer was appointed to take them on interrogatories agreed upon between the counsel of the accused and the judge advocate. The depositions had not yet arrived, for some unaccountable reason. As, however, they were all confined to the subject of the character of the accused, and his general character in the service was probably known to the members of the court, there appeared no occasion for further delay. The judge advocate, therefore, proposed to admit that Major Hastings had borne an unusually high character during his previous life, and also to allow the depositions referred to to form a portion of the record in the same manner and to the same effect as if the case were closed after they had been put in, provided they shall arrive before the court begins to deliberate upon a finding.

The counsel for the accused stated that, with that understanding, they were ready to present the defence. Whereupon,

The accused, having no further testimony to offer, presented the following written address, which was read by Hon. F. P. Stanton, one of his counsel, in his STATEMENT OF DEFENCE.

MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN OF THE COURT-MARTIAL: I am now called before this tribunal to answer the only charges ever brought against me during the long period of my service of more than a quarter of a century in the army of the United States. Through all the vicissitudes of an active life, from the time I entered the army as a private soldier until I attained the honorable commission which I now hold, no reproach, so far as I have heard or known, has ever been cast upon my good name.

The crime involved in the charges and specifications pending before the court is one of great magnitude; and the suddenness of this grave and unexpected accusation, together with the plausible array of testimony in support of it, would be well calculated to overwhelm me if I were not sustained by the consciousness of my own integrity and innocence. A great fraud has undoubtedly been perpetrated in the office lately under my superintendence. Possibly it may not be in my power to escape pecuniary responsibility for the loss of public money, or to avoid that sort of reproach which is inseparable from such a misfortune, however it may have occurred; but I am confident I shall be able to convince an impartial tribunal that I am innocent of any criminal connexion with the transactions which have been the subject of investigation by this court for the last six weeks.

During this long trial, protracted by the delays of the prosecution to a most unusual length, I have been patient under all the assaults which have been made upon my reputation, and the harsh restraint which has been imposed upon my liberty of action. I cheerfully acknowledge the fairness and impartiality with which the court has acted throughout the whole proceeding; but I have keenly felt the pressure of that inexorable law which has sealed my lips and compelled me to listen, without opportunity of reply, to the false swearing of the men who are themselves guilty of the crimes charged upon me, and who, in their infamous attempt to convict the innocent, are testifying in their own personal interest, and for their own actual exculpation. They acknowledge the necessity they are under of fixing the guilt on me. They knew well that when myself placed on trial I could not testify in my own behalf, and thus they have had the amplest opportunity to heap reproaches and falsehoods upon the only man who could positively contradict them. But even under these great difficulties and disadvantages, I believe I shall still be able to vindicate my own integrity. Accordingly I proceed to make my defence upon the contents of this record, to which I am aware I must confine the argument, however imperfect may be its exposition of the facts as they are misrepresented and distorted by false witnesses, who, however, by some just retribution of Providence, have in all instances most effectually established their own infamy, and thus excluded themselves from the pale of rational belief.

At the very threshold of my task I am confronted with the difficulty arising from the numerous specifications under the charges, and the great amount of detail in the testimony of the witnesses, making up a large book of manuscript, which it will require great labor to digest, in order to present the result within any reasonable limits. But I will endeavor to reach the material points in the case without any great prolixity of statement; and if I omit anything which seems to require explanation, I beg the court to consider the great mass of matter contained in the record, and the natural impossibility of anticipating all the collateral points upon which different minds may be expected to encounter doubts and difficulties.

As the first step in this process of simplification, I respectfully submit that all the three charges, and the numerous specifications under them, may be reduced to one general proposition, comprehending the material points contained in them all. If I am guilty of the forgery, which is the substance of the third charge, then it is plain that I must be guilty of the other two charges, viz: of embezzlement, and of presenting false accounts with a guilty knowledge of the fraud. On the other hand, if I did not commit the forgeries alleged, and if I had no knowledge of the false names introduced into the vouchers, then it is equally plain that I cannot be guilty of the first two charges, or any of the specifications under them. It will save much labor, and answer all the purposes of truth and justice, to consider the charges and specifications in this summary mode, without attempting to go into any of the details; for in this general statement of the question is involved every consideration which can possibly be made to bear upon my guilt or innocence.

I forbear to press the argument upon which I might reasonably insist, that there is no conclusive proof whatever that the disputed names contained in the vouchers are not those of men who actually signed them. If they are, then no forgeries have been committed at all. But if these names were signed by men who merely assumed them, and who thus perpetrated the frauds in question, the guilty responsibility cannot be fixed on me without some evidence that I knew the real facts, and was not myself deceived by the fraudulent devices which concealed them.

But I prefer to meet all the difficulties of the case in their strongest aspect, as I have stated them in the foregoing general proposition, which admits the frauds and forgeries to have been perpetrated by some one, and only contests the question who was the guilty party. And in reference to this question, as I have thus reduced it to its simplest form, I am advised that, according to a well-known fundamental principle of law, the testimony must be full, satisfactory and conclusive before this court can properly assume to pronounce the sentence of conviction upon the charges. It must be shown beyond all reasonable doubt, either that I committed the forgeries, or that I knew of them, and presented the accounts with that guilty knowledge. If the prosecution has failed to make out either of these points by unquestionable proof, then the presumption of my innocence becomes a legal conclusion which the court is bound to adopt. No mere suspicion in the mind of the court, not even the strongest probability of guilt, if it be short of excluding the possibility of my innocence, will suffice to justify a conviction. If the frauds and forgeries might have been done by another without my knowledge or participation—if all the circumstances are consistent with such an hypothesis—then, in the absence of conclusive proof beyond all reasonable doubt, you cannot fix the guilt on me without violating that great fundamental maxim of justice which is the only sufficient safeguard of innocence and right. Under ordinary circumstances, I would blush to be compelled to resort to this principle in my defence; but when I consider the character of the men with whom I have had to deal, as that character has been developed in the course of this tribunal, I no longer feel any delicacy or hesitation in resisting their assaults by any means which the law has placed in my hands. I have been the victim of too much confidence in bad, unscrupulous, and designing men. They have combined to effect my ruin; and from the opportunities they have had to deceive and betray me, it is by no means surprising that they should succeed in making out a plausible case for themselves.

But I think I may assume that these men were in a position which enabled them to perpetrate these frauds and forgeries without my knowledge. They had the fullest opportunities to deceive me, while it was hardly possible for me to cheat and forge without exposing myself to them. It may have been imprudent and unwise for me to confide so much in others, but it was wholly impossible to conduct the extensive business of my office without relying on my clerks. If I was too confiding, and was finally betrayed by those whom I trusted too far, however complete may be my responsibility for the loss, I am not guilty of the foul crimes with which I am charged. The civil and the criminal accountability are two things wholly distinct, and not at all dependent the one on the other. I may be held accountable for the stolen money, but it does not necessarily follow that I am to bear the consequences of a crime of which I am not guilty.

Orsay, Onion and Butts, three of the most prominent witnesses, are the men who were chiefly engaged in paying the bounties and making up the vouchers in which these great frauds appear. Both Orsay and Onion admit that they usually paid the bounties after the men had signed the rolls, receiving from me the money for that purpose. The only exception proved was in the case of the large voucher No. 13, for September, 1862, when a great number of men had accumulated at the post, and when the whole force of the office was required to transact the business promptly. At page 408 of the record, Onion says it was not an invariable custom for me to give him the money to pay the bounties; but he virtually admits that such was the usual custom. Orsay, on the other hand, says that with him it was the invariable practice. Aside from the testimony of these witnesses themselves, it is shown that the course of business was for them to take the receipts of the men on the rolls and then bring them to me and get the money due for the number of names inserted. Orsay tries to modify this statement by saying that he used the enlistment papers instead of the rolls when drawing the money, but the weight of testimony establishes the other practice, and shows not only the cunning falsehood of the man, but also his well formed devices and complete opportunity to perpetrate the frauds.

But Orsay, not satisfied to let this part of the case rest upon a single falsehood, tries hard to place these frauds and forgeries at my door, by stating that after each squad of recruits had signed the receipts, the rolls were returned to me and were kept constantly locked up in my desk, not accessible to him. But the statement is most successfully contradicted. Orsay had control of all the papers and records of the office. They were at all times subject to his examination; he took them when he pleased and returned them at his discretion. But in order to make assurance doubly sure, he ventures the incredible statement that at the end of the month I gave him the vouchers and papers tied up in a package and ordered him to seal them and post them, with particular instructions not to open or examine them. This witness has evidently overacted his part. The falsity of his testimony is readily detected in these attempts to fortify himself in minute but significant points, in which a man of ordinary sense would never have exposed himself as I am represented to have done. Of the same character is the statement he makes about writing the names of men who could not write themselves. He first says he invariably made a cross and wrote the words "his mark," in the usual manner, above and below. Afterwards, when he had probably found this was disproved by the record, he asks to correct his testimony, and then says he always wrote the words "his mark" until in November or December, I ordered him not to do so, because it would blur the rolls too much. But at page 336 of the record will be found Orsay's acknowledgment that he wrote the name of John A. Donnelly without the words "his mark" above and below the cross in voucher No. 4, for September, 1863, which was sometime prior to the time when he says I gave him the pretended order on this subject. The court must have seen that this statement was an invention made to suit the facts as he found them on the rolls after he had first sworn to the invariable practice in these cases. It is in these small matters, when a witness attempts to account for inconsistencies by imaginary facts, that the best and most unflinching evidence of general falsehood is to be found. In such cases the maxim of the law, "falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus," applies in its full force. The witness who, when on oath in a court of justice, deliberately makes a false statement, is to be discredited in everything he says. His testimony is not to be taken at all.

The two most striking instances of the frauds now under investigation are those which occurred at the beginning and at the end of the whole series, viz., those presented in the voucher for September, 1862, which were the first of all, and those in the voucher for January, 1864, which were the last. It is voucher 12, for September, 1862, in which the frauds of that period are shown to exist. This list of payments was commenced before voucher 13, for the same month, was originated; but the latter was completed in one day, in order to meet an emergency caused by the accumulation of an unusual number of men, as stated by the witness. Voucher No. 12 was kept open for the purpose of taking receipts of the men as they came in from time to time, in the regular course of recruiting. It is not to be supposed that this large crowd of men left the post immediately after receiving their bounty; and it was easy for two or three cunning and unscrupulous fellows like Orsay, Onion, and Butts, all then clerks in the office, to bring some of these recruits up again under false names, and procure the bounties from me. In other vouchers the false names are largely made up of those men who had previously died or deserted, or who had been transferred to other places, as shown on the books in the office. These books were kept by Onion, Orsay, and Butts. They knew every entry made upon them. It was not in my power to take these names from the books and transfer them to the bounty receipt rolls. It must have been done by some one who had charge of the books, and was familiar with the facts stated in them. If I had been seen taking those names from the books, I should have exposed myself to certain detection.

The manner in which these vouchers were made, as shown by the testimony of Onion, is conclusive as to the impossibility of my having forged the names or perpetrated the frauds. At page 451 he testifies that different clerks had charge of the vouchers while the men were signing them; and from page 456 to 463, he shows the complicated and irregular manner in which the work was done, giving every facility for an artful and accomplished villain, like Orsay, assisted by Butts, and winked at, if not also aided by Onion, to carry on, without detection, the systematic frauds now at last fully developed. I invite the particular attention of the court to the pages above referred to. It is impossible for any one to read them carefully without coming to the inevitable conclusion that this foul work was certainly done in the adjutant's office, and not in mine.

It was with reference to this voucher, as well as others of that period, that the enlistment papers were demanded in the Second Auditor's office of the Treasury Department. In reply to this demand, Onion made the affidavit of the 23d January, 1863, which forms so conspicuous a feature of his testimony. He says (record, page 432) that while making this affidavit he examined every paper within his reach, in order to verify his statement. Notwithstanding he says I gave him the draught of the affidavit, he alleges that he knew the obligation of an oath, and he took pains to ascertain the truth before he was sworn. The enlistment papers, then required for the settlement of my accounts, must have been kept back for the purpose of accomplishing future frauds of the same kind. Who kept these enlistment papers? Whose business was it to preserve them? They were in charge of the clerks in the adjutant's office. These clerks received them in the first instance, and had them always in their keeping. They at all times had access to all the books and papers connected with the superintendency. And when any of these papers were called for, to whom should I apply but to the clerks? and whose affidavit should I require if not that of the men whose duty it was to keep the papers safely or account for their absence?

This clerk Onion had signed his name as a witness to every payment on the voucher; he had, in fact, made the payments himself. He had entered the amount of the voucher in the cash book with his own hand. Under those circumstances, then, believing Onion to be honest, I relied upon his sworn statement, having no suspicion of any fraud, and sent it to the Second Auditor as proof of the correctness of my accounts.

If I had been myself the author of these frauds, I should certainly not have dared, after the difficulty, to repeat them with immense additions and aggravations. I should certainly have counted upon detection and exposure, with the consequent disgrace and punishment. But in the case of these clerks they probably concluded that having overcome this difficulty and succeeded in deceiving me, the way was clear for the multiplication of the frauds to any extent whatever and with complete impunity. From all the circumstances it is perfectly plain that from the beginning to the end the author of these frauds contemplated the design of fixing the ultimate responsibility on me. There was no possible way for me to avoid it if they should swear falsely and their story should receive credit.

But now I ask the court to turn their attention to the vouchers for January, 1863, in which, according to Orsay's statement, there are twenty-seven real and two hundred and twenty-one fictitious payments. Orsay signed his name as a witness in every instance. He himself paid the twenty-seven men, and yet he avouches the payment of ten times that number, and he pretends he did this innocently and in pursuance of my orders. Will the court suppose me to be an idiot, that I would thus have placed myself in the power of such a man as Orsay? that I would have thus exposed my own dishonesty in such a way that a child might have discovered it? I beg the court to remember that it was not in reference to these vouchers that Orsay pretends to have expressed his suspicions. On the contrary, it was when he said I inquired for old enlistment papers. He then represents himself as saying to O'Brien, Maynard and others, that "if any frauds should be committed Major Hastings would be the author of them." O'Brien and Maynard both deny that Orsay ever expressed any suspicion to them. But is not the whole story a transparent lie? If he did not suspect fraud when he witnessed these vouchers, why should he do so when a mere inquiry is alleged to have been made for enlistment papers? The very suggestion shows that he knew only too well the use that might be made of the enlistments, as he had probably often used them to deceive me and withhold them for the purpose of future frauds. Hence his invention of this most incredible tale. Thus again the corrupt acuteness of this witness has overreached itself. He has drawn too strongly upon the credulity of the court, and he stands once more self-convicted of fraud and perjury.

Now I ask the court which of the two suppositions is more credible under all the circumstances—that I perpetrated these frauds, or that they are the work of Orsay? You will bear in mind that Orsay does not pretend there was any collusion between himself and me. He had charge of the rolls and made the payments. He took the signatures of the men and witnessed them all. He signed his own name two hundred and forty-eight times, and thereby intended to certify to the payment of that number of bounties. On the other hand, I copied the names in the first column of the voucher and furnished the money to pay the men whose names I found upon it. The number of false names bore an excessively large proportion to that of the genuine ones. But which of the two parties might have been most easily deceived at the time when these occurrences took place? I had many other important accounts to settle, and much other business to transact. Orsay had the particular business to do, and the whole details of it were left to him. I thought I was doing my part of the work and insuring the integrity of it all by copying the names of the men in the first column, after the receipts of the men had been taken in the second. Upon the face of the documents alone I would willingly consent to leave the question between Orsay and myself to the determination of the court.

Before leaving this part of the case I will ask the court to ready Orsay's statement on page 237 as to the duties performed by him as the superintendent's clerk. In other parts of his testimony a different color is given to the facts; but here he unwittingly acknowledges the truth, doubtless not then seeing what bearing it would have on the vital points of the case. He says: "As superintendent's clerk I had charge of all the papers pertaining to the mounted recruiting service, such as keeping the records of the superintendent, keeping his papers, making out his accounts at the end of the month, and every other duty, in fact, pertaining to the recruiting for the mounted service." Can anything be more plain and conclusive as to the opportunities of this witness afforded by his entire control of all the books and papers in the office? If in other places he tells a different story and attempts to show that he had no access to the papers, and that I forbade him to untie the packages, I refer to this passage as an admission, made in perfect sincerity, when he did not see what sinister purpose might be served by a different statement. Other witnesses fully confirm this representation and leave no possible doubt of its truth.

But it is attempted to show that many of the fraudulent names are in a handwriting very similar to my own. I am willing to admit that in some instances the similarity does actually appear; but I think the court must have seen that in many other instances, where the similarity was positively sworn to, there was no foundation whatever for the statement except in the prejudices or the false purposes of the witness. I do not propose to go into the details of this part of the case. I must rely on the impartial judgment of the members of the court, formed at the time the testimony was given. I will only say that I am advised a comparison of handwritings, such as is now relied upon, is regarded by the best legal authorities as being entitled to very little weight under any circumstances when adduced for the purpose of proving a forgery. And such, I understand, was the opinion of this court as embodied in the record.

But the testimony also shows that many of the names mentioned are in a handwriting equally like that of Orsay; and to make the worthlessness of this evidence against me perfectly clear, the fact is fully established that Orsay is a most skilful counterfeiter, and that he was especially so with regard to my own handwriting. It is true he denies this, but the fact is established by the testimony of the Rev. Mr. Ross, chaplain of the post, by Mr. Ewing, and by Sergeant-Major O'Brien. Orsay's denial does not shake the testimony of these witnesses; it goes only to show once more the utter corruptness and falsity of his nature. It must be evident to the court that it was a part of the original plan of these frauds, and of fixing the responsibility on me, that my handwriting should be imitated. This fully accounts for the resemblance.

I would have supposed Mr. Chase, the clerk from the Second Auditor's office, to have been honest in his testimony except for one statement, in which he has evidently departed from the truth. At page 217 of the record he says he had not recently consulted Orsay and Onion, with the exception of a single affidavit he had taken of Onion. At page 358 Orsay says that after his return from Canada, then quite recent, he communicated with Chase, who asked him a great many questions. Compare the record at these two places, and the court will plainly see the contradiction. Orsay came to testify in this prosecution; Chase was conducting the investigation and making up the case. It was reasonable that Orsay should be sent to him, and I can see no reason why Chase should deny it. But he did deny it, and I believe falsely. He was fearful of having his malignity exposed, and his testimony weakened. He had been sent to Carlisle to examine my office; he declares that he had every facility for examination, and he came to the conclusion that I was innocent. Orsay was not then at Carlisle. But a combination was afterwards formed by Onion and Butts, probably with the concurrence of Chase, to get Orsay pardoned and bring him back. Then Mr. Chase questions Orsay very thoroughly, and doubtless upon his statement institutes this prosecution. That he should deny the fact of his consultation with Orsay, shows that he was ashamed of his witness, and of his own conduct, and also that he was unscrupulous in his swearing.

The court will remember that when the two commissioners, Chase and Turner, examined this whole transaction in my office at this place, in the absence of Orsay and Onion, they acquitted me of all complicity in the crime. It was only by bringing back Orsay in order to acquit himself and Onion, and to convict me, that a different opinion was adopted. If these corrupt and unscrupulous witnesses, who are directly interested in the result, were now excluded from testifying in their own behalf and against me, I do not doubt that the same result would follow, not only in this court, but wherever the facts are fully known.

There are, however, some other incidents in this trial which, no doubt, will be urged as having great weight in fastening upon me the guilt of these transactions. Orsay's account of his desertion, and the testimony of the two Ryans, if they can be credited, would indeed have a tendency to establish the charges against me. Orsay says I confessed the crime to him, and urged him to desert. He expressly says he did not promise me to do so, and yet he pretends, afterwards, to have done so in pursuance of my suggestion. I insist upon the inherent improbability of this story. I myself had caused Orsay to be arrested and carried to Washington as the guilty party. In that aspect of the case it was my privilege to give testimony against him; but by his desertion I alone was left to bear the brunt of the accusation, and now he becomes the witness against me. I certainly could never have aided in bringing about this result. Again, it is incredible that I would confess my guilt to him; and it is even more so that he would desert for my benefit, and thus take upon himself a crime of which he was wholly innocent. A man who professes to have done this is utterly unworthy of belief, for he testifies that he was willing to become infamous himself in order to screen me from that fate. Afterwards, too, according to his statement, he was prepared to leave the country with a felon's reputation for the sum of $5,000, and, from the same consideration, to assist in saving me from the consequences of my alleged crime. He falsely states that I paid him money, and he produces a forged correspondence, with the post-mark of Carlisle, to prove it, when the envelope addressed to Edward Oliver might easily have been prepared by him and sent to any one of his correspondents to be mailed at this place. And yet, after thus acknowledging the receipt of my money, he finishes the picture of his degradation by pretending that he betrayed me with a baseness of treachery only equalled by the similar alleged conduct of the two Ryans. Fortunately, the two latter have fully established the falsehood of their statement out of their own mouths. Michael Ryan, according to the statement of his brother, stole the latter's money and ran away with it; then both pretended I had given them the funds. Their different versions of the transaction were so conflicting that no possible credit can be given to them. James Ryan is sent to bring back his deserting brother, and yet he carries to him the alleged bribe which was the consideration that induced him to desert. He reports his brother in Canada, when he knows him to be in New York; he declares, also, that he himself has been to Canada, and then admits the falsity of this official statement. On his examination he shows as much anxiety for the safety of the money as ever Shylock did for his pound of flesh, leaving the impression that he was far more interested in its possession than his brother—in fact, that it was his own money. Besides all this, Michael Ryan and private White had both repeatedly made a different statement about the escape of Orsay; and when they were tried for letting him go, they had rested their defence upon it.

Such are the men upon whose testimony this prosecution depends for its success. In seeking to convict me they most effectually prove their own infamy. They first desert from the army, and in this act they violate their solemn oath to the government. Next they declare that they accepted bribes to perform certain acts, and then they come forward and basely betray the man whose money they pretend to have taken. With unexampled depravity they heap treachery upon perjury and fraud, until they show their utter want of all conscience and of all self-respect.

It is evident from the testimony that Orsay, Onion and Butts, with the co-operation of Guiton, (who himself displays no mean skill in counterfeiting,) have formed a conspiracy to bring this accusation against me, and, in the process of doing so, to extort large sums of money from me. They knew they could put me on trial when I could not testify. But the mercenary part of their scheme has failed, and nothing is left but the revenge they are now seeking for their disappointment. I never paid money to Orsay, or received any letters from him. I never had the pretended interview with him in this town or elsewhere. The witness Butts, however, did come to Carlisle and demand of me five thousand dollars as a consideration for Orsay's refusing to return and testify against me. I scouted the proposition and drove the man from my presence. In his testimony he denies having demanded the money; but he declines to say why he came here to see me, on the ground that his answer would criminate himself. At this very time, Onion and Butts were intriguing to procure a pardon for Orsay and to bring him back as a witness. Onion professes not to have any interest in their act, the scheme of black-mail; but he knew of their demand, and he says, with some hesitation and prevarication, that he thought it only a fair game. On his arrival at Washington, Orsay is taken to Onion's house, and there, no doubt, the conspirators had time to discuss the failure of their plan to extort money from me and to devise new plots for their future proceedings. Guiton's agency in this affair was a subordinate one. He says he knew of Orsay's intention to demand money of me, and he took a sealed note, of which he did not know the contents, and transferred it to some unknown boy to be delivered at my house. If the judge advocate had called my sons he would have ascertained the falsity of the story which Orsay told of his interview with me near the college. I did not choose to call them myself, to testify in behalf of their father. It was altogether unnecessary to do so in order to discredit the testimony of such a man as Orsay.

I beg leave to say, that up to the early part of the present year I had entertained the fullest confidence in the integrity of this man Orsay. His manners were in the highest degree plausible, and he was possessed of talents of the most useful character. But I did not know his capacity to counterfeit my handwriting, and his boasted habit of doing so. I was not aware that he was living in a disreputable house, spending his money upon prostitutes. I was entirely ignorant of his habits, except in so far as they were exhibited in the performance of his duties at the office. There he always seemed to be active, energetic, and faithful. I had equal confidence in the integrity of the two men, Michael Ryan and Private White—so much so that when they returned from Washington after having been imprisoned, tried, and punished for the escape of Orsay I believed the story they told and expressed the greatest sympathy for them. They appealed to me for assistance in their misfortunes, and in response to that appeal I sent them the small sum of money which they received by the hands of Lieutenant McGregor. Neither of these men ever intimated to me that they had connived at the escape of Orsay, nor did I say to them that I had the slightest interest in that event.

But the several accounts given by Orsay, Ryan, and White, of the circumstances of the escape, are contradictory and irreconcilable. Orsay expressly says he did not promise me that he would escape; and yet he represents that I went down stairs at Williards' and ordered the guard to let him go. It is hardly credible that I would thus have exposed myself upon so great an uncertainty. But both Ryan and White contradict the statement. They heard no such order; on the contrary, Ryan says that Orsay told him he wished to escape in order to save himself from the penitentiary, but that Orsay gave no intimation of any difficulty on my part, or any necessity to screen me from punishment by means of his desertion. If there had been any such idea on the part of Ryan himself, any such expression uttered by Orsay, or any admission made by me, Ryan would certainly not have suppressed it. He cannot be suspected of any design to favor me; and inasmuch as his representation is wholly inconsistent with that of Orsay, the whole story ought to be discredited and disregarded.

The two witnesses Ryan and White were summoned to attend this court while it was in session at Washington. No sooner had they arrived in the city, than they fell into the hands of Orsay. All of them go together to a drinking saloon, and from time to time they meet and no doubt discuss the incidents and prospects of this trial. After the court had transferred its sessions to Carlisle, and when it may be supposed that Orsay had had sufficient time to indoctrinate Ryan to his system of grand tactics, we find this latter witness undertaking to repeat the precise line of conduct of which Orsay had given the example. He repeats the act of desertion, and he testifies to the bribery, the treachery, the gross falsehood and deception of which I have already spoken. These events are too much alike not to have originated in the same mind and to have been a part of the same conspiracy to ruin and destroy me. I have no doubt, therefore, that this artful and unscrupulous man, Orsay, has thrown his bad influence over Ryan and induced him to act the part which was developed in the testimony of his brother and himself. For the return of this witness the court was adjourned from day to day for a whole week. In the mean time we were entertained with the reports of the truthful and immaculate James Ryan giving an account of his being in Canada, and of his willingness to return if he should be pardoned for the offences of which he was guilty. But he demanded entire absolution, not for his desertion alone, but for everything else that could be brought against him. I have no doubt this general pardon was construed, by himself at least, to cover all the lies he told during his absence, and all he intended to tell on his examination in this court.

In the course of this trial, it was perhaps to be expected that my private affairs, and especially my investments of money, would be dragged into court and made the subject of inquiry. It was to me exceedingly unpleasant to be compelled, even in self-defence, to expose my pecuniary transactions to the gaze of the world. I have, however, been able, on the shortest notice and without any effort, to show that I was in possession of means long before I took command of Carlisle barracks, sufficient to cover the full amount of the investment which was made for me by Mr. Beetem. These means were easily convertible into money at any moment, and I have proved that one check of $18,074 01 was actually applied out of these means directly to this investment; it was unnecessary to do more. I proposed only to show that I possessed ample means to purchase the 5-20 bonds of the United States without embezzling the public money for that purpose.

The statement of Mr. Rheem, the United States assessor, though not having any material bearing on this case, does me great injustice. He met me on the street, and simply inquired whether I had any property subject to taxation; I replied in the negative, as I understood him to refer to real estate, and not to investments of money. He did not give me any blank form, nor did he require me to take any oath or say anything on the subject at all.

But this man Orsay, an adventurer from Canada, coming without money, under an assumed name—it is reasonable to ask that he shall account in some way for the extravagant expenditures which are plainly proved upon him. He kept a furnished room in a house of ill-fame; he rode in a carriage with fancy women, and he exhibited large rolls of money. No doubt it became troublesome for him to conceal his gains, and he engaged Mr. Ewing to make a non-descript piece of furniture with a false bottom, in which he could safely deposit them; his story about the sword and pistols, which he wished to put in that secure place, is scarcely credible.

When Orsay deserted from Washington he came through Carlisle to secure his plunder, which doubtless consisted of something more than the trifle he kept in bank as a mere blind; he could not resist the temptation to come back from time to time and occupy his comfortable quarters at Mrs. Miller's with the attractive companion he doubtless found ready to welcome him; he had plenty of money to travel back and forth, and he made it a point always to put up at that hotel which has no visible sign, where he even now has his quarters.

I have thus briefly noticed the prominent points in this voluminous record, and I think the following propositions are clearly deducible from the facts:

1. That other persons than myself had the means, the motive, and the full opportunity to perpetrate these frauds without my knowledge. From the nature and extent of my business, I was compelled to employ these clerks, and to confide in their integrity, which, at the time, I had no reason to question.

2. The mode of transacting the business, to wit, paying the bounties, makes the clerks who signed as witnesses primarily responsible for the correctness of the rolls and the integrity of the vouchers.

3. This responsibility can only be shifted from them to me by the most conclusive proof of my participation in the frauds—a character of proof which is not found in the record coming from any credible source.

4. The evidence of handwriting, so strongly relied upon, is wholly unsatisfactory and insufficient. The suspected party, to whose guilt all the circumstances plainly point, is an adept in the art of counterfeiting the handwriting of others, and especially of mine.

5. The unskilful mode of perpetrating the frauds shows a recklessness which looked only to gain and to success in deceiving me, regardless of the danger of detection by the accounting officers of the treasury. It betrays an ignorance of the mode of settling accounts in the department at Washington, of which I had an accurate knowledge from long experience.

6. The continuance of the frauds after they were first noticed by the suspension of my accounts, indicates that the guilty parties, knowing I would be held responsible for their acts, were utterly careless of the future detection, which was inevitable.

7. The conspiracy which was plainly formed by the principle witnesses to secure my conviction was only a necessary sequence of the original plan adopted at the time the frauds were committed.

8. All the witnesses whose testimony has any tendency to implicate me are men of the most abandoned character, and are totally unworthy of belief. The extraordinary exhibition is made by these witnesses of reversing by their testimony the obvious natural inference to be derived from almost every act they have done. If they witness hundreds of signatures and payments, they come forward and testify to the falsity of their own attestation; if they desert from the army it is not to escape from the consequences of their own crime, but to shield me from mine; and if they acknowledge themselves degraded enough to accept bribes, they afterwards confess the still deeper baseness of betraying the man whose money they received. Thus the inconceivable depravity of these witnesses distorts everything, reverses all moral principles and natural results, and leaves the court no solid ground of belief on which to stand.

9. I have shown my own character to have been unimpeached prior to these transactions. During a long course of service in the army of the United States, I have held many responsible positions and disbursed large amounts of public money, and have never before had my integrity questioned. In the present emergency I may well claim the benefit of that reputation which I have achieved by the labors of a whole life devoted to the service of my country.

In view of the character I have established by the testimony of the most honorable men, may I not well ask whether it is possible that at this late day of my life I could have become a forger and a thief, and thus recklessly thrown away all that I have achieved through my whole career—rank, fortune, honor, and everything else that is dear to an officer or a man. And are these hard-earned treasures to be sacrificed upon the interested testimony of men who have no character to lose, who are utterly without self-respect, who boast of the basest treachery and glory in the shame of their own admitted falsehoods? If an unblemished character long sustained in the performance of arduous and responsible duties constitutes no protection against the assaults of such abandoned men, then all distinctions of good and bad conduct are ignored, all motives to honorable achievement are forever withdrawn, and no man's reputation is for one moment secure. It is I who am now assailed; it may be you to-morrow. Can you contemplate without horror the possibility that in your own case the legal presumptions of innocence may all be rendered unavailing—that the reputations you have earned and borne through many a hard-fought field, attested by the wounds you have suffered and the scars you now bear as badges of honor in the service of your country—that this reputation, more precious to you and to your wives and children than all else you hold dear in life, might all be sacrificed by the testimony of such witnesses as those who have appeared against me on this trial? Think of such a possibility, and then do with me as you would have others do unto you in a similar case.

Carlisle, Pa., August 22, 1864.

The above are interrogations plied by the counsel for the accused in the case of the United States vs. Major D. H. Hastings, United States army, now on trial at this place, to be administered to the persons designated. No cross-interrogations are desired to be administered on the part of the United States.

GARRICK MALLERY,
Lieutenant Colonel V. R. C., Judge Advocate.

Depositions of witnesses produced, sworn, and examined on the first day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-four, in the city of Washington and District of Columbia, by me, John S. Hollingshead, a commissioner of the State of Pennsylvania in and for the District of Columbia, duly appointed and qualified according to the laws of said State to take acknowledgments and administer oaths, &c., in said District to be used and recorded in said State, to be used in behalf of Major David H. Hastings, now on trial before a court-martial sitting in Carlisle, Pennsylvania.

Major R. WILLIAMS, United States army, being duly sworn, deposeth as follows:

To the first interrogatory he answers as follows: I am acquainted with Major D. H. Hastings, and have known him to the best of my recollection, since the summer of 1854.

To the second interrogatory he answers as follows: The records of the Adjutant General's office furnish the following statement of the services of Major Hastings, viz:

Major Hastings enlisted in the United States service July 19, 1837, for three (3) years; was discharged July 18, 1840, as sergeant 2d United States infantry, by expiration of service. He enlisted again November 18, 1840, for five (5) years, and was discharged November 17, 1845, as sergeant 2d United States infantry, by expiration of service. He again enlisted December 1, 1845, for five (5) years, and was discharged July 28, 1848, by promotion to brevet 2d lieutenant 1st dragoons, a private of United States engineers. He was promoted to 2d lieutenant 1st dragoons December 27, 1848; to 1st lieutenant 1st dragoons October 22, 1854; to captain 1st dragoons January 9, 1860; and to major 5th cavalry September 3, 1863. He was placed on the retired list December 7, 1863. He has also performed the duty of acting assistant quartermaster and acting assistant commissary of subsistence a good deal during his service. He was on duty mustering in troops at Harrisburg, Pa., from June, 1861, to November, 1861, and in December, 1861, was placed on duty as superintendent of mounted recruiting service for the United States army.

To the third interrogatory he answers as follows: I have known Major Hastings as disbursing officer, in the capacity of acting assistant quartermaster and acting assistant commissary at Albuquerque, New Mexico, during portions of the years 1855 and 1856. I do not know the amount disbursed by him. To the best of my knowledge he discharged his duties as such to the fullest satisfaction of his commanding officers, and with great credit to himself.

To the fourth interrogatory he answers as follows: I have known the character of Major Hastings as an officer and a man, both personally and by reputation. As an officer, he has been most efficient and gallant. As a man, his reputation has been unblemished.

R. WILLIAMS,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Major CHAUNCEY MCKEEVER, assistant adjutant general United States army, being duly sworn, deposeth as follows:

To the first interrogatory he answers as follows: I am not personally acquainted with the accused, Major Hastings; do not recollect ever having seen him.

To the second interrogatory he answers: I have no positive information on the subject.

To the third interrogatory he answers: Major Hastings disbursed funds from the appropriation for collecting, drilling, and organizing volunteers in the 3d and 4th quarters of 1862. He received, according to the records of my office, $25,000, and rendered accounts for the whole amount, which have been transmitted to the Second Auditor of the Treasury for settlement. Some exceptions were taken to the accounts, but the records do not show their nature.

To the fourth interrogatory he answers: To the best of my knowledge and belief, the accused has heretofore borne among his brother officers an excellent character, both as regards efficiency and gallantry as an officer, and integrity as a man.

CHAUNCEY MCKEEVER,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Colonel W. A. NICHOLS, assistant adjutant general United States army, being duly sworn: deposeth as follows:

To the first interrogatory he answers: I am acquainted with Major Hastings; have known him about ten years.

To the second interrogatory he answers: Major Hastings served in the Mexican war as a sergeant; was promoted to a lieutenant's commission, and served through the grades of 2d lieutenant, 1st lieutenant, and captain, to his present rank.

To the third interrogatory he answers: I know that Major Hastings acted as disbursing officer in the town of Albuquerque, New Mexico, to the best of my recollection, in the quartermaster's and subsistence department. I do not remember the exact time; but it was during a portion of my station in that department, which was from 1853 to 1858. I cannot state the amounts expended by Major Hastings, as his accounts did not pass through my office; I was the adjutant general of that department. So far as I know, he discharged his duties as disbursing officer faithfully.

To the fourth interrogatory he answers: Major Hastings has borne the character of an efficient and gallant officer. I never heard his integrity as a man questioned prior to the present charges.

W. A. NICHOLS,
Assistant Adjutant General, Colonel U. S. Army.

Brigadier General W. S. KETCHUM, United States volunteers, being duly sworn, deposeth as follows:

To the first interrogatory he answers: I am not acquainted with him, and do not know that I ever saw him.

To the second interrogatory he answers : As soldier and officer, according to General Orders and Army Register.

To the third interrogatory he answers : I know nothing about his disbursing money, but know from official papers that he did muster into service some volunteers, and that one or more rolls were disputed, and application made to have them changed or corrected.

To the fourth interrogatory he answers : I do not know his character, and never, to my knowledge, served with him, but am under the impression I have seen his name favorably mentioned in General Orders.

W. SCOTT KETCHUM,
Brigadier General Volunteers, Acting Adjutant General.

Analysis and reply of the judge advocate.

The judge advocate then presented the following analysis and reply :

Major Hastings, the accused in this case, has confessed in his statement that great frauds occurred in the payment of bounties to recruits at Carlisle barracks during the time he was superintendent of the mounted recruiting service there, and his counsel have frequently during the trial assumed credit for candor and fairness by making the same admission ; yet it is singular that out of over 1,100 cases of fraud, charged and specified, no admission has been made in any single instance that such was a case of fraud committed by any one. The labors of the court have not been lightened by a waive of proof in any one particular case ; and as their obligation is to inquire into the truth of all the cases laid before them at the instance of the auditing officers of the government, it has been necessary to produce and examine a vast and ramified mass of documentary evidence and oral testimony ; it also now becomes the duty of the judge advocate to analyze and, as far as possible, to classify the voluminous and involved proofs of the perpetration of the frauds specified, before entering directly upon the question of the guilt or innocence of the accused.

The most natural division of the fraud is into, first, double charges for payment of bounties, and, second, fraudulent single charges.

Division I. Cases where double payments are charged to the government, and credit claimed by Major Hastings for $25, bounty certified to have been paid by him to men of the same names when the records show the enlistment of but one man of that name, divided into—

Class 1. Payments charged to the same men, in two distinct vouchers, for the fourth quarter of 1862, which vouchers cover the same period of time, and which are not supported by any enlistment papers filed with either voucher.

Class 2. When the second of the double payments is charged and credited many months after the enlistment, and also a long period after the first time the payments were charged and credited; the second vouchers are for payments charged in 1863 and January, 1864, and are supported by enlistment papers of recruits enlisted in the fourth quarter of 1862, and who appear from the vouchers for that quarter to have already received their bounty, and who are also, in very many cases, borne upon the descriptive book of the post as transferred, died, or deserted, long prior to the date of the second alleged payment.

Division II. Cases where there are but single payments charged and credited, but which, from various reasons, are believed to have been false and fraudulent charges, divided into—

Class 1. Cases where the recruits are proved to have been discharged, to have died, to have deserted, or to have been ordered from or shown to have been absent from the post at the time of the alleged payment, and in many instances long before. Under this class, also, there are many, when the alleged payment is so long subsequent to the date of enlistment that a strong presumption arises against the charge for that reason alone.

Class 2. Cases where there are no enlistment papers filed to support the payment charged, and when, after diligent inquiry in every place where such enlistment papers should be found or record made of them, no such papers, or record of such men, can be discovered, the supposition in this class that the names of such alleged recruits are fictitious; in other words, that they are men of straw, and the evidence is so cumulative and corroborated that it is as strong as can possibly be produced to prove such an allegation.

It is to be observed that in all these classes the evidence shows that the receipt must be a forgery on the part of some one. Whether the receipt be in the name of a real or fictitious person, or purporting to be signed with or without a mark, makes no difference. If the alleged receptor did not make the receipt, or receive the bounty charged and credited, some one was necessarily guilty, in each instance, of the crime of embezzlement, and of fraudulently making or altering a writing to the prejudice of the United States.

All the names not specially designated in this analysis as having been mistakenly inserted have been testified to as being found with the charge of $25 opposite to them in the voucher, and credit claimed in the accounts current for the date specified. All of which have been produced and admitted in evidence, and their genuineness admitted by the accused.

CHARGE I. The amounts charged in the various specifications of the first charge correspond more or less accurately with the sum of the amounts charged to the respective names specified in the various specifications of the second charge, with exceptions to be noted; therefore a consideration of the name designated in the specifications of the second charge will also embrace the amounts charged to have been embezzled and wrongfully misapplied in the first charge; and if the court should find that the testimony did not bear out any particular case of fraud charged in any specifications of the second charge, a proportionate deduction must be made in the amount of the corresponding specification of the first charge.

CHARGE II.—Specification 1. The names in the specification consist wholly of those in the second class of the second division. Mr. Chase testifies (page 77 et seq.) that he can find no enlistment papers for any of the names mentioned in the office of the Second Auditor. Mr. Davis testifies (page 223) that he can find no registry of enlistments in any of those cases in the Adjutant General's office; and Mr. Onion testifies (page 409 et seq.) that he can find none of these names on the descriptive books of the post, with the exception of the name of Lewis Maassen, No. 11 in the specification, with regard to which name he does not testify. The name of Robert Gough occurs twice in the same voucher, and the evidence tends to show that both of these charges are fictitious.

CHARGE II.—Specification 2. The first name in this specification, that of Edward Waldenmayer, is improperly placed in the specification through some clerical error. The date of the false payment in the case of Edward Waldenmayer, which is elsewhere charged, does not correspond with the date in the specification.

In the case of the second name, that of Joseph Newton, Mr. Chase testifies that he cannot find any enlistment paper corresponding with that name in the office of the Second Auditor. Mr. Davis testifies (page 229) that Joseph Newton was transferred from Carlisle barracks December 7, 1862. Orsay states that Joseph Newton was enlisted November 23, 1862, and was transferred to the mounted regiment United States army December 7, 1862, and ordered away from the post December 7, 1862.

With regard to all the names from and including Joseph Newton, No. 2, to and including Thomas Aldrich, No. 130, Mr. Chase testifies that he has not been able to find any enlistment papers corresponding with any of these names in the office of the Second Auditor. Mr. Davis testifies that he cannot find any record in the office of the Adjutant General of the enlistment of any of these same names, with the following exceptions, in regard to which he does not testify, viz: John Thayer, No. 26; Zeise Riggs, No. 38; George Conley, No. 42; William Montgomery, No. 43; Benjamin F. Rhodes, No. 52; James Kuscher, No. 53; Thomas G. Stradford, No. 54; John B. Dailey, No. 55; Charles Löffler, No. 66; Isaac H. Whetsel, No. 58; David E. Smith, No. 57; James G. Nelson, No. 68; Richard Jones, No. 69; Henry F. Werner, No. 70; Charles Rose, No. 71; Joseph A. Kirby, No. 87; Martin Robinson, No. 90; James Conner, No. 98; Daniel Sheets, No. 101; Daniel G. Smith, No. 102; John Steinburn, No. 103; John Watson, No. 104; Jacob F. Garland, No. 105; J. M. Wright, No. 108; Wm. V. Warfield, No. 113; Trueman L. Wood, No. 114; Philip Ferringier, No. 115; Thomas J. Anderson, No. 116; Victor Von Brieisen, No. 126. Mr. Onion testifies that he cannot find any record of the same names in the descriptive books of Carlisle barracks, with the following exceptions, with regard to which he does not testify, namely: James B. Thompson, No. 18; John Thayer, No. 26; Zeis Riggs, No. 38; George W. Conley, No. 42; William G. Montgomery, No. 43; Hugh McJames, No. 51; Benjamin F. Rhodes, No. 52; James Kuscher, No. 53; Thomas G. Stradford, No. 54; John B. Dailey, No. 55; Charles Löffler, No. 56; George Rapul, No. 57; Isaac H. Whetsel, No. 58; David E. Smith, No. 59; Richard Jones, No. 69; Henry F. Werner, No. 70; Charles Rose, No. 71; Joseph A. Kirby, No. 87; John Walburn, No. 89; Martin Robinson, No. 90; Daniel Sheets, No. 101; David G. Smith, No. 102; John Steinburn, No. 103; John Watson, No. 104; Jacob F. Garland, No. 115; J. M. Wright, No. 108; Wm. V. Warfield, No. 113; Trueman L. Wood, No. 114; Philip Ferringier, No. 115; Thomas J. Anderson, No. 116; Lewis Shilling, No. 119; Victor Von Brieisen, No. 126. The name of George W. Conley, No. 42, appears on voucher 8 for the fourth quarter of 1862, item 23; also on voucher 4 for September, 1862, item 136. Mr. Chase testifies that in the case of James G. Nelson, No. 68, there were double payments for the same month—one November 6, 1862, and one November 14, 1862—the last being in the name of James Nelson; and but one enlistment paper was found, which was for James Nelson. Onion states that if they are the same men, voucher 13 is genuine, the date being November 14, 1862. Mr. Davis does not testify regarding this name. There seems to be a mistake in the name being placed twice in this specification; it also appears as James Nelson, No. 147.

The name of John Morris, No. 65, appears twice in the same voucher, No. 12, for the fourth quarter of 1862, items 25 and 8.

In the case of John Walburn, No. 89, Orsay says (page 241) that a man of that name enlisted October 30, 1862; was transferred to 3d cavalry April 8, 1863, (page 522;); that he was ordered from the post April 9, 1863. There is, however, another charge, in the 6th specification of the second charge, to which Orsay's testimony may refer.

In the case of Moses Breen, No. 39, Mr. Davis testifies (page 129) that a man of that name was transferred from Carlisle barracks December 29, 1862; and Orsay says (page 239) that a man of that name was enlisted December 23, 1862, and was transferred to the mounted regiment United States army December 29, 1862, and (page 520) that he was ordered away December 29, 1862. There is confusion between the testimony in reference to this name and that of Moses Bren or Brien, charged in the fifth specification of the second charge. This name appears on voucher 18 for the fourth quarter of 1862, item 215, and also on voucher 3 for August, 1863, item 75.

From and including the name of Richard Gill, No. 131, to the last name in the specification, Charles Smith, No. 165, the cases are those of double payments, the same names appearing on vouchers 12 and 13 for the fourth quarter of 1862. With reference to all of them Mr. Onion testifies that the payment on voucher 13 is the correct one, and that on voucher 12 is not.

The name of Frederick G. Knapp, however, is inserted in this specification by a clerical error. There is no proof whatever regarding any fraud in his case. In the case of Patrick Dwyer, No. 161, there is proof of triple payments.

In the following cases in this specification the vouchers were presented, and the testimony of experts given for the purpose of proving affirmatively forgery by the accused, viz: Joseph Keiger, No. 135; Patrick Kane, No. 136; Andrew Lind, No. 138; Frank Ludwig, No. 140; Joseph Loovy, No. 142; Thomas Munroe, No. 144; George B. Gardiner, No. 93; Rodgers, No. 85.

CHARGE I—Specification 3. All the fifteen (15) names in this specification appear in two sets of vouchers, and double payments are charged for them. They all appear on voucher 18 for the fourth quarter of 1862, as the first payment, and on voucher 3 for May, 1863, as the second payment. In the following cases in this specification, also, the vouchers were presented, and the testimony of experts given, for the purpose of proving forgery by the accused, viz: John W. Payne, No. 1; Henry Eldridge, No. 2; Alexander Hamilton, No. 3; John Williamson, No. 4; Isaac Godfrey, No. 9; Stephen Connors, No. 10; George Shoemaker, No. 12.

CHARGE I—Specification 4. All the cases in this specification are those of double payments, the names all appearing on voucher 18 for the fourth quarter of 1862, as the first payment, and on voucher 2 for July, 1863, as the second payment. In the following cases the vouchers were presented, and the testimony of experts given, for the purpose of proving that forgery had been committed by the accused, viz: William H. Langdon, No. 1; William La Count, No. 2; Adam Hoffman, No. 3; William F. Thornton, No. 7; George R. Bird, No. 8; James E. Rodgers, No. 9; John Shoup, No. 10; Michael Fray, No. 11; Daniel D. Bert, No. 12; Charles Crane, No. 13; Robert Dougherty, No. 24; Ransom Gillon, No. 25; Barnard Loughran, No. 26; Adam Zeigler, No. 29; Munson S. Acker, No. 30; Finley Cameron, No. 31; John W. Green,

No. 32 ; John Curn, No. 33 ; John D. Smith, No. 34 ; George Fantanoy, No. 85 ; Daniel Lynch, No. 44 ; Henry S. Stevens, No. 45.

CHARGE I—Specification 5. The first fifty-six names in this specification, beginning with Joshua Stewart and ending with John Nary, are cases of double payment, in which the first payments all appear in voucher 18 for the fourth quarter of 1862 and the second payments in voucher 3 for August, 1863, (see page 100.) From and including the fifty-seventh name, that of William Patterson, to the end of the list, Calvin S. Jones, the cases are of single payment, and come under the first class of the second division of the frauds, as classified. With regard to them the testimony is as follows :

Mr. Chase testifies in regard to all of them that there has been but one enlistment found for the same name. With regard to the name of William Patterson, No. 57, Mr. Davis says that he joined company M, 1st cavalry, December 23, 1862 ; Orsay says that he enlisted December 19, 1862, was transferred to 1st cavalry December 23, 1862, company M, and was ordered away from the post December 29, 1862.

CHARGE II—Specification 6. The following cases in this specification are those of double payments, in all of which (record, page 103, et seq.) the first payments were made on various vouchers for the 4th quarter of 1862, and the second payments appear on voucher 4 for September, 1863, viz: From No. 1, William John Mincen, to No. 8, Frederick J. Denny, inclusive; from No. 10, James B. Gilmore, to No. 23, James Riddle, inclusive; from No. 25, Ezekiel Hayward, to No. 33, John Beck, inclusive; from No. 35, John Buchanan, to No. 57, Michael Scully, inclusive; from No. 57, Philip Clark, to No. 106, Benjamin F. Satterlee, inclusive; from No. 108, Charles O. Doe, to No. 129, Alfred E. Houghton, inclusive; also No. 143, William Puff, and No. 146, Edward Waldenmaye.

The following testimony is given in regard to the other names, which are cases of single payments, with the exception of William Puff, just mentioned, viz:

The following are the cases in which the vouchers have been exhibited, and the evidence of experts given to show that the accused committed the forgeries alleged, viz:

No. 21, Franklin Lovejoy; No. 56, John McKee; No. 58, Isaac Highfield; No. 78, Ensign Reynolds; No. 82, John Kean; No. 84, Samuel J. Crocket; No. 85, Henry Esaw; No. 83, John Bauer; No. 89, Joseph Fielding; No. 90, David Watson; No. 91, James Shipman; No. 94, Patrick Coyle; No. 95, Joseph A. Billow; No. 162, Frederick Shaffer; No. 163, Jere W. Shufelt; No. 164, Arthur Harges; No. 165, Walter Caffyn; No. 170, Theodore P. Barker; No. 179, James H. Welch; No. 197, John Costillo; No. 198, Wells Speney.

It is to be remembered that all the foregoing names are supposed to be forgeries, and the evidence tends to establish that fact regarding the whole, although but few of them have been the subject of testimony and remark on the trial, in any direct attempt to fix the forgery on the accused. But the cases last referred to, where that has been done, have been selected much at random, and should be regarded rather as samples of, than as exceptions to, the remainder. If from the insufficiency of other evidence it should become important to fix the guilty knowledge of the accused in any of the remaining cases, the court under its own ruling may properly make comparison of handwriting, for the purpose of determining the authorship of each forgery, as above proved in general to have been committed.

In their deliberations upon the first charge, the court will understand that the first and second specifications are laid only under the 39th article of war, and the remainder both under that article and the act of Congress of March 2, 1863.

An approved definition of the term embezzle is, "to appropriate fraudulently to one's own use what is intrusted to one's care and management. It differs from stealing and robbery in this—that the latter imply a wrongful taking of another's goods, but embezzlement denotes the wrongful appropriation and use of what came into possession by right."

It is submitted, that in all the specifications of this charge, with the exceptions noted, the sums of money, with the time, place, and circumstances as laid, are properly and sufficiently proven. The only question remaining is, as to the fraudulent intention, or the knowing, wilful, and wrongful misappropriation and application to his own use by the accused.

In the second charge, the word signature must be understood to include "mark" or "sign," and the terms "forged and counterfeited" to be taken in the sense before given.

It is submitted that, with the exceptions noted in all the cases in all the specifications under this charge, the time, place, and circumstances laid, the names given, the accounts and vouchers specified, with their presentation and use, and certificate; also their false and fraudulent character, and that of the claim to obtain the allowance of which they were used, are all properly and sufficiently proven. The only remaining question is as to the guilty knowledge of the accused.

With regard to the third charge, no analysis or classification is possible. The court must necessarily pass upon each case after special examination. The evidence of the experts is chiefly valuable as directing the attention of the court to the points of similarity suggested, with the reasons for their opinion given. The only assistance in the power of the judge advocate to render is found in the index prepared, in which each name is given with the charge and specification noted, and the page of the record where it appears; the reference to such pages as bear on the question of forgery by the accused being distinguished by ticks with red ink.

The name of Edward Waldenmayer, the last in the first specification of this charge, is not properly there. In the voucher specified his signature is supposed to be genuine. It is submitted, that the other specifications are accurately drawn and proven, as regards all their formal parts.

It is now necessary to analyze the general testimony in the case, and to examine the statement of the accused. This must be with more minuteness than would be desirable were it not that want of candor, and indeed absolute falsity in some parts of that statement, require that it should not go uncontradicted.

The history of the case is, that Major Hastings's accounts for the 3d and 4th quarters of 1862 were not allowed by the Second Auditor, in consequence of his neither forwarding enlistment papers in support of them nor designating the officers by whom the enlistments were made, and a letter dated January 19, 1863, (Exhibit C) was sent him by the Second Auditor. He replied, under date of January 24, (Exhibit D,) that the enlistment papers were out of his possession, and supported his claim by the attached affidavits of Quinn and Webb.

On January 30 (Exhibit E) the Second Auditor reiterated the requirement that the alternative, the designation of the recruiting officer, should be complied with, which Major Hastings at last did, (Exhibit F;) and although, thereupon, Major Hastings's accounts were primarily settled, it was by comparison with the accounts of the officers then for the first time named that the existence of double charges for the same payment, which was not before suspected, was discovered in Major Hastings's vouchers for the 3d and 4th quarters of 1862, and the earlier part of 1863.

All of his settlements were immediately cancelled, (record, page 101.) This was about the last of the year 1863, and in the month of February in the present year Major Hastings was at Washington, and, as his statement declares, threw all the blame of the frauds upon Corporal Henry Orsay, his clerk at that time, who was sent under guard of the witnesses Ryan and White to Washington. On arriving there, Orsay says that Major Hastings invited him to an interview, in which he acknowledged his own guilt, and worked upon him (Orsay,) both by intimidation and promise, to induce him to desert and go out of the way to Canada.

Ryan, the sergeant of Orsay's guard, testifies that Major Hastings not only desired him to allow Orsay's desertion, but to use his influence in persuading him to take that course, and in fact he did desert, with the connivance of the guard, and did go to Canada. The truth of Major Hastings's connexion with this desertion of Orsay, and with the action of his guard, becomes of great importance. It is not only a collateral point, and not only would show conduct inconsistent with Major Hastings's innocence, but furthermore vitally affects the main elaborate theory of innocence in his statement. Orsay further testifies that he had correspondence with Major Hastings in Canada, and produces two letters alleged to be from him, in evidence, as Exhibits I and H. He also, as is conclusively shown by others, was in Carlisle in April last, during his desertion, and there is evidence besides his own that he then communicated with Major Hastings. He testifies that at that time he had two interviews with Major Hastings, who, at the second, gave him $500. The witness Ryan testifies that on the day of Orsay's escape Major Hastings promised him rewards, and both Ryan and White state that on their return to Carlisle Major Hastings repeated such promises, and did actually fulfil them in part, by sending them the next day, through Lieutenant McGregor, the sum of $100 each. This payment is admitted by the accused.

During the trial at Carlisle, the court was delayed from day to day for about a week by the disappearance of the witness Ryan, of which adjournment the statement most naturally complains, as it was the means of producing testimony which, whether the accused be guilty or innocent, would not otherwise have been available at this trial. The testimony both of Michael Ryan, when he returned from desertion, and of his brother, is, that Major Hastings paid $2,000 to alter the testimony proposed to be given by Michael Ryan, or, if he would not swear at his dictation, to suppress it by his absconding. If these four witnesses are to be credited, the accused spent $2,700 to get rid of evidence against him. In his statement he asserts that the repeated acts of bribery and desertion "are too much alike not to have originated in the same mind," which he attributes to a conspiracy. But, as probably the tactics of the same mind, it may be considered in another light, and if there was an attempt to spirit away evidence by bribery and incited desertion in either of these cases, it would corroborate the other.

In examining the statement of the accused, it is proper to take a different legal stand-point from that in which his counsel have placed him. Their position is, that, "if the frauds and forgeries might have been done by another, without his knowledge or participation, not even the strongest probability of guilt, if it be short of excluding the possibility of innocence, will suffice to justify a conviction." In this view a very important element is omitted. Major Hastings was the superintendent of recruiting, and was responsible for the performance of his duties and the proper disbursement of the money intrusted to him. He signed, certified, presented, and used the accounts and vouchers. He received the money and claimed the credits, the amounts of which, if not shown to have been disbursed on proper accounts, are supposed to remain in his hands.

These accounts and vouchers, so signed, certified, presented, and used, are shown to be false, fraudulent and forged; a strong presumption then arises against him, which, though not by itself conclusive, it is for him to rebut.

He found, however, a claim for respectful and favorable consideration by reason of his past excellent character. This is perfectly just. The testimony to this point will doubtless have its full weight with the court, and then will be added a natural desire that the cloth which we all wear should be found stainless in this instance. But the cases where fraud is charged, and when it too often exists, are almost always those where the accused has borne a superior character, for the simple reason that to such alone large trusts are confided. Therefore, to close the judicial mind to evidence of fraud on account of previous good repute would always prevent conviction. It should strengthen the invariable presumption of innocence and heighten sympathy, where such can exist, but it should do no more.

The next and main feature of the statement it is painful to analyze. It consists in an attack upon nearly all the witnesses in the case, and violent assertions that they are all conspirators and perjured villains. Regarding some of these witnesses who are without taint by the record, and who are now filling responsible positions under the government, duty requires that they should be vindicated on the record. Mr. Chase, that most estimable gentleman, who was ordered by the Secretary of War to investigate this case, is accused of dishonesty and perjury; yet when examined the whole assault turns upon the meaning of the word "recently," while it appears, and is the fact, that the conversation which took place was weeks or months previous to when Mr. Chase said it was not "recent," and he is accused of combination with Orsay, and with a hint at a corrupt motive of getting up this case upon the testimony of the latter, when it is a fact known to this court that this case was ordered for trial before it long previous to the return of Orsay from Canada, on account of whose absence the case was passed over, and others tried out of their turn. The evidence shows that it was by the skill and industry of the auditing officers of the government, not by the revelations of Orsay, that this case was made up and presented.

Mr. Rheem, the respectable United States assessor, is also accused of perjury by the statement, gratuitously, flatly, and without a pretence of evidence, denying the whole of his sworn testimony. There also appears a sneer at and accusation of Corporal Guiton, against whom there is no syllable of evidence, whose reputation has survived even the corruption of Carlisle barracks, and who now is the confidential clerk of the present superintendent. Mr. Onion, whose good character has secured him a position in the Adjutant General's office, is also blackened with but little reason. It is true that he made an affidavit at the request and for the benefit of Major Hastings, in which affidavit, drawn by the latter, some words may be construed, as possibly was the design of the author, to have more than one meaning. It is, however, submitted that the explanation of the witness is satisfactory, and that his conduct and words may be construed to be without wrong. The statement of the accused that Onion, in his testimony, says that he knew of the demand of Orsay and Butts for money and thought it a fair game, is a strangely garbled account. It is by no means so on the record, though the badgering of the witness by counsel in some respects confused him. He is also attacked for endeavoring to get Orsay's pardon conveyed to him, and to procure his return. Instead of being criminal, this was at the instance of officers of the government, after the proper authorities had in their discretion offered the pardon, and was perfectly right and commendable. The same may be said of Mr. Butts. The only doubt on the character of the latter is, that he declined to answer as to his knowledge regarding the desertion of Orsay, lest it might criminate himself. If, when not in the military service, he really did know of the desertion of one who was an intimate friend of himself and family, without betraying him it was wrong, but it does not prove anything like the crime and villany denounced and published against him, nor does it come well from the defence, which places on the stand as a main reliance two soldiers, O'Brien and Maynard, who paid social visits to a known deserter in his concealment, even if it is not true that the accused also kept a rendezvous with the same lurking deserter, and sent him to Canada with money instead of to the guard-house in irons.

The gratuitous statement that Mr. Butts came to Major Hastings and demanded $5,000 is without any evidence whatever, as is also the assertion of the very admirable conduct of the accused on that supposed occasion.

Having vindicated the character of witnesses whose record should not have been impeached by either an innocent or a sensible man, there remain several whose conduct has been improper, and in some cases disgraceful. These are Orsay, White, and the two Ryans.

Orsay's own account would show weakness and want of sterling principle, rather than premeditated guilt. He is taken before the commanding officer whom he has been used to regard with the awe that none but a regular soldier feels. He is threatened by being himself implicated, and he fears that his officer could, possibly, have crushed him, however innocent. On the one hand he is offered, in terms, freedom and competence; on the other is presented a felon's cell. He hesitates; but it is only after the guards, by their own testimony, have almost driven him from them, that he yields to the temptation. His after-demand for money is a natural consequence. He is out of employment, without means, and he claims the wages for which he sold his honor. The latter remark applies to White and Michael Ryan, and all their outside stories, on which very unnecessary stress is paid by the defence, follow naturally from the commission of the first wrong. The great question is, do these witnesses tell the truth? If they do, it is not for the accused, at least, to vilify them. If they are to be believed, however they criminate themselves, they prove Major Hastings to be still more guilty.

The elaborate argument in the defence is, that Major Hastings could not have connived at the escape of Orsay, because it was contrary to his own interest, and placed him in the position he laments, of being compelled to make defence before this court, instead of being Orsay's accuser. This may be true on the theory of innocence and a ramifying conspiracy between every one who has testified for the United States, but there is another view to take. In the first place, if Major Hastings did induce Orsay to leave the country, he did not expect him to turn up again as a witness against him. Second, it assumes that the case against Major Hastings was instituted by, or at the suggestion of, Orsay. There is no evidence of this, but there is, on the contrary, that, without revelation from Orsay, and before his return, the proof accumulated had become so strong against Major Hastings that he was relieved from his command and the case ordered before this court. Again, on the theory of guilt, what could he have done better than to procure a scape-goat? He had but to assert his own entire innocence, and state that he had been wholly in the power of a clerk whom he had implicitly trusted, which rascal had fled, and thus sealed a confession of guilt. Whether or not he induced the desertion, this is precisely what Major Hastings said in his explanation of the fraud, and says now. And whether he is or is not guilty, the story was nearly successful. The commissioners, according to his own statements, were at one time satisfied with it, and it was only through the indefatigable exertions of that faithful officer, Mr. Chase, that the frauds were discovered to be too extensive to have been committed by a clerk, and that they covered a period of time in which the deserting scape-goat could not have had an opportunity to perpetrate them.

Major Hastings, in his statement, admits what it would be scarcely possible to deny, after the evidence of Lieutenant McGregor, that he did send $100 to each of the men, White and Michael Ryan, after their trial and conviction; but he states that it was through sympathy with them. It is not easily seen how he could feel that sympathy. According to his own statement they had permitted or connived at (and they were sentenced for so doing) the escape of the man, of all others, whose absence placed him before this court, as he laments, in the position of an accused person instead of a prosecutor. It is scarcely probable that an officer would so sympathize with soldiers just convicted of a serious military crime, as by his bounty to render nugatory the sentence deliberately imposed by a court and confirmed by the highest authority, and this especially when, by their offence, the criminals had allowed the very man who had worked his ruin to escape his just vengeance, and whose absence, occasioned by them, seriously thwarted his attempts to establish his own innocence.

The evidence shows how the payment of bounties was conducted and the vouchers and accounts made up.

The recruits were first brought to the superintendent's room and examined by the surgeon in his presence, then the bounty-receipt roll was taken by the chief clerk, the receipts signed, and the money paid, which was handed over to the clerk in the amounts exactly corresponding with the number of the men before examined and passed by the surgeon. Then the receipt rolls were returned to Major Hastings, who kept them in his own custody until the next batch of recruits came to be paid. At the end of the month only were the payments witnessed, and all at once. The left-hand column of names and some formal parts were admitted, with the exception of one voucher, to have been written by Major Hastings himself.

It is true that the defence contended that the rolls were kept by the clerks, and had been some time witnessed at the time of payment, but the evidence to that effect is very feeble. It rests upon the testimony of O'Brien and Maynard, none of whose duties could have made them familiar with the superintendent's papers; and O'Brien says he had nothing to do with them. Regarding this witness, and the attempt to contradict the others through him, little need be said. The court will recall the manner of the man, his evident animus, his agency for the accused, and his self-contradictions, amounting to positive prevarications. The cross-examination, as was doubtless perceived, was chiefly to lay ground for rebutting testimony, but on reflection it was not considered worth the additional time and trouble to contradict and invalidate that witness.

But how could the clerk have had exclusive and constant control of the vouchers when Major Hastings admits that so large a part of it was his own work? And the question is disposed of if the court believe that many cases of alleged receipts, particularly those signed by mark, were written by Major Hastings himself. He must have had the control of the roll then; yet he denies that he ever paid any one or was present at any payment. To meet this difficulty he produces evidence that Orsay was an expert penman and able to counterfeit his signature. This rests, apart from O'Brien, upon the two witnesses, Chaplain Ross and Undertaker Ewing; and the court can estimate the intelligence and value of their testimony, and whether or not they would be likely to make a large story about a small matter. The character of the last-named witness is further developed in his history of the mysterious combination of box and bunk which Orsay ordered, and the members of the court who have seen it can judge whether it was not an article very useful in the service and very naturally ordered by a soldier already in a famed position, and daily expecting a commission for which he had been strongly recommended.

In reference to the matter of Orsay's handwriting, a most singular circumstance occurred on the trial. A memorandum list of names charged was prepared by him for the judge advocate, without the intention of using it in evidence or expectation that it would meet other eyes. The counsel of the accused, however, observed it, required it to be produced, (Exhibit No. 1,) and then were presented, side by side, the three columns of the same names by hundreds—the one admitted to be written by Major Hastings; another written, obviously without premeditation, by the party on whose guilt the defence rested; and the third composed of the names forged. This might be considered an experimentum cructis, and the court is the judge of the result, as also of the comparison of a vast number of the same names written by Orsay in the descriptive books.

Orsay testifies that down to a certain period he never wrote a receipt by mark without the words "his mark" being inserted above and below the cross, and among hundreds and indeed thousands of names the accused has found but a solitary instance of his neglecting so to do. If the cases of receipt by mark, without the corresponding words, are believed by the court to be in Major Hastings's handwriting, it proves a great deal, and, on the other hand, the theory of the latter must be considered, that with wonderful prescience a cunning conspirator had in this, and many other minor points, prepared himself for just such an investigation as the present.

But there is intrinsic evidence in the vouchers that the columns for witnessing were signed at one time. It is submitted that they clearly appear to be so on inspection, written by the same pen and the same ink, and, in some instances, so little pains seems to be taken, except to get down the names, that the witness appears on lines where there is no corresponding receipt. This is natural for clerks ordered to execute such a pro forma style of witnessing, but would be less natural in conspirators carrying on their careful and systematic forgeries.

There also seems some intrinsic probability that the bounty receipt rolls were carefully kept by the superintendent in his own custody. They were the only representatives to him of large sums of money; in fact they were money to him, as the basis of his credits. It is scarcely probable that he would allow such papers to be perpetually out of his possession, and at the end of the month blindly go to work and fill up the formal parts at considerable labor to himself. If the clerks were trusted with everything else in which vastly more responsibility was involved, why were they not made to perform the simple manual duty of writing the left-hand column also? But the court will direct its attention to the fact, whether in many instances in the column of receipts Major Hastings's handwriting does not appear either in the apparently innocent and undisguised name accompanying a mark, or in some attempt at imitation of a different hand. Whoever had the vouchers could have used them to interpolate a series of false receipts between batches of the true ones, and this is the theory of the prosecution to explain how the greater part of the frauds were committed.

The theory of the defence is that it was not in Major Hastings's power to commit the frauds or to detect their commission by others, while it was what lay in the power of the banded conspirators. And yet in the mode in which the payments certainly were made, and are now made, what is more simple? A certain number of men come in, are examined by the surgeon in the presence of the superintendent, are passed, and go into the adjoining room to sign the receipts and receive their bounty. It is only necessary to count the men, multiply their number by twenty-five, and hand over the money to the clerk. What impossible negligence or stupidity it would be in the superintendent to hand over an amount corresponding with a larger number of names, and on some days a vastly larger number than those who had just left his presence, simply because they had freshly been added by the clerk? Would not the discrepancy instantly be discovered? In no other way could the clerk gain advantage by the forgery on addition of names, except by getting old recruits to personate new ones; but it is scarcely possible that men would run the gauntlet of another examination by the surgeon and superintendent for the clerk's benefit, even with a prospective share in the plunder; nor can it be supposed that such a personation would be successful in hundreds and thousands of cases. If, indeed, Orsay, for instance, had in advance received large gross sums on deposit from Major Hastings, as a sort of sub-disbursing officer, he might then have claimed credits for his fraudulent receipts; but it was not so, and the only one who could be advantaged was the superintendent, in whose hands the money actually was, and remained when he did not make an actual payment, and for whose benefit alone all the false receipts inured as credits.

An argument may also be drawn from numbers. For instance, in the voucher for January, 1864, where there were within a few days but twenty-seven true payments and two hundred and twenty-one false ones, and where Orsay is not improperly rebuked for signing as witness, as usual, according to order. It was, however, not Orsay but Major Hastings who filled out that list, certified to it on honor, presented it, and claimed the credits on it. The court must determine whether he could, with the remembrance of the examination of the surgeon in his presence, and with the checks found in the various reports, musters, and returns, coming directly to his knowledge, have been deceived by any one so as to have supposed that he actually paid, rationed, and quartered, and in various modes disposed of, two hundred and twenty-one more men than were at that time at his post.

In conclusion, the evidence shows that the perpetrator of the recent fraud at Carlisle barracks must have had an intimate and masterly knowledge of the office there. He must have pursued a systematic plan, and one thoroughly premeditated. He must have been one in possession of the money, and to whose benefit the false charges could inure. He must have had such exclusive custody of the vouchers, that no one would have the opportunity to compare them with the descriptive book to discover that no more or different names appeared upon the vouchers than upon that record. He must have been in such a position with reference to the custody of the vouchers and the control of other papers of the post, that discrepancies between those vouchers, and the various musters, returns, and reports, could not be detected. He must in 1863 have had control or custody of the enlistment papers which were missing in the fourth quarter of 1862, and which were used in 1863, and January, 1864. And it must be supposed, also, that he continued steadily in all those relations during the entire eighteen months throughout which the frauds are scattered. The latter is not true regarding Onion, who left about April, 1863, and is not true regarding Orsay, who succeeded him at that date, nor are most of the above conditions fulfilled in either of their cases. The same remark applies to both Butts and Guiton, although it is hard to understand on what evidence those men are pressed into the supposed conspiracy. But is not every one of these conditions fulfilled in the case of the officer who was lately both superintendent of the mounted recruiting service and the post commander at Carlisle barracks?

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Second Auditor's Office, January 19, 1863.

SIR: Your letter of the 6th instant, enclosing copy of one sent under date of 2d December, 1862, in reference to the vouchers for bounties paid, which have been suspended in your recruiting accounts, has been transmitted to this office by the Adjutant General.

In reply I have to say that the vouchers can be allowed only upon compliance with one of the alternatives offered.

If it is impossible for you to forward copies of the enlistments, as vouchers for your payments, you can place upon the receipt roll, against the name of each recruit, the name of the officer who enlisted him.

The enlistments filed in each officer's account will then be compared with your voucher, and you will receive credit for the amounts properly paid. A complete set of enlistments would, however, hasten the allowance of your accounts.

Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania, January 24, 1863.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 19th instant, in reference to vouchers for bounties paid, which have been suspended in the settlement of my recruiting accounts.

To insure the settlement of these accounts from July to December, 1862, inclusive, I enclose herewith the affidavit of two of my clerks, who were present at the different payments, and compared the enlistments with the payment of each man as he received his bounty. I have stated in former communications that the enlistments and records of most of the men to whom bounties were paid have, in pursuance of regulation, passed out of my possession. I trust that the amounts will be passed to my credit, as I have taken every precaution to submit the best voucher in my power.

I have adopted measures by which I will be enabled to send copies of the enlistment in all cases of bounties paid after the 1st of January, instant.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

TOWN OF CARLISLE,

Personally appeared before me, Abraham Dehuff, a justice of the peace in and for said county, Newell F. Onion, sergeant major of the cavalry depot, Carlisle barracks, Pennsylvania, and Private Lewis B. Webb, of the permanent company, both clerks in the office of the superintendent of the mounted recruiting service at said post, who, being duly sworn, say :

"We were present at the payment of the bounty by Captain D. H. Hastings, 1st cavalry, superintendent of the mounted recruiting service, that appears in his recruiting accounts for the months of July, August, September, October, November, and December, 1862; and that we have carefully verified every payment with the original enlistment of each recruit as the payment was made to him.

"We further state, under oath, that these enlistments have passed out of the possession of Captain D. H. Hastings, in pursuance of the recruiting regulations, and that he cannot, in our opinion, furnish stronger and more full evidence of the facts than what is set forth in the bounty receipt rolls filed with the before-mentioned accounts, and in this affidavit.

SIR: Yours of the 24th instant is received, with the affidavit of your clerks enclosed, which is satisfactory evidence of your faithfulness in the payment of the advance bounties to recruits. Your good faith, however, has not been questioned; but the object of the requirement mentioned in my letter of the 19th instant is to prevent the possibility of a second payment of the bounty to the same parties by another officer, or by this department. If, therefore, you are unable to specify by what officer each recruit was enlisted, you will please furnish me a statement in general showing the names and stations of all recruiting officers under your control, and to whose recruits you paid bounty.

HEADQUARTERS MOUNTED RECRUITING SERVICE,

Camp near Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, July 6, 1863.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 22d of June, 1863, enclosing a statement of differences arising in the settlement of my recruiting accounts, up to the 31st of December, 1862. In explanation, I respectfully submit the following :

In several letters which I had the honor to address you, in the 4th quarter of 1862, on the subject of these accounts, and in an affidavit of two of my clerks accompanying them, I explained the utter impossibility under the circumstances of my rendering the enlistments. You did me the justice of stating in one of your letters that my good faith in this was not doubted. I think I stated in a former letter that I paid the bounties on these vouchers before I was aware that the enlistments would be required. As soon as I ascertained that fact I took measures to supply them in all subsequent payments.

I trust these explanations and the affidavits alluded to, which are on file with the accounts, will be satisfactory to pass them to my credit, and that those settlements may not be delayed on account of technicalities.

I append a list of the officers, by whom the recruits were enlisted, as far as the imperfect state of my retained records will allow. In evacuating Carlisle barracks, Pennsylvania, a few days ago, in the face of the enemy, many of my retained papers were mislaid and lost.

SENTENCE.

And the court does therefore sentence him, Major David H. The charges against the said Major D. H. Hastings, the findings and sentence, to be published in the newspapers in the city of Washington, D. C., and in the city of Harrisburg, and borough of Carlisle, Pennsylvania, in which last-named place the said Major D. H. Hastings resides."

II. On a careful review of the evidence in the foregoing case, the department does not concur with the court in all its findings. That Major Hastings has been guilty of culpable negligence in his duties there can be no doubt, even while making due allowance for the suspicious character of the testimony. It is therefore ordered that his sentence be commuted to suspension from rank, pay, and emoluments for the period of six calendar months.

By order of the Secretary of War:

Official:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant General.

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant General.

ST. LOUIS, August 21, 1861.

DEAR SIR: Herewith please find check on Hewitt & Co., New York, by J. J. Roe & Co., for J. J. Roe, and enclosed to you, for $500 in payment of interest note due this day. I also enclose six interest notes for $500 each, of John J. Roe, your favor, payable six months apart, to pay interest on the $10,000 which fell due to-day, but, by agreement, is extended for three years from 18th instant, the day on which the interest notes are dated. I send you, on first page, a copy of receipt which I have given Captain Roe for you, and which please sign and return so that I can hand it to him; make also a similar memorandum and attach it to the principal note.

I can find no opportunity of lending your money now in our hands; all kinds of business is paralyzed, and no responsible party wishes to incur a debt. Exchange on New York is now $7\frac{1}{2}$ premium, but it is expected to come down soon.

Please advise what we shall do with your money.

Your obedient servant,

ROBERT CAMPBELL.

Captain DAVID H. HASTINGS,
Carlisle, Pennsylvania.

EXHIBIT No. 2.

St. Louis, July 8, 1861.

DEAR SIR: We have yours of 4th instant, with notes of John J. Roe for $10,000 and $500 due 18—21 proximo. We have deposited the interest note for collection, and retained the note for $10,000 for renewal.

Our recording clerk is (with his family) at Newport. He will return here within a fortnight, and will attend to renewal and investment, as requested. In these times we do not desire to make any investments for our friends, but perhaps our recording clerk will find out something safe and desirable for you. The original deed of trust cannot be disturbed or increased. The loan is of the first class, and Mr. Roe is one of our safest men.

The writer (H. C.) leaves here this week for Newport, and recording clerk will return soon afterwards.

Very truly your friends,

ROBERT CAMPBELL & CO.

Lieutenant D. H. HASTINGS, Carlisle, Pennsylvania.

St. Louis, April 5, 1859.

DEAR SIR: I am this day in receipt of your favor of 1st instant, with check for $4,500, which you wish me to invest for you.

I have arranged to lend the money to Robert K. Woods, same who borrowed the $10,000, and take a deed of trust on same property with an indorser, and have the notes maturing at same time as your other loan.

The amount will be loaned on the 10th instant, and the sum will be $5,000.

I consider you quite fortunate in securing so good an investment, and with a party so entirely responsible.

Yours, truly,

ROBERT CAMPBELL.

Lieutenant D. H. HASTINGS.

CARLISLE, September 10, 1864.

A court-martial has recently passed upon Major David Hastings for embezzlement of public funds to a large amount. What their finding may have been not known here; the public who have witnessed (afar off) his course since the rebellion have convicted him. I have reason to think that parties interested in his speculations at the commencement of his career will make an effort to have him pardoned. I write to caution you not to suffer the judgment of the court to be set aside or interfered with. Other developments may be made showing that the government has been swindled hundreds of thousands of dollars while he was inspector of horses at Harrisburg, and, indeed, in every manner in which he has been intrusted with public funds.

Jay Cooke & Co.'s books were examined they would show more investments of money than were shown at trial. As a subject of the government, I consider it every man's duty to guard it against knaves.

I have no desire to be known in this, and should be glad if you will consider my suggestion as confidential.

Respectfully, yours,

WILLIAM M. WATTS.

1. E. M. STANTON.

St. Louis, October 3, 1863.

SIR: Herewith please find check of the Merchants' Bank on Bank of America, New York, for $18,074 01, which is the amount of principal and H. Ex. Doc. 54—18 interest of your loan to R. K. Woods. Mr. Woods sold his house, and now pays off the debt with the proceeds. He is particularly grateful for your kind indulgence to him when he was unable to pay the interest. We feel much pleased to see this debt paid, as Mr Woods's circumstances have greatly changed since the loan was made; but as he is a gentleman of the highest honor, we knew that everything in his power would be done to pay off the debt. Your loan to Captain Roe is very safe, and Roe would be glad to pay it off, but you could not so profitably reinvest.

Yours, truly,

ROBERT CAMPBELL & CO.

Captain D. H. HASTINGS,
Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania.

EXHIBIT A.

The account of Major D. H. Hastings, United States army, for August, 1862, was filed at the Second Auditor's office 11th September, 1862. An account was also rendered by him for the 3d quarter 1862, including August also, received at the Auditor's office 13th November, 1862. This account, supported by an abstract and vouchers numbering 11, gives credit to Major Hastings for disbursements, &c., to the amount of $12,247 19, and the following certificates are appended to them, viz:

To the account current: "I certify on honor that the above statement is correct, and that the expenditures have been faithfully made for the objects expressed in the vouchers, and that the balance due the United States is deposited with the assistant treasurer, Philadelphia, Penn.

"D. H. HASTINGS,
"Capt. 1st Cavalry, Sup't Mounted Recruiting Service."

To the abstract, merely his official signature.

To the vouchers for payment of bounties, viz: "I certify that the above is correct, and that the recruits have passed the inspection required by paragraph 976 Recruiting Regulations.

"D. H. HASTINGS,
"Capt. 1st Cavalry, Sup't Mounted Recruiting Service."

Vouchers 9 and 10 of his account for third quarter 1862 are for the payment of bounties under act of 5th July, 1862. A number of payments are found to men whose enlistments are not filed. No double payments, however. (See list No. 1.)

Fourth quarter 1862.

Major Hastings's account for the fourth quarter 1862 was received 23d February, 1863. The accounts had previously been received monthly; but this account embraced all the others for October, November, and December, 1862. On this he claimed disbursement and transfers of $40,131 22, including bounty of $27,950. This account was accompanied by an abstract and vouchers, numbering 19—those for bounties being Nos. 8, 12, 13, 14, 18. The certificates are the same as appended to accounts and vouchers of third quarter 1862.

The caption of the voucher for bounties is as follows:

Major Hastings claims to have paid $25 advance bounty to the following named recruit who were enlisted in the 4th quarter of 1862, (generally from volunteers, and who had not before received bounty)

The enlistments are filed by Major Hastings in support of the payments, but the books at Carlisle show that the men were not present at the date of payment.

SWORD TO CAPTAIN HENRY S. STELLWAGEN.

MESSAGE

FROM THE

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES,

TRANSMITTING

Correspondence in relation to the presentation of a sword to Captain Henry S. Stellwagen.

FEBRUARY 9, 1865.—Referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs and ordered to be printed.

To the Senate and House of Representatives :

I transmit to Congress a copy of a note of the 4th instant addressed by J. Hume Burnley, esquire, her Britannic Majesty's chargé d'affaires, to the Secretary of State, relative to a sword which it is proposed to present to Captain Henry S. Stellwagen, commanding the United States frigate Constellation, as a mark of gratitude for his services to the British brigantine Mersey. The expediency of sanctioning the acceptance of the gift is submitted to your consideration.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

WASHINGTON, February 8, 1865.

Mr Burnley to Mr. Seward.

WASHINGTON, February 4, 1865.

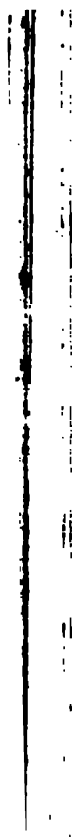

SIR: Her Majesty's consul at St. Thomas has reported to his government the friendly and efficient assistance given by Captain Stellwagen, of the United States frigate Constellation, to the British brigantine Mersey, of Liverpool, which he fell in with in a disabled condition, and in a state of imminent peril from the effects of a severe hurricane while on her voyage from New York to Para. Captain Stellwagen sent on board the Mersey and most liberally supplied the wants of the ship and crew, thus enabling her master to bring her in safety to the port of St. Thomas.

Her Majesty's government, being desirous to show their sense of the services of Captain Stellwagen on that occasion, have caused the accompanying sword of honor to be prepared for him as a mark of their gratitude, and I am instructed by her Majesty's principal secretary of state for foreign affairs to deliver it to you, with a request that Captain Stellwagen may be permitted to accept it.

I have the honor to be, with the highest consideration, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

J. HUME BURNLEY.

Hon. WILLIAM H. SEWARD, &c., &c., &c.

REPRESENTATION IN THE ELECTORAL COLLEGE.

MESSAGE

FROM THE

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES,

ACCOMPANYING

The notice of signing the "Joint Resolution declaring certain States not entitled to representation in the Electoral College."

FEBRUARY 9, 1865.—Referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs and ordered to be printed.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives:

The joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution declaring certain States not entitled to representation in the Electoral College" has been signed by the Executive, in deference to the view of Congress implied in its passage and presentation to him. In his own view, however, the two houses of Congress, convened under the twelfth article of the Constitution, have complete power to exclude from counting all electoral votes deemed by them to be illegal; and it is not competent for the Executive to defeat or obstruct that power by a veto, as would be the case if his action were at all essential in the matter. He disclaims all right of the Executive to interfere in any way in the matter of canvassing or counting electoral votes; and he also disclaims that, by signing said resolution, he has expressed any opinion on the recitals of the preamble, or any judgment of his own upon the subject of the resolution.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN,

EXECUTIVE MANSION, February 8, 1865.

PURCHASES MADE FOR INDIANS IN ARIZONA.

LETTER

FROM THE

SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR,

ASKING

For an appropriation to pay for provisions purchased for the benefit of the Indians in Arizona.

FEBRUARY 10, 1865 — Referred to the Committee of Ways and Means and ordered to be printed.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,

Washington, D. C., February 9, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit, herewith, for the consideration of Congress, a copy of a communication dated the 11th ultimo, from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and accompanying extract from a letter of Hon. C. D. Poston, of September 1, 1864, in relation to expenses incurred by him while he was superintendent of Indian affairs in Arizona, in supplying the Indians of that Territory with provisions upon which to subsist during the present winter.

I also transmit vouchers of Messrs. White & Noyes for $12,100, and of William R. Murray for $800, referred to by Mr Poston, as given by him for the purchases made, and have the honor to recommend that an appropriation of twelve thousand nine hundred dollars be made to enable this department to pay the indebtedness.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. P. USHER, Secretary.

Hon. SCHUYLER COLFAX,

Speaker of the House of Representatives

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,

Office Indian Affairs, January 14, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report herewith a letter of honorable Charles D. Poston, late superintendent of Indian affairs in Arizona, dated September 1, 1864, (but not received in this office until the 29th ultimo,) enclosing vouchers of White & Noyes, W. R. Murray, and Pauline Weaver.

The first voucher noticed, that of White & Noyes, is for $55,000 pounds of flour, at 22 cents per pound, amounting to the sum of $12,100.

The second is in favor of William Murray, for bacon, flour, &c., amounting to $800.

The third appears to be in favor of Pauline Weaver, for services as a self-constituted agent among the Indians in Arizona.

All the above vouchers relate to the Indian service in Arizona, and as Mr. Poston not only explains the circumstances of his forming the indebtedness in the first and second cases, and occupies a position in the national legislature that will afford an opportunity for him to go more into detail, I would most respectfully suggest that the matter be referred to Congress, with the view that an appropriation may be made to meet the indebtedness, and, if thought proper, to pay Pauline Weaver for his services, should they be recognized as beneficial to the public interest. .

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. P. DOLE, Commissioner.

Hon. J. P. USHER,

Secretary of the Interior.

Extract from letter of Superintendent C. D. Poston to Commissioner of Indian Affairs, of September 1, 1864.

I beg leave to submit the enclosed voucher for payment by your office.

The account of White & Noyes is for flour obtained and used for the benefit of the Indians, to enable them to pass the present winter in comfort, and was the only means in the power of the superintendent to secure their peace and quietude.

The voucher in favor of William R. Murray is for provisions obtained from the citizens of Weaverville for the use of the Pima and Maricopa Indians when on a campaign under my charge against the hostile Apaches last winter.

The claims are all just due, and ought to be paid.

ANNUITIES OF THE CHIPPEWA INDIANS OF LAKE SUPERIOR.

LETTER

FROM THE

SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR,

ASKING

Congress to provide for the payment of the annuities to the Chippewa Indians of Lake Superior in coin.

FEBRUARY 10, 1865.—Referred to the Committee of Ways and Means and ordered to be printed.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C., February 8, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to submit for the consideration of Congress copies of correspondence relating to the payment in coin of the annuities of the Chippewas of Lake Superior, as required by the treaty with them, and have nothing to add to the reasons given by the agent and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs.

There can be no doubt of the justice and legality of the claim of the Indians, and I recommend that in this instance, and in all others where the treaty provides for the payment in coin, the appropriation be special, according to the terms of the treaty. Upon a general appropriation the Secretary of the Treasury does not find himself justified in paying coin.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. P. USHER, Secretary.

HON. SCHUYLER COLFAX,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Office Indian Affairs, February 2, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith for your consideration the copy of a letter addressed to this office by Agent L. E. Webb, on the 31st ultimo, urging that the annuities due to the Chippewas of Lake Superior should be paid in coin.

Relative to this matter, it should not be forgotten that subsisting treaties with this tribe expressly stipulate that their annuities shall be paid in specie. Another fact entitled, in my opinion, to grave consideration is that these Indians, located, as they are, upon the border of the British provinces, are constantly subjected to the evil effect of the distinction made in trading operations in favor of British currency and against our own.

2 PAYMENT OF ANNUITIES TO CERTAIN INDIANS IN COIN.

In view of these circumstances, I would respectfully submit whether the necessary steps should not be taken at an early day to obtain the consent of the Secretary of the Treasury to a payment of these annuities in coin, or, failing in that, to lay the matter before Congress, with a recommendation to that body for such mandatory legislation as shall secure the object desired.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. P. DOLE, Commissioner.

Hon. JOHN P. USHER,
Secretary of the Interior.

WASHINGTON, January 31, 1865.

SIR: I beg leave again to call your attention to the importance of fulfilling the treaty stipulations with the Chippewas of Lake Superior. The treaties of 1842 and 1854 stipulate that the annuities shall be paid in coin. The payments for the years 1863 and 1864 were made in currency, but the Indians refused to give a receipt in full for their annuities, and demanded coin, and stated that they should make a demand upon the department for the difference in value between the coin and the currency paid them. The Indians gave the notice in writing, which was forwarded by me to you in November last, that hereafter they would not receive currency in payment of their annuities.

In my judgment, their claim is just, and it will be impossible to make the payments this year unless coin is furnished. Many of the Indians live on the borders of the British provinces, and trade extensively with the Hudson Bay Company. They cannot pay out currency except at a discount of 50 per cent. In my judgment, the government can with as much propriety repudiate the payment of the interest on the bonds payable in coin as to refuse to pay the Indians coin when so stipulated in the treaties. This subject demands your prompt action.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

L. E. WEBB,
United States Indian Agent.

Hon. WM. P. DOLE,
Commissioner of Indian Affairs, Washington, D. C.

PEACE.

MESSAGE

FROM THE

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES,

TRANSMITTING,

In compliance with the resolution of February 8th, 1865, information relative to a conference held at Hampton Roads with Messrs. A. H. Stephens, R. M. T. Hunter, and J. A. Campbell.

FEBRUARY 10, 1865.—Read, laid upon the table and ordered to be printed.

To the honorable the House of Representatives :

In response to your resolution of the 8th instant, requesting information in relation to a conference recently held in Hampton Roads, I have the honor to state, that on the day of the date I gave Francis P. Blair, senior, a card, written on as follows, to wit :

“ Allow the bearer, F. P. Blair, senior, to pass our lines, go south, and return.

“ A. LINCOLN.

“ December 28, 1864.”

That at the time I was informed that Mr. Blair sought the card as a means of getting to Richmond, Virginia ; but he was given no authority to speak or act for the government, nor was I informed of anything he would say or do on his own account, or otherwise. Afterwards Mr. Blair told me that he had been to Richmond, and had seen Mr. Jefferson Davis ; and he (Mr. B.) at the same time left with me a manuscript letter, as follows, to wit :

RICHMOND, VA., January 12, 1865.

SIR : I have deemed it proper, and probably desirable to you, to give you, in this form the substance of remarks made by me, to be repeated by you to President Lincoln, &c., &c.

I have no disposition to find obstacles in forms, and am willing, now as heretofore, to enter into negotiations for the restoration of peace ; and am ready to send a commission whenever I have reason to suppose it will be received, or to receive a commission, if the United States government shall chose to send one. That, notwithstanding the rejection of our former offers, I would, if you could promise that a commissioner, minister, or other agent would be received, appoint one immediately, and renew the effort to enter into conference, with a view to secure peace to the two countries.

Yours, &c.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

F. P. BLAIR, Esq.

Afterwards, and with the view that it should be shown to Mr. Davis, I wrote and delivered to Mr. Blair a letter, as follows, to wit:

WASHINGTON, January 18, 1865.

SIR: Your having shown me Mr. Davis's letter to you of the 12th instant, you may say to him that I have constantly been, am now, and shall continue ready to receive any agent whom he, or any other influential person now resisting the national authority, may informally send to me, with the view of securing peace to the people of our one common country.

Yours, &c.,

A. LINCOLN.

F. P. BLAIR, Esq.

Afterwards Mr. Blair dictated for and authorized me to make an entry on the back of my retained copy of the letter last above recited, which entry is as follows:

JANUARY 28, 1865.

To-day Mr. Blair tells me that on the 21st instant he delivered to Mr. Davis the original, of which the within is a copy, and left it with him; that at the time of delivering it Mr. Davis read it over twice in Mr. Blair's presence, at the close of which he (Mr. Blair) remarked that the part about "our one common country" related to the part of Mr. Davis's letter about "the two countries," to which Mr. Davis replied that he so understood it.

A. LINCOLN.

Afterwards the Secretary of War placed in my hands the following telegram, indorsed by him as appears:

[Cipher.]

OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH,

The following telegram received at Washington, January 29, 1865, from headquarters army of James, 6.30 p. m., January 29, 1865:

"HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF POTOMAC,

"The following despatch is forwarded to you for your action. Since I have no knowledge of General Grant's having had any understanding of this kind, I refer the matter to you as the ranking officer present in the two armies.

"Major General E. O. C. ORD,

"FROM HEADQUARTERS NINTH ARMY CORPS, 29TH.

"Alex. H. Stevens, R. M. T. Hunter, and J. A. Campbell desire to cross my lines, in accordance with an understanding claimed to exist with Lieutenant General Grant, on their way to Washington as peace commissioners. Shall they be admitted? They desire an early answer, to come through immediately.

Would like to reach City Point to-night, if they can. If they cannot do this, they would like to come through at 10 a. m. to-morrow morning.

"O. B. WILCOX,

"Major General Commanding 9th Corps.

"Major General JNO. G. PARKE,

"Headquarters Army of Potomac."

Respectfully referred to the President for such instructions as he may be pleased to give.

EDWIN M. STANTON,

Secretary of War.

January 29—8.30 p. m.

It appears that about the time of placing the foregoing telegram in my hands, the Secretary of War despatched General Ord, as follows, to wit :

[Sent in cipher at 2 a. m., 30th.]

WAR DEPARTMENT,

Washington City, January 29, 1865—10 p. m.

SIR: This department has no knowledge of any understanding by General Grant to allow any person to come within his lines as commissioner of any sort. You will therefore allow no one to come into your lines under such character or profession, until you receive the President's instructions, to whom your telegram will be submitted for his directions.

EDWIN M. STANTON,

Secretary of War.

Major General ORD.

Afterwards, by my direction, the Secretary of War telegraphed General Ord as follows, to wit:

WAR DEPARTMENT,

Washington, D. C., 10.30 a. m., January 30, 1865.

SIR: By direction of the President, you are instructed to inform the three gentlemen, Messrs. Stephens, Hunter, and Campbell, that a messenger will be despatched to them at or near where they now are without unnecessary delay.

EDWIN M. STANTON,

Secretary of War.

Major General E. O. C. ORD,

Headquarters Army of the James.

Afterwards I prepared and put into the hands of Major Thomas T. Eckert the following instructions and message :

EXECUTIVE MANSION,

Washington, January 30, 1865.

SIR: You will proceed with the documents placed in your hands, and, on reaching General Ord, will deliver him the letter addressed to him by the Secretary of War; then, by General Ord's assistance, procure an interview with Messrs. Stephens, Hunter, and Campbell, or any of them. Deliver to him or them the paper on which your own letter is written. Note on the copy which you retain the time of delivery, and to whom delivered. Receive their answer in writing, waiting a reasonable time for it, and which, if it contain their decision to come through, without further condition, will be your warrant to ask General Ord to pass them through, as directed in the letter of the Secretary of War to him. If, by their answer, they decline to come, or propose other terms, do not have them passed through. And this being your whole duty, return and report to me.

Yours truly,

A. LINCOLN.

Major T. T. ECKERT.

Messrs. Alex. H. Stephens, J. A. Campbell, and R. M. T. Hunter:

GENTLEMEN: I am instructed by the President of the United States to place this paper in your hands, with the information that if you pass through the United States military lines, it will be understood that you do so for the purpose of an informal conference, on the basis of the letter, a copy of which is on the reverse side of this sheet, and that, if you choose to pass on such understanding, and so notify me in writing, I will procure the commanding general to pass you through the lines and to Fortress Monroe, under such military precautions as he may deem prudent, and at which place you will be met in due time by some person or persons, for the purpose of such informal conference; and, further, that you shall have protection, safe conduct, and safe return in all events.

THOMAS T. ECKERT,
Major and Aide-de-Camp.

CITY POINT, Va., February 1, 1865.

WASHINGTON, January 18, 1865.

SIR: Your having shown me Mr. Davis's letter to you of the 12th instant, you may say to him that I have constantly been, am now, and shall continue ready to receive any agent whom he, or any other influential person now resisting the national authority, may informally send to me, with the view of securing peace to the people of our one common country.

Yours, &c.,

A. LINCOLN.

F. P. BLAIR, Esq.

Afterwards, but before Major Eckert had departed, the following despatch was received from General Grant:

[Cipher.]

OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH,
War Department.

The following telegram received at Washington, January 31, 1865. From City Point, Va., 10.30 a. m., January 30, 1865.

His Excellency ABRAHAM LINCOLN,
President of the United States:

The following communication was received here last evening:

"PETERSBURG, Virginia, January 30, 1865.

"SIR: We desire to pass your lines under safe conduct, and to proceed to Washington, to hold a conference with President Lincoln upon the subject of the existing war, and with a view of ascertaining upon what terms it may be terminated, in pursuance of the course indicated by him in his letter to Mr. Blair of January 18, 1865, of which we presume you have a copy, and if not we wish to see you in person, if convenient, and to confer with you upon the subject.

"Very respectfully yours,

"ALEXANDER H. STEPHENS.

"J. A. CAMPBELL.

"R. M. T. HUNTER."

Lieutenant General U. S. GRANT,
Commanding Armies United States.

I have sent directions to receive these gentlemen, and expect to have them at my quarters this evening, awaiting your instructions.

U. S. GRANT,

Lieut. Gen'l Commanding Armies U. S.

This, it will be perceived, transferred General Ord's agency in the matter to General Grant. I resolved, however, to send Major Eckert forward with his message, and accordingly telegraphed General Grant as follows, to wit:

EXECUTIVE MANSION,

Washington, January 31, 1865.

Lieutenant General GRANT,
City Point, Va. :

A messenger is coming to you on the business contained in your despatch. Detain the gentlemen in comfortable quarters until he arrives, and then act upon the message he brings as far as applicable, it having been made up to pass through General Ord's hands, and when the gentlemen were supposed to be beyond our lines.

A. LINCOLN.

Sent in cipher at 1.30 p. m.

When Major Eckert departed, he bore with him a letter of the Secretary of War to General Grant, as follows, to wit:

WAR DEPARTMENT,

Washington, D. C., January 30, 1865.

GENERAL: The President desires that you will please procure for the bearer, Major Thomas T. Eckert, an interview with Messrs. Stephens, Hunter, and Campbell, and if, on his return to you, he request it, pass them through our lines to Fortress Monroe, by such route and under such military precautions as you may deem prudent, giving them protection and comfortable quarters while there, and that you let none of this have any effect upon your movements or plans.

By order of the President:

EDWIN M. STANTON.

Secretary of War.

Lieutenant General GRANT,
Commanding, &c.

Supposing the proper point to be then reached, I despatched the Secretary of State with the following instructions, Major Eckert, however, going ahead of him:

EXECUTIVE MANSION,

Washington, January 31, 1865.

You will proceed to Fortress Monro, Virginia, there to meet and informally confer with Messrs. Stephens, Hunter, and Campbell, on the basis of my letter to F. P. Blair, esq., of January 18, 1865, a copy of which you have.

You will make known to them that three things are indispensable, to wit:

1. The restoration of the national authority throughout all the States.
2. No receding, by the Executive of the United States, on the slavery question, from the position assumed thereon in the late annual message to Congress, and in preceding documents.
3. No cessation of hostilities short of an end of the war and the disbanding of all forces hostile to the government.

You will inform them that all propositions of theirs, not inconsistent with the above, will be considered and passed upon in a spirit of sincere liberality. You will hear all they may choose to say, and report it to me.

You will not assume to definitely consummate anything.

Yours, &c.,

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

Hon. WILLIAM H. SEWARD,
Secretary of State.

On the day of its date, the following telegram was sent to General Grant :

[Sent in cipher at 9.30 a. m.]

Lieut. Gen. GRANT, City Point, Va.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., February 1, 1865.

Let nothing which is transpiring change, hinder, or delay your military movements or plans.

A. LINCOLN.

Afterwards the following despatch was received from General Grant :

[In cipher.]

OFFICE U. S. MILITARY TELEGRAPH,
War Department.

The following telegram received at Washington 2.30 p. m. February 1, 1865, from City Point, Virginia, February 1, 12.30 p. m., 1865 :

Your despatch received. There will be no armistice in consequence of the presence of Mr. Stephens and others within our lines. The troops are kept in readiness to move at the shortest notice, if occasion should justify it.

U. S. GRANT, Lieut. General.

His Excellency A. LINCOLN,
President United States.

To notify Major Eckert that the Secretary of State would be at Fortress Monroe, and to put them in communication, the following despatch was sent :

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., February 1, 1865.

Call at Fortress Monroe, and put yourself under direction of Mr. S., whom you will find there.

A. LINCOLN.

Major T. T. ECKERT,
Care of General Grant, City Point, Va.

On the morning of the 2d instant, the following telegrams were received by me, respectively, from the Secretary of State and Major Eckert :

FORT MONROE, VA.,
11.30 p. m., February 1, 1865.

Arrived at ten this evening. Richmond party not here. I remain here.
WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

The President of the United States.

CITY POINT, VA.,
10 p. m., February 1, 1865.

His excellency A. LINCOLN, President of the United States:

I have the honor to report the delivery of your communication and my letter at 4.15 this afternoon, to which I received a reply at 6 p. m., but not satisfactory.

At 8 p. m. the following note, addressed to General Grant, was received:

CITY POINT, Va., February 1, 1865.

SIR: We desire to go to Washington city, to confer informally with the President, personally, in reference to the matters mentioned in his letter to Mr. Blair, of the 18th January, ultimo, without any personal compromise on any question in the letter. We have the permission to do so from the authorities in Richmond.

Very respectfully yours,

ALEX. H. STEPHENS.
R. M. T. HUNTER.
J. A. CAMPBELL.

Lieutenant General GRANT.

At 9.30 p. m., I notified them that they could not proceed further, unless they complied with the terms expressed in my letter. The point of meeting designated in the above note would not, in my opinion, be insisted upon. I think Fort Monroe would be acceptable. Having complied with my instructions, I will return to Washington to-morrow, unless otherwise ordered.

THOS. T. ECKERT,
Major, &c.

On reading this despatch of Major Eckert, I was about to recall him and the Secretary of State, when the following telegram of General Grant to the Secretary of War was shown me:

[In cipher.]

OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH,
War Department.

The following telegram received at Washington 4.35 a. m., February 2, 1865.
From City Point, Va., February 1, 10.30 p. m., 1865.

Now that the interview between Major Eckert, under his written instructions, and Mr. Stephens and party has ended, I will state confidentially, but not officially, to become a matter of record, that I am convinced, upon conversation with Messrs. Stephens and Hunter, that their intentions are good and their desire sincere to restore peace and union. I have not felt myself at liberty to express even views of my own, or to account for my reticency. This has placed me in an awkward position, which I could have avoided by not seeing them in the first instance. I fear now their going back without any expression from any one in authority will have a bad influence. At the same time I recognize the difficulties in the way of receiving these informal commissioners at this time, and do not know what to recommend. I am sorry, however, that Mr. Lincoln cannot have an interview with the two named in this despatch, if not all three now within our lines. Their letter to me was all that the President's instructions contemplated to secure their safe conduct, if they had used the same language to Major Eckert.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant General.

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

This despatch of General Grant changed my purpose; and accordingly I telegraphed him and the Secretary of State respectively as follows :

[Sent in cipher at 9 a. m.]

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., February 2, 1865.

Lieut. Gen. GRANT, City Point, Virginia :

Say to the gentlemen I will meet them personally at Fortress Monroe as soon as I can get there.

A. LINCOLN.

[Sent in cipher at 9 a. m.]

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., February 2, 1865.

Hon. WM. H. SEWARD, Fortress Monroe, Virginia :

Induced by a despatch from General Grant, I join you at Fort Monroe as soon as I can come.

A. LINCOLN.

Before starting the following despatch was shown me. I proceeded, nevertheless :

[Cipher.]

OFFICE U. S. MILITARY TELEGRAPH,
War Department.

The following telegram, received at Washington, February 2, 1865, from City Point, Virginia, 9 a. m., February 2, 1865 :

[Copy to Hon. Edwin M. Stanton, Secretary of War, Washington.]

Hon. WM. H. SEWARD, Secretary of State, Fort Monroe :

The gentlemen here have accepted the proposed terms, and will leave for Fort Monroe at 9.30 a. m.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant General.

On the night of the 2d I reached Hampton Roads, found the Secretary of State and Major Eckert on a steamer anchored off shore, and learned of them that the Richmond gentlemen were on another steamer also anchored off shore, in the roads, and that the Secretary of State had not yet seen or communicated with them. I ascertained that Major Eckert had literally complied with his instructions, and I saw, for the first time, the answer of the Richmond gentlemen to him, which, in his despatch to me of the 1st, he characterizes as "not satisfactory." That answer is as follows, to wit :

CITY POINT,
Virginia, February 1, 1865.

MAJOR: Your note, delivered by yourself this day, has been considered. In reply, we have to say that we were furnished with a copy of the letter of President Lincoln to Francis P. Blair, esq., of the 18th of January ultimo, another copy of which is appended to your note.

In authorizing and directing the appointment of this commission, Congress made no provision for its expenses. These expenses, as appears from the bill submitted by the senior officer of the commission herewith enclosed, amounted to two thousand five hundred and ninety dollars, ($2,590,) and I have the honor to recommend that that sum be appropriated to cover these expenses.

Very respectfully, &c.,

meet any person or persons that President Lincoln may appoint, at such place as he may designate.

Our earnest desire is, that a just and honorable peace may be agreed upon, and we are prepared to receive or to submit propositions which may, possibly, lead to the attainment of that end.

Very respectfully yours,

ALEXANDER H. STEPHENS.
R. M. T. HUNTER.
JOHN A. CAMPBELL.

THOMAS T. ECKERT,
Major, and A. D. C.

A note of these gentlemen, subsequently addressed to General Grant, has already been given in Major Eckert's despatch of the 1st instant.

I also here saw, for the first time, the following note, addressed by the Richmond gentlemen to Major Eckert:

CITY POINT, Va., February 2, 1865.

MAJOR: In reply to your verbal statement, that your instructions did not allow you to alter the conditions upon which a passport could be given to us, we say that we are willing to proceed to Fortress Monroe, and there to have an informal conference, with any person or persons that President Lincoln may appoint, on the basis of his letter to Francis P. Blair of the 18th of January ultimo, or upon any other terms or conditions that he may hereafter propose, not inconsistent with the essential principles of self-government and popular rights upon which our institutions are founded.

It is our earnest wish to ascertain, after a free interchange of ideas and information, upon what principles and terms, if any, a just and honorable peace can be established without the further effusion of blood, and to contribute our utmost efforts to accomplish such a result.

We think it better to add, that, in accepting your passport we are not to be understood as committing ourselves to anything, but to carry to this informal conference the views and feelings above expressed.

Very respectfully yours, &c ,

ALEXANDER H. STEPHENS.
J. A. CAMPBELL.
R. M. T. HUNTER.

THOMAS T. ECKERT,
Major, and A. D. C.

NOTE.—The above communication was delivered to me at Fort Monroe, at 4.30 p. m., February 2d, by Lieutenant Colonel Babcock, of General Grant's staff.

THOS. T. ECKERT, Major, and A. D. C.

On the morning of the 3d, the three gentlemen, Messrs. Stephens, Hunter, and Campbell, came aboard of our steamer, and had an interview with the Secretary of State and myself, of several hours' duration. No question of preliminaries to the meeting was then and there made or mentioned. No other person was present; no papers were exchanged or produced; and it was, in advance, agreed that the conversation was to be informal and verbal merely. On our part, the whole substance of the instructions to the Secretary of State, hereinbefore recited, was stated and insisted upon, and nothing was said inconsistent therewith; while, by the other party, it was not said that in any event or on any condition they ever would consent to reunion; and yet they equally omitted to declare that they never would so consent. They seemed to desire a postponement of that question, and the adoption of some other course first, which, as some of them seemed to argue, might or might not lead to reunion; but which course, we thought, would amount to an indefinite postponement. The conference ended without result.

The foregoing, containing, as is believed, all the information sought, is respectfully submitted.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, February 10, 1865.

Mr. Seward to Mr. Adams.

No. 1258.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 7, 1865.

SIR: It is a truism, that in times of peace there are always instigators of war. So soon as a war begins there are citizens who impatiently demand negotiations for peace. The advocates of war, after an agitation, longer or shorter, generally gain their fearful end, though the war declared is not unfrequently unnecessary and unwise. So peace agitators in time of war ultimately bring about an abandonment of the conflict, sometimes without securing the advantages which were originally expected from the conflict.

The agitators for war in time of peace, and for peace in time of war, are not necessarily, or perhaps ordinarily, unpatriotic in their purposes or motives. Results alone determine whether they are wise or unwise. The treaty of peace concluded at Guadalupe Hidalgo was secured by an irregular negotiator, under the ban of the government. Some of the efforts which have been made to bring about negotiations with a view to end our civil war are known to the whole world, because they have employed foreign as well as domestic agents. Others, with whom you have had to deal confidentially, are known to yourself, although they have not publicly transpired. Other efforts have occurred here which are known only to the persons actually moving in them and to this government. I am now to give, for your information, an account of an affair, of the same general character, which recently received much attention here, and which, doubtless, will excite inquiry abroad.

A few days ago Francis P. Blair, esq., of Maryland, obtained from the President a simple leave to pass through our military lines, without definite views known to the government. Mr. Blair visited Richmond, and on his return he showed to the President a letter which Jefferson Davis had written to Mr. Blair, in which Davis wrote that Mr. Blair was at liberty to say to President Lincoln that Davis was now, as he always had been, willing to send commissioners, if assured they would be received, or to receive any that should be sent; that he was not disposed to find obstacles in forms. He would send commissioners to confer with the President, with a view to a restoration of peace between the two countries, if he could be assured they would be received. The President thereupon, on the 18th of January, addressed a note to Mr. Blair, in which the President, after acknowledging that he had read the note of Mr. Davis, said that he was, is, and always should be willing to receive any agents that Mr. Davis or any other influential person now actually resisting the authority of the government might send to confer informally with the President, with a view to the restoration of peace to the people of our one common country. Mr. Blair visited Richmond with this letter, and then again came back to Washington. On the 29th instant we were advised from the camp of Lieutenant General Grant that Alexander H. Stephens, R. M. T. Hunter, and John A. Campbell were applying for leave to pass through the lines to Washington, as peace commissioners, to confer with the President. They were permitted by the Lieutenant General to come to his headquarters, to await there the decision of the President. Major Eckert was sent down to meet the party from Richmond at General Grant's headquarters. The major was directed to deliver to them a copy of the President's letter to Mr. Blair, with a note to be addressed to them, and signed by the major, in which they were directly informed that if they should be allowed to pass our lines they would be understood as coming for an informal conference, upon the basis of the aforementioned letter of the 18th of January to Mr. Blair. If they should express their assent to this condition in writing, then Major Eckert was directed to give them safe conduct to Fortress Monroe, where a person coming from the President would meet them. It being thought probable, from a report of their conversation with Lieutenant General Grant, that the Richmond party would, in the manner prescribed, accept the condition mentioned, the Secretary of State was charged by the President with the duty of representing this government in the expected informal conference. The Secretary arrived at Fortress Monroe in the night of the first day of February. Major Eckert met him on the morning of the second of February with the information that the persons who had come from Richmond had not accepted, in writing, the condition upon which he was allowed to give them conduct to Fortress Monroe. The major had given the same information by telegraph to the President, at Washington. On receiving this information, the President prepared a telegram directing the Secretary to return to Washington. The Secretary was preparing, at the same moment, to so return, without waiting for instructions from the President; but at this juncture Lieutenant General Grant telegraphed to the Secretary of War, as well as to the Secretary of State, that the party from Richmond had reconsidered and accepted the conditions tendered them through Major Eckert, and General Grant urgently advised the President to confer in person with the Richmond party. Under these circumstances, the Secretary, by the President's direction, remained at Fortress Monroe, and the President joined him there on the night of the 2d of February. The Richmond party was brought down the James river in a United States steam transport during the day, and the transport was anchored in Hampton Roads.

On the morning of the 3d the President, attended by the Secretary, received Messrs. Stephens, Hunter, and Campbell on board the United States steam transport River Queen, in Hampton Roads. The conference was altogether informal. There was no attendance of secretaries, clerks, or other witnesses. Nothing was written or read. The conversation, although earnest and free, was calm, and courteous, and kind on both sides. The Richmond party approached the discussion rather indirectly, and at no time did they either make categorical demands, or tender formal stipulations, or absolute refusals. Nevertheless, during the conference, which lasted four hours, the several points at issue between the government and the insurgents were distinctly raised, and discussed fully, intelligently, and in an amicable spirit. What the insurgent party seemed chiefly to favor was a postponement of the question of separation, upon which the war is waged, and a mutual direction of efforts of the government, as well as those of the insurgents, to some extrinsic policy or scheme for a season, during which passions might be expected to subside, and the armies be reduced, and trade and intercourse between the people of both sections resumed. It was suggested by them that through such postponement we might now have immediate peace, with some not very certain prospect of an ultimate satisfactory adjustment of political relations between this government and the States, section, or people now engaged in conflict with it.

This suggestion, though deliberately considered, was nevertheless regarded by the President as one of armistice or truce, and he announced that we can agree to no cessation or suspension of hostilities, except on the basis of the disbandment of the insurgent forces, and the restoration of the national authority throughout all the States in the Union. Collaterally, and in subordination to the proposition which was thus announced, the anti-slavery policy of the United States was reviewed in all its bearings, and the President announced that he must not be expected to depart from the positions he had heretofore assumed in his proclamation of emancipation and other documents, as these positions were reiterated in his last annual message. It was further declared by the President that the complete restoration of the national authority everywhere was an indispensable condition of any assent on our part to whatever form of peace might be proposed. The President assured the other party that, while he must adhere to these positions, he would be prepared, so far as power is lodged with the Executive, to exercise liberality. His power, however, is limited by the Constitution; and when peace should be made, Congress must necessarily act in regard to appropriations of money and to the admission of representatives from the insurrectionary States. The Richmond party were then informed that Congress had, on the 31st ultimo, adopted by a constitutional majority a joint resolution submitting to the several States the proposition to abolish slavery throughout the Union, and that there is every reason to expect that it will be soon accepted by three-fourths of the States, so as to become a part of the national organic law.

The conference came to an end by mutual acquiescence, without producing an agreement of views upon the several matters discussed, or any of them. Nevertheless, it is perhaps of some importance that we have been able to submit our opinions and views directly to prominent insurgents, and to hear them in answer in a courteous and not unfriendly manner.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

ESTIMATES FOR THE INDIANS OF THE SOUTHERN SUPER-INTENDENCY.

LETTER

FROM THE

SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR,

TRANSMITTING

Estimates for appropriations for the support of the Indians of the Southern Superintendency for the 1st and 2d quarters of 1865, and the fiscal year ending June 30, 1866.

FEBRUARY 10, 1865. — Referred to the Committee of Ways and Means and ordered to be printed

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C., February 10, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to submit, and to solicit the favorable consideration of Congress thereon, the estimates of the superintendent of the southern superintendency for the 1st and 2d quarters of 1865, and for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1866.

It is known to Congress that, by its direction, the refugee Indians were returned to their own country, anticipating that they could be maintained there at less expense than in Kansas, where they were fugitives. The lateness of the season when the appropriations were made, and the insurmountable delays attending their removal, rendered it impossible for the Indians to make sufficient crops to sustain themselves the current year. Something will have to be supplied them for that purpose, and clothing for them is indispensable.

An effort is now being made to disband all or a portion of the Indian troops. If this is done, and the country is protected, much less will be required to aid them; again, if, by any means, the Choctaws, Chickasaws, and Seminoles can be induced to lay down their arms, of which there is hope, the condition of the Indians will be improved. I am persuaded that it will be wise to make the appropriation asked. It is quite possible that—with it in the control of the department—it may be made available in bringing about peace with these Indians now in hostility.

If, by any means, it can be done with the appropriation now asked, it will be economy. There is neither credit nor honor in fighting Indians.

The whole matter is submitted to the wisdom of Congress.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. P. USHER, Secretary,

Hon. SCHUYLER COLFAX,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 19, 1865.

SIR : Herewith I have the honor to submit for your consideration my estimate for funds necessary for subsistence, clothing, and current expenses, for the second quarter of 1865.

You will observe that in my estimate for the first quarter of the present year there is the sum of $32,000 for seed, agricultural implements, &c., but none for clothing, while for the second quarter I have estimated for clothing at $10 per head, which in view of the present high prices is very low, particularly as nearly all the Indians will want raiment to a more or less extent.

The estimate for subsistence is also very low, amounting in the aggregate to $207,025, while to furnish them with even one half the army ration at the cost of provisions now, and transportation of the same, would have swelled the amount three or four fold. In making this low estimate, I have indulged in the hope, that with the necessary military protection, the Indians will be able to procure a large part, or perhaps all the meat they may require, in their own country. Should, however, this hopeful expectation not be realized, a much larger sum than that estimated for will be required, or very great suffering, to the extent of actual starvation, will be the consequence.

When it is considered that the country of the Indians in question has been alternately devastated by the enemy and occupied by our own troops, with the necessities of actual hostilities upon them, it will be readily conceded that they stand in the greatest need for all aid that a provident government can afford.

I would further remark in this connexion with my annual estimate for the year 1865-6, that should the funds asked for in my estimate for the first quarter of 1865 be furnished at once, so that the Indians can be supplied with seeds and farming implements to enable them to put in a crop in time, and should they have military protection while they cultivate the same, (what they have not yet had,) all that part of the annual estimate for subsistence, after August or September, may be dispensed with, otherwise it will only be sufficient to prevent actual starvation, as they will be (without the protection named) cooped up within range of guns of Fort Gibson, as they are at this time.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. G. COFFIN,
Superintendent Indian Affairs.

Commissioner of Indian Affairs, Washington, D. C.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
Washington, January 24, 1865.

SIR: In compliance with your request, I have the honor herewith to transmit a statement showing the names of the clerks and other persons employed in this office during the year 1864, the time each was employed, the amount paid to each, and the residence of each one at the time of appointment.

The business of the office has increased rapidly during the year, and scarcely at any time was there a sufficient number of persons employed to transact the business with the despatch which the public interest required. The number at present employed cannot be reduced without detriment to the public service; and if the business of the office continues to increase as it has done during the past six months, there must either be a considerable addition to the force now employed, or some of the employes should be exchanged for persons of higher qualifications.

Though it may be truly said that all the employes have been usefully employed, I think it proper to add, that while there is room for a certain number of clerks of ordinary capacity and fitness, the work generally is different from that needed to be done in any other bureau of the department, and demands capacity and attainments considerably above the average. I doubt not, therefore, that some who are not well qualified for service here might be serviceable in other bureaus. This explanation seems to me to be more proper than a mere categorical answer to the question, whether the clerks are all usefully employed. They are all fully occupied, and they are as usefully employed as, with their attainments, they are capable of being.

Your obedient servant,

JOSEPH J. LEWIS,
Commissioner.

Hon. WM. P. FESSENDEN,
Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, SOLICITOR'S OFFICE,
January 3, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor herewith to transmit a statement showing the names of the clerks and other persons employed in this office, during the year 1864, the time each of them was so employed, the amount of compensation paid them, and the place of their residence at the time they were severally appointed, prepared in pursuance of the 11th section of the act approved August 26, 1842, and the resolution of the House of Representatives of January 13, 1846.

PRINTING BUREAU OF THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

LETTER

FROM THE

SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY,

TRANSMITTING

Additional papers relative to the printing division of the Currency Bureau of the Treasury Department.

FEBRUARY 13, 1865.—Laid on the table and ordered to be printed.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, February 11, 1865.

SIR: On the 4th instant I transmitted to you certain reports and other papers, in accordance with a resolution of the House of Representatives, dated January 24, 1865, calling for information concerning the printing bureau of this department.

I have now the honor to transmit additional papers, completing the information desired.

I am, very respectfully,

W. P. FESSENDEN,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. SCHUYLER COLFAX,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., February 7, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith copies of the several reports made by me to the Secretary of the Treasury, relating to the printing division, currency bureau.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. A. RISLEY,
Superintendent, Special Agent, &c.

Hon. W. P. FESSENDEN,
Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,

Washington, May 5, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 5th instant, directing me to proceed at once to the rooms of the first division of the National Currency Bureau and take a general oversight of all the business transactions in them, and to report that I immediately entered upon the discharge of the duty assigned me.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. A. RISLEY,

Superintendent, Special Agent, &c.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,

Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,

Washington, May 7, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to report that during the two days' supervision of the affairs of this bureau, under your instructions of the 5th instant, I have been mostly engaged in acquainting myself with the laws under which the bureau has been organized, the localities of the rooms and the machinery, the organization of the labor, and the manner generally in which the business is conducted. My inquiries have been interrupted somewhat by attendance upon the congressional committee.

The chief of division, Mr. Clark, met me very kindly, and has devoted all the time he could spare from necessary attention to current business to giving me information and making me acquainted with employes and the order of business, and has afforded me every desired facility to enable me to comprehend and discharge the duty assigned me.

At this early period of my supervision, of course I can only give you first impressions.

I am greatly surprised with the extent of the work and business carried on in the division, am gratified with the appearance of system and order and good discipline in all the rooms, and with the general appearance and conduct of the employes.

I hope to be able in a short time to form a judgment upon the whole system, and upon the provision made for security against frauds and loss, and will, with your leave, make frequent communication to you on the subject.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. A. RISLEY,

Sup't, Special Agent Second Agency.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,

*Secretary of the Treasury.*TREASURY DEPARTMENT, May 10, 1864.

SIR: In answer to your inquiry as to the cost of fractional currency per thousand sheets, I have to report that the denominations of 5's and 10's cost, per thousand sheets, $19 37½; the denominations of 25's and 50's cost, per thousand sheets, $21 37½—the difference being in the cost of the ink and labor. The larger denominations are printed with more expensive colors, but less labor, as there are a less number of subjects on a plate.

A sheet in this estimate is not a full-sized sheet of bank-note or membrane paper, but a sheet of twenty-five subjects of 5's or 10's, and twenty subjects of 25's or 50's.

The cost in each case is made up as follows:

Twenty-five subjects of 5's or 10's: Paper, $5; bronze, $1 37½; ink, $2; labor, $10; blanket, 50 cents; rags, 50 cents—$19 37½.

Twenty subjects of 25's or 50's: Paper, $5; bronze, $1 37½; ink, $6; labor, $8; blanket, 50 cents; rags, 50 cents—$21 37½.

There is no estimate for engraving or depreciation of machinery, as these items are unappreciable.

Yours, respectfully,

H. A. RISLEY,
Superintendent, Special Agent, &c.

HON. GEORGE HARRINGTON,
Assistant Secretary, &c.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, May 10, 1864.

SIR: Supposing from your inquiries you are instituting a comparison between the expense of preparing the fractional currency in the department and its cost previously, I desire to make two or three suggestions:

1. The subjects (i. e., number of stamps or notes) printed on each plate in New York were less in number than are printed in the department. The 5's and 10's printed in New York had twenty subjects on a sheet; here we print twenty-five subjects on a sheet. In New York they printed of 25's and 50's sixteen subjects on a sheet; here we print twenty subjects on a sheet—the size of the sheet being the same at both places. So of the larger denominations we get four more impressions on a sheet, and of the smaller denominations we get five more impressions on a sheet than were given in New York.

2. The printing in New York was less perfect and less expensive. The sheets only went through the press twice; now they are printed four times, making the currency much better and more difficult to counterfeit.

3. No bronze was used in New York.

4. It cost to print in New York $55 75 for one thousand sheets of say 5's and 10's. This one thousand sheets would give twenty thousand impressions or stamps, (i. e., twenty subjects on a plate sheet.) It costs to print one thousand sheets in the department, of same denominations, $19 37½, and you will have twenty-five thousand stamps or notes, (i. e., twenty-five subjects on a plate.)

It follows that the printing of fractional currency in the department costs about one-quarter the cost of printing previously, and that a more perfect currency, better guarded against counterfeiting, and more durable, is produced.

Yours, respectfully,

H. A. RISLEY,
Superintendent, Special Agent, &c.

HON. GEORGE HARRINGTON,
Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, May 11, 1864.

SIR: My attention has been so far mostly directed to the examination of the system of checks and balances to prevent over-printing and issuing of the various denominations of money and securities made in this division. The responsibility resting on the chief is very great, and all the safeguards human ingenuity can devise should be applied.

You are familiar with the practical operations from the time the blank paper comes in bulk into the division, is counted out in packages of a thousand sheets to the superintendent of the counting-room, by her again counted and delivered to the bronzer, by him bronzed and returned to the superintendent of counting-room, by her counted again and delivered to the superintendent of plate-printing, and so through the hands of the various superintendents until all the work is finished and the money or securities delivered in a complete state to the Treasurer, and you are aware that in every instance of transfer from one superintendent to another, from the time anything is done with or to the paper, a receipt is given by the one receiving it to the one delivering it, in a printed book kept as a record, and each one is held responsible for all paper receipted for until the receipt is cancelled; and at the close of each day each superintendent makes report in a printed form to the chief of division, stating all transactions and work in his or her room for the day; and at night (or close of the last work, 11 p. m.,) all the paper on which any work has been done, in its various conditions of bronzing, printing, trimming, &c., is deposited in the vault and doubly locked, the chief keeping one key and his assistant the other. The assistant being in charge of the vault room makes report to the chief of division daily of what has been received in and delivered from the vault.

The system seems to me well devised. The plan and form of receipts and report and records are simple and comprehensive. I am unable so far to suggest any improvement. If the system is faithfully carried out I believe all interests will be safe. I see no reason to doubt but that it is carried out with fidelity, so far as the chief is able to carry it out. His labors are very great and unremitting from about eight o'clock in the morning until past midnight. The necessary supervision of so much machinery and so many branches of labor leaves him but little time to make such full and careful examination and comparison of reports of superintendents as is desirable. These reports exhibit or should exhibit every night the quantity and condition of the various denominations of money and securities in the division; and the entire time of one competent man can be well employed in examining, comparing, and verifying these reports, tracing, correcting errors and inconsistencies, if any, and keeping a record of results. There are some twenty-five of these daily reports. They should contain precise information of every transaction affecting the money or securities in process of preparation, and should be carefully examined.

The manner of storing and delivering the blank paper has been commented on as objectionable, and it is suggested, or has been suggested, that there should be a separate depository and accountability for it. This will be proper and add to the security when some distinctive kind of paper shall be used, and only used, by the government. But I do not see much advantage in it now while using paper that is in common use, and that can be easily purchased in market; as, if there were a disposition and purpose to defraud, the paper could, and probably would, be obtained elsewhere than from the government stock.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. A. RISLEY,

Sup't, Special Agent, &c., Second Agency.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,
Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, May 11, 1864.

SIR: In my letter of the 9th instant, answering your several inquiries relating to the cost of the fractional currency, &c., I stated the whole number of sheets used at 626,600½, meaning full sheets of bank-note paper. In printing the fractional currency, these sheets are divided, and the impression from the plate is made on a half sheet, and these impressions are called sheets. So in my letter of the 10th, estimating the cost per thousand sheets of fractional currency, I say that the sheets entering into the estimate are not whole sheets of bank-note paper, "but sheets of 25 subjects of 5's and 10's, or 20 subjects of 25's or 50's;" or, in other words, half sheets.

Yours, very respectfully,

H. A. RISLEY,
Superintendent, Special Agent, &c.

Hon. GEORGE HARRINGTON,
Assistant Secretary, &c.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, May 14, 1864.

SIR: Since my last report my attention has been mostly directed to the examination of the correspondence and acquainting myself with the practice under which the purchase of machinery and materials have heretofore been made in this division, to determine in my own mind whether the public interest has been, and is, sufficiently guarded.

In the organization of the division, to provide for pressing wants of the government in the briefest possible period, it was not practicable to mature at once and put into operation a perfect system in all respects. Machinery has been procured and set in motion often, and materials bought and worked up, in an incredibly short period of time, and there could not be the system of advertising for proposals generally adopted in purchasing for government use.

It is hardly practicable now to provide general regulations under which machinery and materials can be procured. Much of the machinery is new, and, in some measure, of an experimental character; the quality and quantity of stock is often undetermined until the last moment; so but little time is left for obtaining, in any public way, competing bids.

But from examination of the correspondence of the chief, I learn that in purchasing machinery and materials he has invited and received propositions from leading houses, and taken all the pains to make good bargains a thorough business man would take in like purchases for his own establishment; that by taking advantage of the rivalry between different establishments he has often made excellent bargains. I am satisfied the machinery in the division is of the best character, well adapted to the purpose intended—some of it, designed by the chief himself, of great value—all of it carefully managed and kept in good condition, and I see no reason to doubt but that the expenditure in the division has been made with fidelity and economy and strict regard for the public interest.

The division is now thoroughly organized and supplied. It is, in my judgment, practicable and proper that some regulations be adopted for more careful supervision of the purchase of machinery and materials; and I respectfully suggest in the future, purchases exceeding say $500 or $1,000 in value be made only on the order of the chief of division, approved by the Secretary of the Treasury or some officer designated by him, and that in all cases proposals be invited from three or more of the leading houses in the country, and that the order be given to the house proposing the best terms, all things being considered.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. A. RISLEY,
Superintendent, Special Agent, &c.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,
Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, May 21, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to report since the date of my last communication my time has been mostly devoted to the current business of the division, attendance upon visitors, examinations and reports called for by the Assistant Secretary, from time to time, and to examination of the correspondence between the division and other parties relating to all past transactions.

As I become better acquainted with the routine of business in the division, and the character of those employed, from the chief down, the amount of work done, and the promptness with which the requirements of the government have been met, I can better appreciate the necessity for the establishment, the skill, ability, and, I believe, fidelity, with which it has been conducted, and I am growing more and more confident that the most thorough scrutiny into the management of affairs will disclose nothing to bring reproach upon the department.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. A. RISLEY,

Superintendent, Special Agent, &c.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,

Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,

Washington, May 21, 1864.

SIR: In reply to your note of the 20th instant, I have the honor to transmit herewith a tabular statement of the number of impressions of the fractional currency of different denominations, with the face value of each, printed in this division up to this date; also, the number of impressions of the coupon bonds, with their face value; also of registered bonds, with face value; also of coupon treasury notes, with their face value; also of treasury notes without coupons, with face value; also of certificates of indebtedness, with face value, these being all the different forms of obligations of United States prepared and printed in this division.

I also transmit a like statement of the impressions of legal-tender notes, bonds, and national bank currency prepared and printed elsewhere, but counted, stamped, trimmed, and separated in this division.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. A. RISLEY,

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, May 25, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to report that I have been engaged mostly since the date of my last communication in examining accounts and making statements for the Assistant Secretary, and giving information called for by the special committee of the House of Representatives.

The error in printing the thousand-dollar coupons of the ten-forty loan, reported to you by the Register May 21, is being carefully examined into. It is believed that about two thousand seven hundred erroneous impressions were issued before the error was discovered and corrected. Mr. Clark, chief of division, is making thorough inquiry, and will soon be able to report just how and through whom the error occurred and was concealed until the discovery by the Register.

Nothing occurs to me for special comment at this time.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

H. A. RISLEY,
Superintendent, Special Agent, &c.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,
Secretary of the Treasury.

SIR: I have the honor to report that I am engaged assisting Assistant Secretary Harrington in preparing the new proposed checks and balances for prevention of fraud and loss in this division, which he will very soon submit for your consideration, and that I have no special communication to make at this time.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, July 23, 1864.

In the matter of the ownership of the plates of the 7 3-10 interest notes.

Papers:

1. Letter of John E. Garit, vice-president of the American Bank Note Company, to the Secretary of the Treasury, dated July 20, 1864, containing a copy of proposition, dated July 29, 1861, for furnishing treasury notes, claimed by government to have been accepted, and to be the contract under which work has been done by the company for the department.

2. Account of the American Bank Note Company of November 2, 1861, for demand notes, $41,950 65; same of November 16, 1861, for engraving and printing 7 3-10 interest notes, $14,711 10.

3. Letter of F. W. Edmonds, dated January 10, 1862, enclosing accounts of American Bank Note Company for engraving and printing 7 3-10 interest notes, $5,455 31; printing demand notes, $43,723 80.

4. Account of American Bank Note Company for printing demand notes, $34,386 20; printing 7 3-10 interest notes, $5,589 33.

5. Account February 23, 1862, for printing demand notes, $22,575 80; ditto for engraving and printing 7 3-10 interest notes, dated October 1, 1861, $1,588 30.

6. Letter of F. W. Edmonds, secretary, July 29, 1862, enclosing three accounts, viz:

1. Account May 20, 1862, engraving and printing certificates clearing-house	$706 19
2. Account July 9, 1862, engraving and printing certificates of temporary loan	564 63
3. Engraving new set plates, &c., interest notes	4, 321 36
	<hr/>
	5, 592 18
	<hr/>

The foregoing are all the papers referred to me, and are said to be all there are in the department relating to the contract with the American Bank Note Company.

The contract set forth in Mr. Garit's letter (see paper No. 1) does not correspond with the accounts stated by the company for work done; and yet the accounts are certified by Mr. Cisco, the agent of the department, to be in accordance with the contract. In the last account are charges for clearing-house certificates and certificates of temporary loans, instruments not mentioned in the proposition or contract. The proposition is for furnishing treasury notes of specified denominations, including engraving, paper, and three printings—a specified sum for a specified amount of each denomination. In the accounts separate charges are made for engraving, retouching plates, and printing. There is no charge for paper.

I assume that the proposition of the bank note company was modified and varied by parole, and that the accounts stated on one side and paid on the other are the best evidence of the contract under which the work was done.

These accounts being evidence of the agreement between the parties, I do not see how the department are to avoid the effect of the printed notice on the head of the accounts, "All other plates having bank-note work on them, engraved by us only on the express condition that they are never to be taken out of our possession."

1. The printed part of the account is not inconsistent with the part in writing.

2. The printed note or notice is not in the nature of notices common carriers sometimes give to limit their liabilities, like "baggage at the risk of owners," when the law, for public policy, imposes obligations on carriers they cannot escape or defeat by notice, but it is a stipulation or condition the party had a right to make, and, considering the nature of their occupation, not an improper one to make. The authorized agent of the department certified the accounts (meaning all the statements made) as in accordance with the contract made between the parties. The department adopted the whole transaction by payment of the account, and are, in my judgment, concluded from claiming possession of the plates under the contract.

It can be said, in opposition to this view, that the possession follows the ownership; that the engraving of the plates was charged in account and paid for by the department, who thereby became entitled to the possession.

But the account, as stated, does not quite sustain this view. The charge is for engraving. The plates are not engraved. It is the common understanding, and perhaps the common language that would ordinarily be used to say that they are engraved. But the engraving is, in fact, upon pieces of steel, called bed-pieces, consisting of the border, vignette, &c., which are taken up on a roller, and then rolled upon the plate by a process called transferring. No part of the plate is engraved except the scrip, flourishes, and minor details.

The account was made by a bank note company, who were familiar with these matters, and would be held to an accurate use of the language of their trade or occupation. The work of engraving all the stock used in making up a plate would occupy several months, and be of much greater value than the sum charged in the account. The work of transferring the engraving on bed-pieces to a plate of the size of the 7 3-10 interest notes would occupy a man and machine more than a day, and a plate thus made would not be worth anything like the sum charged by the company for engraving. If any title or right of possession passed to the department under the contract, it would be the stock itself, and not the plates.

But it seems more consistent with the whole transaction to suppose that the company, in estimating at what price they could afford to print a given number of impressions, took into account a part of the cost of engraving the stock.

They did not take into account the whole cost, for they expected to retain possession and use it in other combinations.

Unless there are other facts which I have been unable from inquiry or examination of correspondence to ascertain, the right of the department to the possession of the 7 3-10 plates is at least doubtful, and not so clear as to justify summary proceedings to recover possession.

It remains to consider the effect of the twelfth section of the "Act to provide ways and means," &c., approved July 20, 1864.

Congress probably have power to pass a law impairing contracts. The Constitution does not deny such power, as do the constitutions of several States. The English Parliament have abrogated charters and repealed grants, thereby impairing contracts with judicial sanction; and I believe such a power exists in our national legislature.

But an act of Congress abridging private rights or impairing contracts will be literally construed; the language of the law must be explicit—nothing left to implication. As a question of legal ethics, such legislation is considered vicious, and founded only on some pressing public necessity or advantage.

The proviso to the twelfth section was founded upon a question of the power of Congress to deny to private owners the possession of their property; and so parties owning dies, plates, &c., which had been used in printing bank notes before they were used in printing government securities, were allowed to retain them. It is made a felony for persons to retain in possession, &c., without consent of the Secretary, &c., plates, dies, &c., first and only used in printing government securities.

Now, if, as I have assumed, the department was under a contract with the bank note company for the possession of the 7 3-10 plates by the company, nothing in the twelfth section will be construed as impairing or annulling that contract. No such intention is expressed, and none can be inferred.

So I do not see how possession of the 7 3-10 plates can be obtained under this act.

If the department own the plates, there is no legal process in New York by which the possession can be obtained. In the action of replevin, the department can always retain possession of the property by giving security. Possession must, if at all, be recovered by force. A person owning property has always the legal right to take possession of it, and of course government has the same right. The only objection to a person employing force to recover his property wrongfully held is that it tends to a breach of the peace. If a file of soldiers go to the rooms of the bank note company and take these plates, no such consequence would follow; and I would recommend this course, could I bring myself to believe that the department absolutely own the plates.

Respectfully yours,

H. A. RISLEY,
Superintendent, Special Agent, &c.

Hon. W. P. FESSENDEN,
Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 5, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to suggest for the Secretary's consideration the following business details for the payment of 5-20 bonds to such officers and soldiers as may elect to receive them in lieu of legal-tender notes:

1st. To prepare books, like check or draft books, of engraved certificates and receipts, with suitable margins, three blanks upon each leaf. The first blank on the page to be the original of a bond certificate of $50, (or of $100;) the second to be its duplicate, and the third to be a receipt for the original.

Bond certificate.—The bond certificate, with appropriate vignettes, to be substantially as follows:

No. _____ Treasury Department,
Fifty Dollars. _____, 186 .

This certificate entitles John Jones, private company K, 89th regiment New York volunteers, to one coupon bond, bearing six per cent. interest from and after _____, 186 , redeemable after (5) five and payable in (20) years, of the denomination of fifty dollars. Such a bond will be delivered to the holder of this certificate upon its presentation and surrender to the Register of the Treasury, countersigned by _____, and properly indorsed.

Countersigned by _____ Recorded by _____.

L. E. Chittenden, Register.

F. E. Spinner, Treasurer.

Issued by _____, Paymaster _____.

Margin of bond certificate.—The margin is to state the date and amount of the bond, the name, rank, company, and regiment of the payee, the name and title of the paymaster issuing it, and the name of the clerk who countersigned it.

Receipt.—The third blank to be the receipt of the officer or soldier to whom the certificate was issued, and to be substantially as follows:

Received, this _____ day of _____, 186 , from _____, the original of bond certificate No. _____, for fifty dollars, recorded upon the pay-roll for _____.

Margin of receipt.—The margin to be the same, but contracted in space.

Certificates prepared.—The $50 and $100 bond certificate to bear the engraved signatures of the Register and Treasurer, and be separately bound in volumes of $10,000 and $20,000, respectively, and be first delivered from the Currency Bureau to the Register, who shall record them in books properly prepared, and cause them to be countersigned by the recording clerk, in the blank left for that purpose.

Register to Treasurer.—The Register to deliver and charge these volumes to the Treasurer, who shall receipt for them upon delivery, and credit them to the Register, the same as a deposit of money.

Treasurer's duty, 2d.—These volumes shall be treated as cash by the Treasurer, but be entered on receipt in a separate book, with blanks for recording them after issue to soldiers, and blanks for recording the return of those not issued by the paymaster, and be paid by him to paymaster in part satisfaction of drafts issued on warrants for an advance to these officers.

Clerk's duty.—The clerk who records their receipt shall fill the proper blanks and countersign them before delivery to the paying teller. The paying teller will pay them out as cash.

Paymaster's duty, 3d.—The paymaster, in paying them out to soldiers, will fill the blanks in the certificates and their margins, sign them, give the original to the officer or soldier, and send the duplicate to the Treasurer, recording the payment in a memorandum on the pay-roll opposite the name of the payee.

Duplicate to Treasurer.—The Treasurer, on receipt of the duplicate, shall record in the blank prepared for the purpose in the original receipt book, the date of issue, and by whom and to whom it was issued. The balance of this book, less the amount in the hands of the Treasurer, will at any time show the amount actually issued, as well as enable the Register to prepare the bonds upon the Treasurer's report of certificates issued by paymasters in advance of the bond certificate. The bond to be issued upon the proper surrender of the certificate, and upon such issue to be covered into the treasury by accounting officers.

Soldier's receipt, 4th.—The officer or soldier will sign the receipt and its margin, the blanks thereof to be filled by the paymaster at the time of payment.

Receipt to Second Auditor.—These receipts to be forwarded to the Auditor, with the pay-rolls by the paymaster, their amounts to be charged in his accounts, for which he is to be credited the same as other payments, the receipts being the vouchers. Such bond certificates as he may not issue to be repaid into the treasury the same as money, and to be placed to his credit. Such repayments to be recorded in the proper blanks of the original receipt book, and the certificates so returned to become vouchers in the settlement of the Treasurer's account with the Register, the same as a check in any ordinary deposit account.

Losses.—In case of loss in transitu of these certificates, the margins of the volumes, properly certified, can be used as vouchers in the settlement of the accounts of the Paymaster and Treasurer.

Loss of volumes.—In the event of loss in transit of originals and duplicates, and the subsequent loss by capture or otherwise of the marginal volumes, the memorandum on the pay-rolls, with the loss properly substantiated, can be made sufficient warrant and voucher for the settlement of accounts and delivery of bonds.

Paymasters.—The system thus briefly sketched will be unpopular with the paymasters from the extra labor it will occasion them, and tend to discourage or prevent their recommending the investment to soldiers. It will, therefore, be necessary for the Secretary of War to make a general order to paymasters by which it shall become a part of the duty to facilitate the business, and to require them to take to the field at least a certain percentage of their advances in bond certificates.

It appears to me that the thought of others more competent and less oppressed with detail than myself will easily mould the above suggestions into a smoothly working system, should they be found defective in practice.

The minor details of books, blanks, &c., not herein enumerated, are such as will suggest themselves to any accountant, and require no present elaboration.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. CLARK.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,

Secretary of the Treasury.

NATIONAL CURRENCY BUREAU,
First Division, December 8, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of Assistant Secretary Harrington's instructions "to make to the Secretary a full report upon the character and quality of the national paper proposed to be substituted by Dr. S. Gwynn for the membrane paper contracted for with him by the late Secretary of the Treasury; and of the facts, and of your views, in reference to the application of Dr. Gwynn, now pending, for certain changes of some of the details of said contract; and of any other facts and views which may seem to you necessary to place before the Secretary whereon to base his decision upon said application. This you will do as soon as sufficient samples of the paper are furnished to you for making your final trials of it by printing, &c."

Sufficient samples of the national paper have been furnished to me by the agent of Dr. Gwynn to enable me to print one hundred sheets of fifty-cent fractional currency, twelve notes on a sheet, and deliver them to the Treasurer. These the Treasurer has issued, and they have been some days in circulation. I have given them all the practical test I am capable of, and have made diligent inquiry of those who received and handled them in reference to the quality of the paper, and its fitness for the purposes of a currency. I have as yet heard but one opinion. It is so far approved. The Treasurer has submitted it to a variety of tests, and approved of it. From these facts, I am prepared to recommend it.

My report upon its "character and quality" is as follows:

In "character" it differs from all other paper that I am familiar with. It is insoluble in either hot or cold water. It possesses in its spider-leg fibre a non-photographic property which I know no means of removing, chemically or mechanically, without removing the fibre itself. I cannot split it, nor have I found any experts who can.

Its "quality" for printing is unobjectionable. The one hundred sheets printed were printed dry. The superintendent of printing reports that it takes the ink readily, makes a clean impression, and he approves of it. Its capacity to retain ink appears to me, from such tests as I can give it, to be at least equal, and probably is superior, to any other paper. This latter feature, however, can only be reliably tested by actual wear in circulation.

Dr. Gwynn's application, now pending, for certain changes of some of the details of said contract, proposes:

First. The formal substitution of his "national paper" for the "membrane paper" of the contract, as per sample submitted November 11, 1863. This substitute was examined and orally adopted by your predecessor, and I therefore respectfully recommend its formal recognition, as desired by Dr. Gwynn.

Second. He proposes that the price to be paid by the United States shall be eighty-three and one-third cents per pound, instead of the contract price.

The contract price was twelve dollars per thousand sheets, of twenty pounds per thousand, as a maximum, with a sliding scale governed by quantity delivered, to reach ten dollars, as a minimum. The maximum contract price would, therefore, be sixty cents per pound, and the minimum fifty cents. Your predecessor had orally assented to an increase of three dollars per thousand for the substituted paper, which would give seventy-five cents per pound as a maximum, and sixty-five cents as a minimum.

I conceive the department pledged to pay this three dollars extra, though it is not of record. The advance was assented to by the late Secretary in my presence.

But Dr. Gwynn now asks that it may be made eighty-three and one-third cents per pound for all deliveries, irrespective of quantity.

There are many reasons why the price by the pound is better than by the sheet. It is more equitable to both the government and the contractor, and more convenient for the keeping and adjustment of accounts.

It is for the Secretary to decide whether any greater advance than is already assented to shall be allowed. Material has advanced a much greater pro rata than Dr. Gwynn now asks. To pay a higher price is simply a discretion with the Secretary, and this report is submitted upon the second proposition, without recommendation, but simply with a statement of facts for the Secretary's information.

Third. Dr. Gwynn proposes a change in the prices of machinery.

He has, in correspondence, notified the department of an enhanced cost, and the reasons therefor, but the matter has not, to my knowledge, been presented to your predecessor, and no action has been taken thereon by the department.

The contract provides that the machinery shall be put in at the expense of the government, but that its cost over and above two thousand five hundred dollars for each machine, capable of producing eight thousand sheets in ten hours, shall be charged to Dr. Gwynn, and be deducted from monthly payments to be made for the paper. He now desires to change their price to five thousand dollars, and the production to four thousand sheets in ten hours.

The change in the rate of production is consequent upon the change from membrane to national paper. The same machinery which would produce eight thousand sheets of membrane will produce only four thousand sheets of national. It is, therefore, in my judgment, equitable that the change of rate of production should be made.

The change of price is purely a matter of discretion with the Secretary. The reasons for it are given in Dr. Gwynn's letter of the 21st instant. My duty is simply to report facts for the Secretary's consideration, without comment. It is a fact, patent to all in the trade, that the cost of machinery has more than doubled since the contract was made. It is also a fact that the delay was caused by the doctor's imprisonment on the department's order on what have proven to be malicious and groundless charges. It is probable that the machinery will cost nearly, if not quite, five thousand dollars.

I am not aware "of any other facts and views necessary to place before the Secretary whereon to base his decision upon said application," except the general fact that it is very desirable that the issues of the government should be upon a distinctive paper. This paper is more distinctive in its character than any yet offered to the government. I should be glad to have one more distinctive than this—that is, one whose distinctive character should be more readily apparent to a casual observer. But I have made many experiments to produce such a paper, and extensive inquiries among paper-makers so far without any result equal to the national paper.

I therefore recommend its use until some, at present undeveloped, ingenuity can furnish a more distinctive paper of equal or better quality.

I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

S. M. CLARK,
Chief of Division.

HON. WILLIAM P. FESSENDEN,
Secretary of the Treasury.

DECEMBER 30, 1863.

SIR: In compliance with your instructions, I have the honor to report that the discrepancy of ten dollars between the Treasurer's account of United States legal-tender notes received from the first division of the Currency Bureau and my account of the amount delivered arises from the fact that among the packages of ten-dollar notes delivered to him on the fifth instant one package, reported and marked by the counters of this division to contain $2,000, was reported by the Treasurer's counters to contain but $1,990, or one note short.

The usual course of business is to deliver the packages to Mr. Root, in the Treasurer's office, taking his qualified receipt therefor—i. e., his receipt for so many packages "marked to contain" a specified amount. On the day following the delivery the qualified receipt is presented to Mr. Root, and if the packages are found to contain the specified amount, he writes across the receipt the word "correct," and signs his name under the word. Upon this receipt, marked "correct," being presented to the Treasurer, that officer signs the final or unqualified receipt.

On the delivery of the fifth instant alluded to above, one package was reported short. I immediately sent for its return, with the strap that contained the counter's initials. The strap was returned, marked H. R., (Miss Roser;) but Mr. Root declined to return the package, for the counter's examination. I then went personally to Mr. Root's room and counted the package, but did not discover the missing note. It appeared to be ten dollars short. I still demanded that the package should be sent down to the counting-room for Miss Roser to count, as, by her mark, she had declared it to be correct. This was refused. I subsequently communicated the facts to the Treasurer and to his cashier, neither of whom sustained Mr. Root in his action; but by the time their decision was had, the package had been sent, with others, to New York. Under these circumstances, I did not think it just to charge the ten dollars to Miss Roser; and the matter has thus far remained unsettled. Packages have before been reported short from Mr. Root's room, and on being sent down for recount have been found correct.

I understand the basis of Mr. Root's action to be the absurd allegation that on the re-examination of the former packages, the missing notes had been added in this division. This is unjust to my counters and unworthy of Mr. Root. It is simply a question of the correctness of our respective counters. I do not, for a moment, doubt the honesty of either. Both Mr. Root's counters and my own have been a very long time employed, and have the confidence of their respective employers.

I think it unjust to charge the amount to Miss Roser, but the Secretary having given me this opportunity to place the facts upon the record, I am quite willing, myself, to pay the amount, under protest as to its justice, and an emphatic denial of the incorrectness of the counters of this division. I will pay it, not as acknowledgment of error, but simply to equalize our accounts of receipts and deliveries.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. CLARK.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,

Secretary of the Treasury.

JANUARY 2, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to report, that, in accordance with your instructions, I requested Mr. Rogers, a long time since, to separate the west hall of the basement story from the other halls by railings, and bought a railing for the purpose.

As no attention was paid to the request, I supposed it was because I had omitted to comply with your instructions to make the request in writing.

I therefore made a written request on the 23d November last, copy of which I enclose, but the work is not yet done.

Strangers who wander about the building from curiosity frequently force their way into the rooms of this division, in violation of your order, compelling me to the ungracious office of expelling them. This will continue until the hall is closed off.

I learn indirectly that Mr. Rogers does not like the style of the railing I purchased. I am entirely indifferent as to the style, so that any barrier is put up.

The pattern bought was the same as that used for a similar purpose in the new assay office at New York, which I selected to save the time and cost of a new pattern.

I also have the honor to enclose a report from the paper-room this day received, upon which I have taken no action.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. CLARK.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,

Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 8, 1864.

SIR: In reply to your oral inquiry, I have the honor to report the following synopsis of Dr. Gwynn's transactions with the department. I divide them into three classes, as follows:

Class 1. Machinery, presses, and paper delivered and paid for.

Class 2. Machinery, presses, and paper delivered and not paid for.

Class 3. Machinery delivered or used by Dr. Gwynn, which has not been and is not to be purchased or owned by the department, but to be purchased and used by Dr. Gwynn in the fulfilment of his contract for making paper.

Class 1. Machinery delivered and paid for.....	$16, 896 35
40 presses and apparatus.....	47, 160 00
Paper.....	none.
Total	64, 056 35
Class 2. Machinery delivered and not paid for, but bills rendered..	$23, 539 83
33 presses delivered and not paid for.....	38, 775 00
Paper delivered and not paid for.....	none.
Total	62, 314 83

No payment has yet been made for paper. 84,425 sheets have been delivered and receipted for, but I have charged to Dr. Gwynn for labor for which he is liable, and which the department has paid for at different times, an amount about equal to the value of the paper delivered. I therefore extend no value for this item. In addition to this, there is more or less paper in his custody not yet delivered—how much, I have not the means of knowing.

Class 3. Machinery in the department owned by Dr. Gwynn.

As I have seen no bills for any of this, I can only give an approximate estimate of its value, which is little better than conjecture. I should suppose, in round numbers, it may have cost $5,000.

In reply to the Secretary's further inquiries, I have the honor to report that Dr. Gwynn's position toward the department is that of a contractor. He holds no appointment as an officer of the government, receives no pay for any services he may render, and pays his own expenses.

In the early part of our intercourse I treated him only as a contractor. Finding, as I did upon acquaintance, that he was possessed of knowledge and experience that would be of great service to me in the discharge of my official duty; that his scientific acquirements were so vastly superior to my own as to render almost certain the successful attainment of the objects in view, I gladly availed myself of his proffered gratuitous aid in carrying on the Secretary's policy.

The intimacy which thus grew up between us impressed me in the strongest possible manner with his virtue and perfect integrity, of the absence of all desire in him for pecuniary gain, and of his most devoted and unflinching loyalty. Impressed with this feeling, I have, in my personal intercourse, reposed entire confidence in him.

I have often been called upon by parties with whom he was dealing, to know if government was responsible for his purchases. I have invariably replied that government was not, but that if his work was accepted government would pay him, but would know no other party. I have sometimes added my individual opinion, when distinctly asked to do so, that I deemed parties dealing with him entirely safe in a mercantile sense; for although he did not profess to be possessed of means, and, indeed, told me he had none, yet he had shown me letters from a wealthy friend in Boston, who fully indorsed his acts. This friend once called upon me and expressed his unbounded confidence in Dr. Gwynn, and said that he was furnishing him means, and should continue to do so. The name of this gentleman, Dr. Gwynn had advised me, he had confidentially communicated to the Secretary in writing. How much or how little he has paid the parties with whom he has dealt I do not know. One of the firm of Hayward Bartlett & Co., who made presses for Dr. Gwynn, told me recently that Dr. Gwynn had paid another party, Messrs. Poole & Hunt, money on account before the work was done, and that he thought the doctor should pay him some also. I simply referred him to Dr. Gwynn. Another house, Messrs. Woodruff & Beach, who made presses for him, advised me that they had not been paid. The department has not paid Dr. Gwynn, as I understand, his accounts for the presses made by Messrs. W. & B.

I am not called upon by the Secretary to express any present opinion of Dr. Gwynn, and there would be a manifest impropriety in volunteering it in an official report. I trust, however, there is no official impropriety in saying that, if called upon, I shall have no hesitation in expressing a clear and decided opinion orally or in writing, as the Secretary may direct.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. CLARK.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,

Secretary of the Treasury.

JANUARY 12, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to report that the work upon the $1,000 ten-forty bonds has been commenced, but the work upon the other denominations cannot be commenced until the stock of the one-year notes, now in New York, is delivered to the department. That stock, which, under the company's contract, is the property of the department, is necessary for the $500, $100, and $50 bonds.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

S. M. CLARK.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,

Secretary of the Treasury.

JANUARY 19, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to report that the present system of the care and custody of the rolls and dies belonging to the department is as follows:

Upon their receipt from the New York engravers, or upon their manufacture here, they are immediately handed over to the custodian of the rolls, dies, and plates. Those from New York are delivered to him without opening the boxes. He opens the boxes, compares the contents with the invoice, and reports in writing to me, if they are correct, or if any are found wanting so reports, and the engravers are notified. He then receipts for the articles, and the receipt is filed in this office. Those made here are delivered to him by the chief transferer and immediately recorded in the record of dies and rolls, without passing through my office. All dies and rolls received by the custodian of the rolls (Mr. Casilear) are numbered, and recorded by their number and description. He places them in a large safe, of which he keeps the key. When any of them are wanted for use the custodian delivers them on the order of the chief transferer or the superintendent of plate printing, and takes a receipt for them by description and number in a book prepared for the purpose, entitled "Records of Deliveries," in which is stated the day on which they are taken, the use they are to be put to, and the date of their return. This is an outline of the present system.

I had the honor to propose, some time since, as an additional security for dies and rolls, that there should be assistant custodians, which, I understood, met the Secretary's approval, and therefore prepared the safe accordingly. My proposal was, that the safe should be furnished with three different locks and keys; that the custodian should keep one, and the other two be kept by two persons appointed, respectively, by the Comptroller of the Currency and the Treasurer of the United States; that all three should be present when the safe is locked or opened; that it should be the duty of these two additional key-keepers to go with the rolls and dies to the transfer-room, and see that they were only used for the purpose designated in the book of deliveries. It is proper to say that this would not be absolute security, but would be a close approximate to it. Nothing would be absolute short of one man as a watch of each roll and die. This would take a force of twenty or thirty men. I do not deem this necessary, but think, if suitable men were appointed, the two could exercise such watchfulness over the transfer-rooms that an improper use of the materials would be nearly impossible—certainly a far greater security than has ever been attained or attempted in any bank note establishment in this country.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

S. M. CLARK.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,
Secretary of the Treasury.

JANUARY 22, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to report that Mr. George D. Baldwin, after five months of delay, has finally delivered all of the stock for the $500 and $1,000 bonds of the third series. There is no good reason why their delivery should not have been immediate upon the close of the work. The original work is now in the possession of the custodian of the rolls and dies, but I am aware, and it is proper so to report, that Mr. Baldwin has duplicates of portions of it, i. e., what is technically termed "stock."

The Secretary is aware that from the original "shells" results, almost kaleidoscopic, are attained, easily traceable by an expert to the original "shell." Some such results from these original "shells" Mr. Baldwin has exhibited here, since the delivery of the "shells."

I do not think there is any remedy for this. I find Mr. Baldwin totally unreliable. I have no belief in his assertions. I am prepared, from my intercourse with him, to add my testimony to that of Mr. Cisco, as to his total unreliability, and the impolicy and impropriety of employing him upon government work.

His written offer for the sale of this stock is as follows:

NEW YORK, June 6, 1863.

SIR: I do not know what price to charge for the stock to be used on the $1,000 and $500 coupon bonds, but beg leave to say there need be no difficulty on that score, and hereby offer that James Duthie and Joseph Ourdan say what it should be, or, rather than any difficulty about it, let it go scot free to government, and I have a chance to show what I can do to help you in your undertaking and creditably to myself.

Faithfully,

GEO. D. BALDWIN.

S. M. CLARK, Treasury Department.

I respectfully recommend that Mr. Duthie and Mr. Ourdan be directed to appraise this stock; and upon that appraisal, that Baldwin's account with the department be permanently closed.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

S. M. CLARK.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,
Secretary of the Treasury.

JANUARY 23, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to report that the $20 and $500 plates are this evening received from the National Bank Note Company. The paper will be wet down to-night if it arrives, printing commenced on one set of $20-plates Monday morning, and delivery to the Treasurer, at the rate of one thousand impressions per day, on Wednesday the 3d of February. An additional set of three plates can be made every five days—adding one thousand impressions to the delivery every five days after February 3.

The New York companies, on your order of the 16th instant, with plates ready for work, promised to commence delivery of legal-tender notes on the 3d of February. Delivery of these to the Treasurer can be commenced, if the mails connect regularly, on the 6th of February. The various dates above given are based upon the presumption that no untoward event not now foreseen will occur to prevent the execution of the work.

I have the honor, &c.,

S. M. CLARK.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,
Secretary of the Treasury.

JANUARY 26, 1864.

SIR: In reply to your inquiry as to the advantages or disadvantages of a paper-mill on the Potomac, near Washington, I have the honor to report:

A paper-mill located either at Great or Little Falls, or at Georgetown, would have an excellent water-power throughout the year. It would have unusual facilities for getting stock, as foreign vessels come to Alexandria, and transit thence would be by water to the mill. It would find a ready and sufficient purchaser in government for the public printing-office, as distant mills could be undersold by as much as the saving in freight, probably from one to two cents per pound. The government printing-office, I suppose, consumes now $600,000 to $700,000 per annum, though I have no authority for these figures. Prices for document and executive paper, probably, vary from sixteen cents to twenty-five cents per pound. Land could be cheaply obtained for buildings at the Falls; and I presume a water-power would be cheap also, as the mill would be likely to prove a nucleus for other work. The main disadvantage would be the impurity of the water. For the greater part of the year the Potomac water would be unfit for making paper. This want at the Falls could probably be supplied by springs and small streams.

The cost of building materials and labor at this time is much higher here than in most manufacturing districts.

In my judgment, government should make its own paper. The experiment of a government printing-office and of treasury printing has proven the economy of government doing its own work as far as practicable. And I believe the necessary outlay for the purpose would be saved the first year of the mill's running.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

S. M. CLARK.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,
Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
January 28, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to report that I have, in consultation with the superintendent of plate printing, and his foreman, analyzed the department's present capacity (of fifty-one roller presses) for printing the kind of notes, &c., at present most wanted, and find they can be organized to issue nearly two millions of dollars per day, divided as follows :

Fractional currency, (Treasurer's assortment,) 26 presses	$52, 500
One-year 5 per cent. notes, small denominations, 19 presses	920, 000
5-20 bonds, (100's and 1,000's,) 6 presses	1, 000, 000
51 presses	1, 982, 500

The one year notes will gradually take the place and presses of the two-year notes as fast as the plates are received and made, and the two-years would thus soon cease to be printed, until there was a demand for them, and would close up at nearly one hundred millions in all.

I have, therefore, given directions for the work in accordance with the above programme. The hydrostatic presses, when all at work, will produce four or five times the quantity stated above, but they cannot be relied upon until the receivers, just authorized by Mr. Rogers, are in place, say forty to sixty days; they are promised by the manufacturers in Baltimore in forty days.

It is not an inappropriate time to record the cost of fractional currency, as ascertained by actual production :

The cost of 50-cent pieces is $\frac{5}{32}$ of one per cent.

The cost of 25-cent pieces is $\frac{5}{16}$ of one per cent.

The cost of 10-cent pieces is $\frac{1}{3}$ of one per cent.

The cost of 5-cent pieces is $1\frac{5}{16}$ per cent.

The comparative cost of fractional and postal currency, computed at the prices actually paid, is :

50 cents per \$1,000 fractional	\$1 '59	postal	\$6 97	\$7 34 $\frac{5}{8}$
25 cents per \$1,000 fractional	3 08	postal	13 94	14 96 $\frac{1}{2}$
10 cents per \$1,000 fractional	6 71	postal	28 87	29 38 $\frac{1}{4}$
5 cents per $1,000 fractional	13 43	postal	55 75	58 77
	24 81		105 53

The Treasurer's assortment of $5,000 would cost—

Of postal currency	$1, 128 51
Of fractional currency	262 61
	865 90

My original representation to the Secretary was that it could be produced for about one-fifth what the postal cost. After that representation was made the bronzing was added, making two more printings, and the labor and cost of bronze.

Even with this additional work it costs but little more than one-fifth, and not as much as one-fourth of the cost of the postal currency.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

S. M. CLARK.

Hon. S. P. CHASE, Secretary of the Treasury.

FEBRUARY 1, 1864.

SIR : I have the honor to report that Mr. Duthie and Mr. Ourdan, under the Secretary's instructions of the 25th ultimo, have appraised the stock of Mr. Baldwin for the $500 and $1,000 notes, and their appraisement amounts to the sum of $2,165. This appraisalment is, as all experts would make it, the absolute net cost to Mr. Baldwin, without any allowance for risks, contingencies, and profits.

I should think it not an injustice either to the government or Mr. Baldwin to double this valuation, for the purpose of arriving at a fair price for the work.

The Continental Company were paid $4,650 for the stock of the two bonds executed by them, viz : $50 and $100 bonds.

It may not be deemed improper, under the established policy of the department "to make no distinction between the engraving companies," to pay Mr. Baldwin the same price for the stock of the two bonds executed by him as was paid to the Continental Company for the two bonds executed by them. Mr. Baldwin's stock is, in my judgment, more valuable than the Continental Company's.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

S. M. CLARK.

Hon. S. P. CHASE, Secretary of the Treasury.

FEBRUARY 4, 1864.

SIR : In reply to your oral inquiry of the amount of deliveries from this division to-day, and the probable daily deliveries for the six days following, I have the honor to report as follows :

	Date.	5-20 bonds.	Fractional currency.	1-year treasury notes.	2-year treasury notes.	Legal tenders.	National currency.	Total.

Remarks.

1. The five-twenty bonds will vary more or less from this amount as the Register's demand may vary in denominations.

The above is the daily product.

2. The fractional currency will average the above amount ; its variations will be as the larger or smaller denominations dry more or less rapidly.

3. The one-year notes will not probably vary from the amount stated.

4. The two-year notes will not probably vary from the above amount for six days. After that it will fall off, and one-years increase, but not in proportionate amount, as the denomination will be smaller. The number of impressions will be the same daily.

5. The delivery of legal tenders will vary only as the supply from New York varies. Deliveries are two days after receipt, i. e., the receipt of to-day, the 4th instant, will be delivered on the 6th.

6. The amount of national currency also depends upon the supply from the New York companies. I know no reason why it should be less, but expect to see it increase. All these amounts are based upon the regular operations of the division. They are liable to such diminution as grows out of sickness, death, or other absence of the operatives, or unforeseen derangement of the machinery.

S. M. CLARK.

Hon. S. P. CHASE, Secretary of the Treasury.

FEBRUARY 5, 1864.

SIR: In reply to the Secretary's instructions, to so methodize the work in the printing department as to produce two and a half millions of dollars per day, of $10, $20, $50, and $100 treasury notes, including $100,000 of fractional currency, I have the honor to report that such a result is impossible, except after an interval of much time, even by the entire bank note companies of the country and the Treasury Department combined.

To produce it, assuming that there are printed an equal number of impressions of each denomination, say :

13, 000 impressions of $10.....	$130, 000
13, 000 " 20.....	260, 000
13, 000 " 50.....	650, 000
13, 000 " 100.....	1, 300, 000
<hr/>
52, 000	2, 340, 000
Fractional currency.....	100, 000

2, 440, 000

would require 212 presses, 225 plates, and about forty operatives.

To produce an equal amount of each denomination, say :

60, 000 impressions of $10.....	$600, 000
30, 000 " 20.....	600, 000
12, 000 " 50.....	600, 000
6, 000 " 100.....	600, 000
Fractional currency.....	100, 000

2, 500, 000

would require 1,296 presses, 1,350 plates, and about three thousand operatives ; and this statement is based on a yield, per press, sixty per cent. greater than the bank note companies ever gave.

The Secretary will realize this when he is informed that the two bank note companies in New York, of the largest resources, after many months of preparation, and large promises, with unrivalled facilities, and under the steady urging of the Comptroller, do not yet exceed $400,000 per day of the $5 and $10 national currency. Indeed, they do not average that, and for the last three days have not averaged half that amount. The department has now fifty-one presses ; twelve of them are devoted to treasury notes. I have arranged for room, and purchased thirty-eight more, and sent a man to Philadelphia, to-night, to urge them forward. After they are here, and set up, which will be before the plates can all be got ready, I propose to put twenty-six of them on the fractional currency, and twelve on the treasury notes. This, when they are all in operation, will double the product, or give $360,000 per day, of an equal number of impressions of each denomination, and $100,000 of fractional currency. The delay will be in preparing plates ; they can be prepared in the treasury as rapidly, I think more rapidly, than elsewhere ; certainly more rapidly than the companies have ever yet prepared them for the department.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

S. M. CLARK.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,
Secretary of the Treasury.

FEBRUARY 23, 1864.

SIR : In reply to your inquiry with reference to the time when deliveries could be commenced of the 10-40 bonds, I have the honor to report that the series of plates authorized is commenced, consisting of fifteen face plates, with the necessary back plates, and that two $1,000 plates and one $500 plate have the script finished and only wait coupons.

These coupons, if not altered, can be laid down in two days to each plate, so that printing could be commenced and deliveries begin by the 1st of March, at the rate of half a million per day, and increasing half a million every two days. If the date of the act is altered, it will delay the commencement of the deliveries from two to three weeks.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

Hon. S. P. CHASE,

FEBRUARY 26, 1864.

SIR : I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a letter from Messrs. Trask & Raisin, recommending their steam press, dated the 25th ultimo, which has this day been referred to me for report.

The press alluded to is the one which I examined in Philadelphia, about one year since, under instructions from the Secretary. I found it a very ingenious apparatus, and one possessing more points of merit than any other steam press I had before examined. That it will print rapidly is beyond question, but it cannot, in my judgment, properly print bank note work. It would be desirable for some kinds of book work, for fashion plates to magazines, for druggists' labels, or similar work, but for the fine quality of note printing it is not suitable.

The Secretary will appreciate the difference in the various plates when he is advised that of the different ones now used in the Treasury Department some are so difficult that only the most skilful hands can print from them properly, while others can be printed with great rapidity by workmen of very ordinary skill.

For instance, the most difficult to print of any of the one hundred and fifty plates now in use are, unfortunately, the $10 one-year notes. But a very small proportion of the department journeymen can print them properly, while others of the same series could be well printed by, probably, half the men employed.

Steam printing is available and useful when judgment and continual watchfulness are not requisite. It has not yet been adapted to the most difficult work. It is desirable, but the desideratum has not yet been obtained. Thinking it quite probable that their press might be made economically available for some of the inferior backs and some ordinary work, I requested the owners of the press to give, in writing, the terms upon which they would permit its use preparatory to reporting upon it to the Secretary.

Their offer, dated June 20, 1863, is now on file, offering the presses at $550 each, with a charge of $250,000 for the right to use as many as might be necessary. This charge was so absurd that I made no written report upon it.

They also offered to print United States notes at $45 per thousand. The cost for this in the department is less than $29 per thousand, and the price paid the bank note companies is $57 50 per thousand, including numbering and signatures, which is less than $45 for the print.

They now propose to put one up in the department and run it at their own expense, but I know of no available room for the purpose, and do not see its necessity, as experts who have seen it agree with me that it is not available for printing fine vignette work properly.

There are some erroneous statements in the letter of Messrs. Trask & Raisin, but as they do not affect the merit of their press I refrain from occupying the Secretary's time by refuting them.

S. M. CLARK.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,
Secretary of the Treasury.

MARCH 2, 1864.

SIR: In reply to your oral inquiry as to the probable general operations of this division, on the values immediately required, I have the honor to report:

That the production of treasury notes of the smaller denominations will be, for the present, about $800,000 per day, and will gradually augment by increase of 10's to about..... $1,000,000
The daily delivery of United States notes will be about..... 500,000
(These latter in effect augment the Treasurer's resources, as they change his dead stock of large notes into an active capital of small ones.)
Fractional currency will continue at less than..... 50,000
1,550,000

The delivery of 10-40 coupon bonds will commence within ten days after the dates are engraved, from one plate of $1,000's at the rate of $500,000 per day, increasing every five days $500,000 until the delivery of 1,000's is two and a half millions per day.

The 500's will commence five days after the 1,000's at the rate of $250,000 per day, and five days thereafter will be doubled, and so continue.

The 100's will commence two days after the 500's at the rate of $50,000 per day, and three days thereafter will double, and so continue.

From these data I deduce the following table:

Date.	100's.	500's.	1,000's.	Total.
March 14			$500,000	$500,000

MARCH 7, 1863.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt this day of your instructions of the 5th instant, to report the number of ladies employed in this bureau, their compensation and general character of their duties; also to report how many rooms are specially assigned to them, and if in any case clerks occupy desks in such rooms.

In reply to the latter part of your instructions I respectfully report that I have but one clerk. His desk is in the room used as my office, in which two ladies are also employed. But as I apprehend the scope of your inquiry covers to what extent different sexes are employed in the same rooms, which a categorical reply to your inquiry as to "clerks" would not fully answer, I respectfully enclose a tabulated statement of the number of rooms occupied, their use, the number of males and females in each, their pay, and general duties, of which I ask your careful analysis, that you may know the proportions to which this bureau has extended during your absence from the country. Thirty rooms are now occupied by 447 persons, an average of nearly sixteen to a room, and many of them are crowded to a degree very prejudicial to the health of the occupants.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

S. M. CLARK.

Hon. GEO. HARRINGTON,
Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

MARCH 8, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a letter to the Secretary from H. R. Allen, referred to this office, enclosing a mutilated specimen of 50-cent currency.

I recognize these specimens as part of an issue erroneously put in circulation at an early stage of the work. The error occurred before the system of "checks and balances" was matured, by the surface-printer sending to one of the rooms where the paper was made, instead of sending to the delivery-room, and then getting one thousand sheets before it was finished. The error was not discovered, as the paper does not differ in appearance until its unfinished state manifested itself by coming in pieces in a subsequent stage of the work, after this thousand became mingled with many thousand good sheets.

The work was immediately stopped, and the paper carefully examined, and it was supposed all the unfinished paper separated and placed with the mutilated. It appears, however, that some escaped detection, and was issued. I have seen but one specimen beside these, and it may be that only a single sheet escaped.

Certainly many could not, for one thousand were withdrawn, and the operators reported them all to be of the unfinished paper. Such an error has not since occurred, and cannot again under the present system.

The letter of Mr. Allen, with the specimen attached, is herewith returned.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

S. M. CLARK.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,
Secretary of the Treasury.

MARCH 26, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a letter from W. R. Bliss, secretary, dated March 22, and referred to this office for report.

The following facts are recalled to the Secretary's recollection, that he may understandingly take action in the matter. The company was directed to prepare the one-year notes on the 27th August, 1863, and the two-year notes on the 29th October, 1863. On the 15th September, 1863, they were directed to send the stock of the one-year notes. On the 9th November, 1863, similar instructions were given in regard to the two-year notes. The two-year stock reached here on the 22d December, 1863. On being advised that it was incomplete they replied that a portion of it belonged to the one-year notes also, and therefore was retained. On the 27th January the box purporting to contain the one-year stock arrived. Upon examining it, the "custodian of the rolls and dies" reported that a number were still missing. His report, illustrated by proofs of what is required to complete the stock, is hereto annexed.

It will probably be alleged by the company that the missing portion is not necessary to produce a plate, inasmuch as we have the bed-piece and roll of a complete note.

This is true of a majority of the missing pieces, and is thus explained. The original shell is variously divided, and subdivided, and rearranged, to produce the result as a whole. They have furnished the original sheets, (in most cases,) and the result as a whole. The intermediate rolls and bed-pieces are missing.

It is therefore true (with some exceptions) that we could reproduce plates of notes from the stock furnished. But if the roll and bed-piece of the result as a whole should be broken, (a not unfrequent misfortune,) new ones could not be made without first manufacturing the intermediate bed-pieces and rolls.

It is true we can make them, having the original shells, the same as the company made them, having the materials therefor. It is for the Secretary to judge if this delivery is a performance of their agreement, which was as follows: As their acceptance of the Secretary's offer was deemed obscure you wrote them on the 27th of August, 1863, confirming their acceptance thus:

"As the following expression in your letter, viz: 'that the work is to be considered, when finished, as the property of the United States,' lacks distinctness, and may hereafter lead to difference of opinion, I now reiterate the terms upon which your proposals were invited by my letter of the 8th instant as follows:

"The acceptance conveys to the government the exclusive ownership and custody of all the original dies or bed-pieces and original cuttings of all lathe work, together with all rolls and transfers made from the dies or bed-pieces or lathe cuttings used upon the work, so that no duplicate of any portion of the work shall be in existence which is not owned and controlled by the government.

"My acceptance of your offer is conditional precisely upon the above terms, which are the same as are required from other companies who are to engrave other denominations of the treasury notes."

The president of the company, Mr. Hatch, says he supposed all were forwarded that he so directed. The vice-president, Mr. Gavit, who had the matter in charge, says that he destroyed the intermediate work, and delivered the completed result, as that was all that we required to produce a note.

The secretary of the company, Mr. Bliss, in his present letter, says:

"We beg to state that all the stock from which these plates were made has been delivered to the department according to the agreement."

The letter of Mr. Bliss is herewith enclosed, and I await the Secretary's instructions before auditing the bill for payment.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

APRIL 28, 1864.

SIR : I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a letter from Stuart Gwynn, referred to me for report, dated April 19, 1864, wherein he asks a reply to his letter of April 7, 1864.

This letter is accompanied by Dr. Gwynn's letter of April 8, 1864, wherein he asks for official authority for saying that my (his) bills of November 7, 1863, for $14,761 87, and of December 30, 1863, for $47,713 07, have never been paid.

I infer that my report is to be a reply to this inquiry, and therefore have the honor to state that Dr. Gwynn presented bills at the dates, and of the amounts above specified.

I never have certified these bills ; consequently they have not been referred to the Auditor for settlement, and they remain in this office unpaid.

The letters of Dr. Gwynn, of April 8 and April 19, are herewith returned.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. CLARK.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,
Secretary of the Treasury.

MAY 2, 1864.

SIR : In conversation with you to-day I have received the impression that, in your judgment, it is expedient that I now resign my position in this department. From this opinion I respectfully express and put on record my dissent, because it would, in my judgment, have the appearance of seeking to avoid investigation.

Charges against my official conduct have been made which have been proved to be utterly false, and have been, as such, abandoned.

Charges are now made against my personal conduct ; against these I am ready to produce overwhelming refutation and contradiction. You and I both know the base motives and the baser tools through which these charges both of official and of personal misconduct have been repeatedly urged upon you. I well know that, while considerations of pecuniary profit in the making of the currency of the country have stimulated these attacks upon me, political motives have brought support to them, in order, through a person as humble as myself, to attack you.

Up to the present time you have resisted all this pressure, and have exhibited a confidence in my official conduct and in my trustworthiness which I have endeavored to deserve by working night and day more strenuously than I will ever work again in any other service at a remuneration considerably less than that which has stood open in other quarters for my acceptance, upon far less severe labor, both bodily and mentally.

My motive for this exertion and pecuniary sacrifice has been: First, the thought that I was doing something to aid an eminent statesman in his great financial policy; and, secondly, an unwillingness to yield to a persecution, which I know to be in all its motives, both pecuniary and political, wholly vile. I now perform the highest possible act of fidelity to you, in declaring that, in deference to your judgment, and against my own, upon condition hereinafter stated, I place my resignation in your hands.

This condition, and the imperative reason for it, I will now state.

Since I have been charged with my present duties, during a period of nearly two years, I have passed through my hands more than one thousand millions of currency and securities of the United States, for the custody of the whole of which, from its first arrival and handling in the Treasury Department, up to the completion of its final delivery to the Treasurer of the United States, I have been, with full power, solely responsible.

In the discharge of this enormous trust I have given no bonds; in the performance of this arduous duty I have not lost one dollar of the public money, currency, or securities; and yet the labors of my division have been performed by not less than five hundred hands. At this moment over seven millions are in my custody already finished, and over forty-five millions are in my custody nearly finished, and more than one hundred millions are in my custody in process of manufacture.

I respectfully ask now, as I have repeatedly orally asked heretofore, of the Secretary, a vigorous examination of all the ramifications of this vast business, under my personal inspection, and with my aid, by any officials whom he may please to appoint.

For the sake of the head of the Treasury Department, and for my own sake, I respectfully ask opportunity to demonstrate that no dollar of public money has, up to this time, been lost under my management.

This cannot be done, even by nightly and daily labor, without stopping the treasury work of production of currency and securities for ten days or two weeks. As a condition precedent to my leaving the department, I ask that this examination be thus made in my presence, and that the doors of this division be closed and its operations stopped until the examination is completed, and you are satisfied that in my hands all has been safe; and to the end that you may be so satisfied, if the pressure of public business will permit, I earnestly beg the Secretary himself to give, in so far as may be possible, his own attention and direction to this examination. I shall, of course, give my attendance all the time without expecting or receiving one dollar of compensation, and without exercising my official authority.

If my resignation be accepted, then the granting of this request for such an examination appears to me to be a matter of manifest justice and sound policy. And since you have supported me up to this time, I think it right that the country should know that your confidence in my official management has not been misplaced. This is the more important in view of the fact that no such enormous task, in the preparation, custody, and issue of currency and securities, has ever been undertaken and accomplished by any government without public loss. I state to you explicitly, and with that perfect respect which long and intimate official association with you in my humble sphere has produced in my mind, that if I leave this division before this examination is had, I cannot believe, with confidence, that any man, however honest and capable, coming, inexperienced and abruptly into my place, on this now widely extended work, which has grown up with me, and all in my hands, can avoid grave risk of error and accident, which might result in serious apparent deficit, at which your enemies and mine would then endeavor to fasten upon me. Let the examination be made while I am here, in office or out of office, to inspect and watch it, and I will account to you for every dollar.

In this connexion I respectfully desire to place upon the record another fact. All the various mechanical novelties that I have designed for the economical production and safety from counterfeiting of the currency and securities have been perfected and brought into successful operation under an opposition both in and out of the department, such as no man ever before contended with. Officers high in position have, either covertly or openly, and either with good or ill motives, placed every obstacle in my way. Ignorance and cunning have both opposed me. But, notwithstanding these obstacles, the result is apparent to you, to me, to all.

Under your steady support of my work not a single failure of any one piece of mechanism, though vehemently prophesied, has occurred.

Everything I have sought to do has been done; every economy I have proposed has been attained; everything I have promised has been performed; I am entirely content with my record. For all my improvements, you are well aware, I have never asked nor would I receive a dollar beyond the salary I was receiving before I undertook the work.

It is for you to decide whether, if and after I leave the public service, the department shall continue to use my improvements; and if so, whether and what compensation for their use shall be proper.

It is, perhaps, unnecessary for me to state that the Secretary is entirely at liberty to make such use of this communication as he may consider to be judicious. I am willing that any man who takes an interest in the condition and working of the Treasury Department should read it, and hold me responsible for the truth of any statement it contains.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. CLARK.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,
Secretary of the Treasury.

MAY 20, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to report that the enclosed bills are presented for payment by Dr. Gwynn.

They are parts of apparatus for "dry printing," and the articles have been furnished and are now in use. More or less of them have been furnished under the contract for presses.

The makers, Messrs. Gray & Noyes, of this city, who did the work, need their pay.

I can perceive no objection to the payment to Dr. Gwynn the amount to be charged to him, and so much thereof as is justly chargeable to him under his contract be deducted from his payment upon the final settlement of his accounts.

I respectfully refer them to the Secretary for consideration.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. CLARK.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,
Secretary of the Treasury.

MAY 20, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to report that the coupon bonds of 1881 are of the denominations of $500 and $1,000, and that the plates were made and are now held by the National Bank Note Company of New York.

They have been paid, according to the loan branch report, "for engraving each plate $637 50." Their charge for printing is $175 90 per thousand impressions.

The cost of printing in the department the 3d series of five-twenty bonds, as reported to you from the actual result, on the 24th of November last, was $43 per thousand impressions, which included all labor and materials, superintendent's salary, and an unusually large proportion of unused impressions.

The registered bonds for the same loan are $500, $1,000, $5,000, and $10,000. The price paid for engraving these plates was $193 25 each.

The price paid for printing was $63 24 per thousand impressions.

The economy of printing them in the department would be in the same proportion as for the coupon bonds.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. CLARK.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,

Secretary of the Treasury.

MAY 20, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a letter from Hiram Barney, esq., collector, in reference to preparing checks for his use on the Assistant Treasurer of the United States at New York referred to this office for suggestions.

I respectfully suggest that steel plates should be prepared, printed, and the checks numbered in this department, and then sent to the collector at New York to have a surface tint printed upon them of lathe work before using, of a character not easily counterfeited, which can be done by Mr. Eidlitz of New York.

In this way no complete check could be prepared either in New York or here. Collusion must occur between experts in both places to produce an unauthorized duplicate.

The check would be unique in its character, be successfully imitated with difficulty, if at all, and being made payable to order would present as many obstacles to fraud as any method I could suggest.

The necessary work can be done in the treasury without interfering with other work, and its cost be paid from the proper fund under the control of the collector at New York.

The letter of Mr. Barney and accompanying papers are herewith returned.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. CLARK.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,

Secretary of the Treasury.

The methods adopted for preparing in the department the issue of fractional currency, in lieu of postal currency prepared in New York, have been designed to promote greater economy in the cost of production, and greater security against counterfeiting.

The denominations issued are four in number, viz: 5 cents, 10 cents, 25 cents, 50 cents. A fifth, 3 cents, is now in course of preparation.

The economy of the product is best shown by actual results, as follows:

The cost of each issue has been :

For 5 cent pieces for $1,000 fractional,	$13 43;	postal,	$55 75.
" 10 " " " " "	6 71;	"	28 87.
" 25 " " " " "	3 08;	"	13 94.
" 50 " " " " "	1 59;	"	6 97.

Various new methods have been adopted to prevent counterfeiting, and to secure the public against fraudulent issues.

First. Engraving both obverse and reverse in the highest style of art by elaborate hand labor of artists of rare genius and skill, in lieu of the cheaper and common, though beautiful, mechanical product of lathe work.

Second. Adding to the labor four separate printings, instead of two as employed for the postal currency.

The two additional impressions being in an irremovable mordant, the manufacture of which is original, and a secret with the department, covered with bronze, which effectually prevents copies being made by the cheap and easily acquired process of photography. A successful counterfeit cannot be made of the fractional currency, in the present stage of the art, by photography.

Third. Preventing counterfeiting by transfers, through methods which remain a secret with the department—the same methods preventing counterfeiting by electrotyping, or making a matrix with plumbago, gutta-percha, shellac, or any kindred process.

Fourth. Printing on a distinctive paper, made in the department, by an ingenious and original process—which is kept secret—the paper having greater strength and durability than any note paper hitherto manufactured, being impossible to split, as all other papers will, and possessing a non-photographic property irremovable by any reagent yet known to chemistry. Paper possessing the same characteristics, it is supposed, cannot be produced elsewhere.

Fifth. Printing the paper dry. This renders the notes all exactly alike, while it distinguishes them from all other printing. If paper is printed wet, the sheets shrink irregularly in drying. No two notes, printed wet, were ever exactly alike. No two notes printed dry can possibly be unlike, (in size.) This has long been a desideratum in the art, but has never before been attained. It is now successfully done in the treasury, more cheaply and a better quality of work than any other method of plate printing.

The details of the dry printing process also afford opportunity for certain checks against fraud and dishonesty on the part of employes, which are not compatible with wet printing, thereby preventing any loss to the government in the manufacture. This is an important feature in manufacturing a representative of value, which comes from the press, ready for use. Its great importance was only determined by practice.

The machinery and apparatus for dry printing is boldly original in its design and in its operations.

The enormous hydraulic power—giving a pressure of over two hundred tons at each impression—being handled and controlled as easily, and worked as readily, as a simple hand-press. The first set of presses put in use are not yet perfected in all their details; but when completed, it is expected that an aggregate pressure of ten thousand tons can be made and worked as easily as the ordinary roller presses.

Sixth. The notes are cut from the sheet and made ready for transmission by machinery of new and peculiar construction, which cuts them all of one unvarying size, counts them, and places them in packages of convenient size and decimal amount.

The postal currency was either cut by hand, with scissors, or issued in sheets, for the public to cut. It is supposed that one of these machines will do the work formerly done by twenty operatives, and do it more uniformly, accurately, and better than can be done by hand.

MAY 26, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose a letter, received this day from Mr. Shepard, in reply to the Secretary's letter of the 21st instant, asking at what price he would deliver to the department the stock and plates for the coupon bond of 1881.

The Secretary will notice that Mr. Shepard makes no reply to the question of the Secretary, but simply argues the propriety and justice of employing his company to do the printing.

I respectfully remind the Secretary, as I had the honor to say to him yesterday, that the price of $637 ⁵⁰/₁₀₀ per plate is not, in my judgment, a fair price for stock and plates. The stock used for these plates probably cost them $3,500. Its absolute value depends upon the number of different contracts they may be able to use the stock for, and cannot, therefore, be stated with any precision.

Under all the circumstances I had contemplated, if their offer of sale had been $5,000 or less, to recommend its acceptance to the Secretary.

I have the honor to ask the Secretary's instructions for reply to Mr. Shepard's letter.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. CLARK,
Chief of First Division.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,
Secretary of the Treasury.

NATIONAL CURRENCY BUREAU, FIRST DIVISION,

May 27, 1864.

SIR : I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a letter from the cashier of the First National Bank of Cincinnati, Ohio, in reference to an error upon one of the $1,000 ten-forty coupon bonds, which, together with the report of the Register of the Treasury on the same subject, is referred to this office for "a full report."

The plates for this denomination are five in number, numbered respectively 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. Plate No. 2 contained the error, which consisted in transferring the two official titles to the plate, which are used on the notes, instead of the one title used for the bonds. The other four plates were correct. The plate No. 2 was transferred with the title of "Treasurer of the United States" on its right-hand side, and "Register of the Treasury" on its left.

It should have been with "Register of the Treasury" on the right-hand side and none on the left. The plate was given to the superintendent of plate printing by the chief engraver on the 15th of March with the error upon it. The error was not discovered until after the first printing came from the "dyeing room" on the 19th of March.

Meanwhile 2,695 impressions had been printed. It was certainly an error, and an inexcusable one, for this division to permit these imperfect impressions to be delivered to the Register. My rule is that every plate, after it is reported finished by the chief engraver, has a final proof taken for my personal examination before going to the superintendent of plate printing. I have no reason to think that there was an exception in this case, except that the error is upon it. I remember examining and correcting $1,000 plates, but the precise number that I examined I cannot now tell. The existence of the error, after it was discovered, was not reported to me, or the incorrect impressions would have been punched and not delivered to the Register.

While I see no excuse for the error in this office, I cannot concur with the Register in thinking that there was "no neglect or fault" in his office that the error was not sooner discovered there. I cannot conceive how a person can, day after day, write his name over titles, when correct and incorrect are intermingled, (in the one case when the signature should have been over no title, and the pen crossed the erroneous title in writing,) without the difference being discovered.

But the proper matter for me to report upon is the cause and the remedy. The cause I have already stated. The only remedy, I believe, is, as fast as the holders discover the error, and notify the department of it, to request the bonds returned for substitution of a new one with like coupons attached. It is impossible now, by the numbers, or in any other way, to discover in whose possession the imperfect bonds are.

The difference between the number the Registrar now has on hand, and 2,695 impressions, will show the outstanding number. He is in error in supposing that the number is nearly 4,000.

The letter of the cashier and the report of the Register are herewith returned. I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. CLARK,

Chief of First Division.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,

Secretary of the Treasury.

JULY 5, 1864.

SIR : In compliance with your oral instructions, I have the honor to report, that the six per cent. coupon bonds due in 1881, issued under the act of March 3,

1863, for the seventy-five million loan, there have been delivered to the Register to this date :

Of 500's.....	$1,450,000
Of 1,000's.....	8,000,000
	<hr/> 9,450,000 <hr/>

The daily deliveries for the present can be :

Of 50's.....	$50,000
Of 100's.....	100,000
Of 5,000's.....	500,000
Of 1,000's.....	1,000,000
	<hr/> 1,650,000 <hr/>

These deliveries will increase as the additional plates, now nearly finished, are completed.

The registered bonds of the same issue will be ready this week.

Of the 10-40 bonds the manufacture is largely in advance of the requirements of the Register.

Of the six per cent. compound interest notes, there have been delivered to the Treasurer up to this date—

Of 10's.....	$580,000
Of 50's.....	1,470,000
Of 100's.....	2,280,000
Of 500's.....	7,000,000
	<hr/> 11,330,000 <hr/>

There can be delivered daily of them :

10's.....	$80,000
50's.....	200,000
100's.....	400,000
500's.....	2,000,000
	<hr/> 2,680,000 <hr/>

The delivery of these will also increase (as I am at present instructed) when the additional plates now in course of preparation are finished. Among these are plates for the denomination of $20.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. CLARK,

Chief 1st Division, National Currency Bureau.

Hon. W. P. FESSENDEN,
Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
National Currency Bureau, First Division, July 23, 1864.

SIR : I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a letter from Dr. Gwynn to the Secretary, dated July 21, 1864, accompanying a proposed modification and alteration of his contract for furnishing this bureau with paper, which has been referred to me for report.

He proposes:

First. The formal substitution of his national paper for the "membrane paper" of the contract, as per sample submitted November 11, 1863.

This substitute was examined and orally adopted by your predecessor, and I therefore respectfully recommend its formal recognition, as desired by Dr. Gwynn.

Second. He proposes that the price to be paid by the United States shall be 83½ cents per pound instead of the contract price.

The contract price was $12 per thousand sheets, of twenty pounds per thousand, as a maximum, with a sliding scale governed by quantity delivered to reach $8 as a minimum. The maximum contract price would therefore be 60 cents per pound, and the minimum 40 cents.

Your predecessor had orally assented to an increase of $3 per thousand for the substitute paper, which would give 75 cents per pound as a maximum and 55 cents as a minimum.

I conceive the department pledged to pay this $3 extra, though it is not of record. The advance was assented to by the late Secretary in my presence. But Dr. Gwynn now asks that it may be made 83½ cents per pound for all deliveries irrespective of quantity.

There are many reasons why the price by the pound is better than by the sheet. It is more equitable to both the government and the contractor, and more convenient for the keeping and adjustment of accounts.

It is for the Secretary to decide whether any greater advance than is already assented to shall be allowed. The main reason for the advance, as stated in Dr. Gwynn's letter, is the advance in the price of material. Material has doubtless advanced a much greater pro rata than Dr. Gwynn now asks. To pay a higher price is simply a discretion with the Secretary, and this report is submitted upon the second proposition, without recommendation, but simply with a statement of facts for the Secretary's information.

Third. Dr. Gwynn proposes a change in the price of machinery.

He has, in correspondence, notified the department of an enhanced cost and the reasons therefor, but the matter has not, to my knowledge, been presented to your predecessor, and no action has been taken thereon by the department.

The contract provides that the machinery shall be put in at the expense of the government, but that its cost over and above $2,500 for each machine capable of producing 8,000 sheets in ten hours shall be charged to Dr. Gwynn and be deducted from monthly payments to be made for the paper. He now desires to change their price to $5,000, and the production to 4,000 sheets in ten hours.

The change in the rate of production is consequent upon the change from membrane to national paper. The same machinery which would produce 8,000 sheets of membrane will produce only 4,000 of national. It is therefore, in my judgment, equitable that the change of rate of production should be made.

The change of price is purely a matter of discretion with the Secretary. The reasons for it are given in Dr. Gwynn's letter of the 21st instant; my duty is simply to report the facts for the Secretary's consideration, without comment. It is a fact patent to all in the trade that the cost of machinery has more than doubled since the contract was made. It is also a fact that the delay was caused by the doctor's imprisonment on the department's order on what have proven to be malicious and groundless charges. I also believe it to be a fact that the machinery will cost now more than $5,000.

The letter and accompanying papers of Dr. Gwynn are herewith returned.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

S. M. CLARK,

Chief of First Division.

Hon. W. P. FESSENDEN,
Secretary of the Treasury.

P. S.—Dr. Gwynn also submitted another proposal, which has been referred to me, looking to the future wants of the government for paper, the consideration of which will depend upon the Secretary's action upon this report, and I, therefore, delay any report thereon until after his first application is decided. It looks to the making of paper for issue, not used as circulating mediums, (such as drafts, checks, revenue stamps, &c., &c., &c.,) at a less price and possessing different attributes.

AUGUST 29, 1864.

SIR : In reply to your oral inquiry, I have the honor to report that the plates for the 5-20 bonds, fourth series, could be altered for a new issue, according to your suggestion, so as to deliver to the printers one-third of the number required in ten (10) days, another third in eight (8) days thereafter, and the remaining third in seven (7) days more, making a little more than three weeks.

The printing would commence immediately on the delivery from the engravers of the first plate—and an issue of twenty (20) millions, completed within a week after the delivery of the last plate—say about one month from the receipt of an order to commence the work.

The issue to be apportioned as follows, which is pro rata with the issue of the fourth (4th) series of five-twenties (5-20's) viz :

$50's.....	$200, 000
100's.....	1, 300, 000
500's.....	3, 000, 000
1, 000's.....	15, 500, 000
	<hr/>
	20, 000, 000
	<hr/>

If the years only are altered, and not the months, it would anticipate the above delivery four (4) or five (5) days, or about one week.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
S. M. CLARK.

Hon. W. P. FESSENDEN,
Secretary of the Treasury.

SEPTEMBER 16, 1864.

SIR : I am in receipt of your communication of this day's date, purporting to enclose a memorandum of proposed modifications in Dr. Gwynn's contract for national paper.

You have omitted to enclose the memorandum, but the omission is unimportant, as I am already informed of all the details.

I have reported on this subject to the honorable Secretary of the Treasury, and have nothing to add to that report, nor any changes to make in it, except to correct an error in quoting the minimum price for the paper. The error will, doubtless, be apparent to you upon its perusal in connexion with the contract, and I respectfully refer you to this report for the facts in the case.

You now ask for my opinion upon these facts. In so doing you have, doubtless unintentionally, overlooked the expressed reason which induced me to ask a reference of these matters to you, instead of adjusting them myself in the ordinary course of the business of this office. My object in this reference was to avoid passing upon any of Dr. Gwynn's matters involving equities. All the facts in my possession in reference to any of Dr. Gwynn's accounts I will cheerfully impart to you whenever your time and convenience will permit, but you will excuse me from expressing mere opinions.

I prefer, under existing circumstances, that you should render your decision unbiased by my opinion, or by any other shaping of facts from me than their simple narration.

Very respectfully,

S. M. CLARK.

Hon. H. A. RISLEY.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,

September 5, 1864.

SIR: I am in receipt from you of a copy of the letter of George D. Baldwin, making sundry charges against me, with your request that I would furnish you with the facts in the case, so that you may, understandingly, prepare your opinion for the Secretary.

Mr. Baldwin's chief charge is, that I have "appropriated his property," i. e., taken the "stock" used by him in making $500 and $1,000 bond plates, unlawfully.

The groundlessness of this charge is best proven by the record. His offer to sell this stock to the department was dated June 6, 1863, and is as follows:

NEW YORK, June 6, 1863.

SIR: I do not know what price to charge for the stock to be used on the $1,000 and $500 coupon bonds, but beg leave to say there need be no difficulty on that score, and hereby offer that James Duthie and James Ourdan say what it should be, or, rather than any difficulty about it, let it go scot free to government, and I have a chance to show what I can do to help you in your undertaking and creditably to myself.

Faithfully,

GEORGE D. BALDWIN.

S. M. CLARK,

Treasury Department, Washington.

After the delivery of the stock it was appraised by Messrs. Duthie & Ourdan. They appraised it at $2,165, but upon my report, the valuation was more than doubled.

My report was as follows:

FEBRUARY 1, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to report that Mr. Duthie and Mr. Ourdan, under the Secretary's instructions of the 25th ultimo, have appraised the stock of Mr. Baldwin for $500 and $1,000 notes, and their appraisement amounts to the sum of $2,165.

This appraisement is, as all experts would make it, the absolute net cost to Mr. Baldwin, without any allowance for risks, contingencies, and profits.

I should think it not an injustice either to the government or Mr. Baldwin to double this valuation for the purpose of arriving at a fair price for the work.

The Continental Company were paid $4,650 for the stock of the two bonds executed by them, viz., $50 and $100 bonds.

It may not be deemed improper, under the established policy of the department, "to make no distinction between the engraving companies," to pay Mr. Baldwin the same price for the stock of the two bonds executed by him as was paid to the Continental Company for the two bonds executed by them.

Mr. Baldwin's stock is, in my judgment, more valuable than the Continental Company's.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
S. M. CLARK.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Upon this report he was paid, February 2, $4,650.

This payment is for the stock which he now claims that I have "appropriated."

An outline history of his connexion with the department will give you some idea of the "facts in the case."

When paper issues were first contemplated by the department, proposals were invited from different engravers. Among others, Mr. Baldwin made proposals. The matter was referred by Secretary Chase to Mr. Cisco. After careful inquiry and examination, Mr. Cisco reported that Mr. Baldwin was not a proper person to be employed, that he was unreliable, and his employment would only lead the department into difficulties and disappointments.

Mr. Chase did not employ him.

When I was placed in charge, Mr. Baldwin came to me, alleged that injustice had been done him, and by his specious manners, and air of injured innocence, my sympathies were enlisted in his behalf. I reported to Mr. Chase that I feared injustice had been done Mr. Baldwin, and asked his permission to give him a trial. The request was many times repeated by me, and after a period Mr. Chase reluctantly gave his assent that trial should be made.

I accordingly contracted with him for the plates and stock for the $500 and $1,000 bonds of the fifth series of 5-20 bonds.

He agreed to begin the delivery "by the 22d of June, and complete it by the 16th of July, or sooner."

He failed utterly to do this, and delivery of the plates was not completed until September, nor of the stock until January.

Meanwhile a very protracted correspondence was had with him—letters passing every few days, which produced no result.

Mr. Cisco was then instructed, personally, to enforce the delivery, and tried many times, unsuccessfully, and finally asked to be relieved from any further attempt, as he only received evasive and frivolous excuses from Mr. Baldwin. An officer of one of the other bank note companies was then requested to take the matter in hand, but he also failed to force Mr. Baldwin to fulfilment. I was sent by the Secretary to New York to attend to it, and on my return, reported as follows:

[Extract.]

SEPTEMBER 10, 1863.

SIR :

Mr. Cisco has repeatedly called upon him unsuccessfully for the work, and reports that Mr. Baldwin made most vague and unsatisfactory excuses for their non-delivery.

I called upon him almost daily while in New York, and made specific demands for them, and each time was put off with specious or frivolous excuses.

His last promise was to bring them to the car to me on the night I left. He has since written, under date of August 22d, that he was at the cars and could not find me—that he would bring them here when he came. He has not been here to my knowledge, and I have therefore to this hour been unable to transfer any new plates. I perceive no other way than to enforce their delivery by process of law, for the public business is greatly hindered from the non-fulfilment of his engagement.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
S. M. CLARK.

Hon. S. P. CHASE, Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. Chase subsequently wrote as follows:

SEPTEMBER 19, 1863.

SIR: On Monday last, the 14th instant, I prepared a letter to the district attorney for the southern district of New York, instructing him to commence proceedings against you for the non-delivery of the stock used in making the $500 and $100 bond-plates of the third series, but refrained from mailing it, as I was that day informed that you had arrived in this city for the purpose of delivering the stock.

I now learn, to my surprise, that you have left the city after delivering a portion of it, and unless an immediate and complete delivery is made, my letter of instructions alluded to will be mailed.

I am advised that you have been furnished with a written schedule of what is still lacking, and I will wait only until Friday the 22d instant for you to complete the delivery according to that schedule.

Very respectfully,

S. P. CHASE,
Secretary of the Treasury.

GEO. D. BALDWIN, Esq.,
41 Dey street, New York.

Mr. Baldwin came on Friday and promised full compliance in few days, &c. More time was again given him, but delivery was still withheld, and not completed until January, when I reported as follows:

JANUARY 22, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to report that Mr. George D. Baldwin, after five months of delay, has finally delivered all the stock for the $500 and $1,000 bonds of the third series. There is no good reason why their delivery should not have been immediate upon the close of the work.

The original work is now in the possession of the custodian of the rolls and dies, but I am aware, and it is proper so to report, that Mr. Baldwin has duplicates of portions of it, i. e., what is technically termed "stock."

The Secretary is aware that from the original "shells," results almost kaleidoscopic are attained, easily traceable by an expert to the original "shells." Some such results from these original "shells" Mr. Baldwin has exhibited here since the delivery of the "shells."

I do not think there is any remedy for this. I find Mr. Baldwin totally unreliable; I have no belief in his assertions.

I am prepared, from my intercourse with him, to add my testimony to that of Mr. Cisco as to his total unreliability, and the impolicy and impropriety of employing him upon government work.

I respectfully recommend that Mr. Duthie and Mr. Ourdan be directed to appraise this stock, and upon their appraisal that Baldwin's account with the department be permanently closed.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
S. M. CLARK.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,
Secretary of the Treasury.

The appraisal was made, and the stock paid for as above reported.

Upon final delivery Mr. Baldwin desired the stock to be kept separate from the other stock of the department until he could show its superiority.

The Secretary assented to this, as I told him that for a time no hindrance to the public business would thereby ensue. I accordingly sealed up the stock and placed it in General Spinner's custody.

When it was required for public use Mr. Baldwin was so notified, but failed to produce anything to convince the Secretary that it should still be kept separate, and he accordingly wrote to Mr. Baldwin as follows:

NOVEMBER 9, 1863.

SIR: * * * * *

As you requested, I have kept the lathe work delivered by you separate from the other stock of the department under seal. There must be a period when such separate custody must cease, and it is now necessary to use a portion of it on the fourth series of bonds. The separate custody will therefore cease on Thursday morning, the 12th instant.

Very respectfully,

S. P. CHASE,
Secretary of the Treasury.

GEO. D. BALDWIN, Esq.,
41 Dey street, New York.

The Secretary waited until Friday, the 13th instant, and then directed the stock to be placed with the custodian of rolls and dies for government use, and it has since been thus used.

This is a meagre outline of one branch of the embarrassment and trouble he has caused the department by his total unreliability, and total disregard of his word and of facts. You can verify it from the records whenever you will read them.

All his charges are alike groundless. I have no time to waste in refuting them in detail. The correspondence disproving them is very voluminous, scattered through a large record, and is at your service for inspection whenever you desire it.

If you render a written opinion to the Secretary, I will thank you to accompany it with this report.

Very respectfully,

S. M. CLARK.

HANSON A. RISLEY, Esq.,
Treasury Department.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, NATIONAL CURRENCY BUREAU,
First Division, September 26, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of Assistant Secretary Harrington's directions to make to you "a full report of all facts concerning the furnishing to this department by Dr. S. Gwynn of hydrostatic presses and machinery connected therewith, and also your (my) opinion as to the proper manner of adjusting Dr. Gwynn's accounts which remain outstanding against the department for articles thus furnished; and making statement of such written and oral communications as you (I) may have had with Dr. Gwynn in reference thereto, and as may be desirable for a proper understanding and adjustment of said accounts by the officer to whom they are referred for that purpose."

In reply, I have the honor to report as follows:

After the early experiments had been made with a small hydraulic press, sufficiently extensive to prove the probable feasibility of printing dry paper by direct pressure, with the aid of peculiar beds and blankets, it was decided to try the experiment on a larger scale, with such sized presses as would be required in practice.

We first attempted to get these presses made at some large machine shops in New York, but the prices asked were higher than I deemed a fair price for the work.

After inquiry of different machine makers in the northern cities by Dr. Gwynn, he advised me that he could procure the presses by private bargain, (if it was not known that they were for the government,) cheaper than they could be obtained by an officer of the government, and he finally ascertained that he could get them at an average of $1,100 each.

I then agreed to take from him twenty (20) presses at the price of $1,100 each.

Dr. Gwynn afterwards ordered fifty (50) more presses on his own responsibility, because, as he alleged, he was satisfied that government would ultimately want them, and that they could not in any other way be procured as cheaply. I declined authorizing the additional fifty presses until the method had been fully tested by the twenty originally ordered.

Subsequently, but before the delivery of the presses, some gross misrepresentations having been made in reference to them by a Mr. Wilson, president of one of the bank note companies, in a letter to the Secretary, Dr. Gwynn submitted a proposal, in the form of a contract, in writing, dated August 29, 1863, which is herewith transmitted. By this proffered contract he not only proposed to furnish the presses at $1,100 each, but also the valves at $75 per set, and other attachments at specified prices, together with the receivers, the latter to be charged at a pro rata price per press.

I had already assented to the price of $1,100 per press, and then made no objection to the smaller items of his proposal; but I objected to any pro rata price per press for the receivers, preferring to pay actual cost. So that, although the proposed contract was signed by him, it never, in point of fact, became perfected; for our minds never met on all the details, and it was only signed by himself. I regarded it, therefore, more as an exponent of what Dr. Gwynn desired, or was willing to do, than as a contract to control a settlement.

The presses and receivers were built from Dr. Gwynn's designs. I did not dictate proportions, or material, because of my confidence in Dr. Gwynn's large experience, and because I knew his mechanical attainment to be superior to my own; but more particularly because of his (oral, and now admitted) agreement, that if they broke in any part he would replace them. They proved, in practice, to be deficient in strength. Many of them broke under the pressure to which he originally subjected them, and all would break if subjected to like pressure. The form and strength of the receivers were also designed by Dr. Gwynn, without my interference with the details. These also proved too weak, and broke; but I subsequently replaced the weak parts with a different metal, and they then safely withstood the originally designed pressure. But his method of arrangement proved faulty, the weights being suspended by iron cables, which parted necessarily under the peculiar action to which they were subjected. I have since put in new receivers, with weights suspended vertically by iron rods, and one of them is now in daily successful use.

After Dr. Gwynn's arrest, when the details of dry-printing machinery came more directly under my supervision, I changed the amount of pressure for the unbroken presses, so as only to print the smaller plates upon them, and they have, so far, withstood that pressure. I am now replacing the weaker parts of some of broken presses with cylinders of increased strength and better metal. If they then stand the required pressure for the larger plates, I propose to repair all the broken ones in like manner. If they do not, the presses must then be entirely remodelled to get greater strength, which I can readily do, as the existing fault is too great economy of metal in the original design.

Dr. Gwynn has rendered bills for the presses authorized by me, and has been paid for them at the rate of $1,100 each. He has also been paid for 20 of the 50 ordered by himself, (at the same rate,) which had been put in place. He also rendered bills for receivers fitting for them, for which he has been paid at their alleged cost to him.

His outstanding bills rendered are for the remainder of the presses delivered and for receivers delivered. He also asks payment for presses and attachments made and not delivered, but ready for delivery.

These are the principal facts in the case. I am not aware of any other "facts," or other "oral or written communications in reference to Dr. Gwynn's accounts for hydraulic presses," which are necessary "for a proper understanding and adjustment of his accounts by the officer to whom they are referred for that purpose."

I am further directed to give my "opinion as to the proper method of adjusting these accounts."

There are but two main points to consider in adjusting his account :

First. Shall the department pay for the unauthorized work delivered, and receive and pay for that unauthorized, but not delivered ?

Second. If the department so receives and pays, shall the amount already expended by the government, and the necessary amount to be expended to put the presses and receivers in working condition, be deducted from his bills before payment ?

Upon the first point, my opinion is that it would be equitable to receive and pay for the work, for the following reasons :

1. The experiment is sufficiently successful to justify the purchase of the full number of presses ordered. The apparatus is not perfected. Much remains to be done. But the fact that dry printing can be done by this method, better and more economically than wet printing, is demonstrated beyond all cavil or doubt.

2. The cost, as invoiced, was less than was asked by other parties, and much less than they can now be bought for, owing to the great increase in the price of materials and labor. Dr. Gwynn alleges that the invoices are the total cash cost, without any profit to himself. I have no reason to doubt this allegation. On the contrary, I have reason to believe that the amount of his bills would not cover all his cost, as he paid his own expenses while assisting me in experimenting, and received no pay or emolument of any kind that I am aware of for many months' assiduous devotion to this work.

Upon the second point—assuming that the department receives all the work—shall the cost of repairs, substitutions, &c., past and to come, be deducted from his bills ?

The reasons why such deductions should be made are, that he agreed to make good all breakage, and that it was, in a great degree, owing to this agreement that I made no change in his details, for I then differed from him, and still so differ, as to the kind of material to be used in the manufacture. He was, and still is, clearly and decidedly of the opinion, founded on his alleged large experience with hydrostatic presses, that cast-iron was the best and most suitable material to be used for them. I was, and am, as clearly and decidedly of opinion that it is not, but that wrought-iron, or some other more ductile metal, is the best and most suitable. I am still clear that if wrought-iron had been used at first, though the original cost might have been more, the ultimate cost would have been less.

So that, if the breakage is not charged to him, the department will be put to large cost for my reliance upon his agreement, when my judgment did not accord with his.

On the other hand, the reasons why he should not be charged this breakage are:

1st. He exercised his best judgment gratuitously, and in so doing made and anticipated making no profit to himself on the machinery.

2d. Since the period of his agreement to make good the breakage, and between the time when the necessity for the fulfilment of that agreement became apparent and the present time, a long interval has occurred, during which materials and labor have so enormously advanced that to replace the weak part of the presses with new ones of sufficient strength would probably cost as much as his original charge for the press. This delay is in no wise his fault. On the contrary, it is the department's fault: First, by authorizing his arrest and imprisonment on charges proven to be utterly false and malicious; and, second, by delaying action upon his claim to this time; a period of more than eight months having elapsed from the time of his release from this unjust confinement to the present time.

Upon the second point for consideration in adjusting the claim of Dr. Gwynn, I am therefore of the opinion, based upon the above facts and reasons, that he should not be charged with these breakages, but that he should be paid the original cost of the machinery, presses, &c.; but, in view of the government's thus paying the cost of his experiments, I am further of opinion that Dr. Gwynn should, in consideration of such payment, convey to the department all his right in and to the inventions, for government use only, in the treasury building, or any other building erected by the department for the preparation of its issues.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. CLARK,

Chief 1st Division National Currency Bureau.

Hon. WM. P. FESSENDEN,
Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, NATIONAL CURRENCY BUREAU,
First Division, October 7, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to report the following facts and opinions for the Secretary's consideration, in reference to sealing bonds and notes:

The act of Congress approved August 5, 1861, (Stat. at Large, vol. 12, p. 313,) provided "that no treasury notes issued under any act shall require the seal of the Treasury Department." This was an obvious necessity, in view of the great number of notes to be issued.

When it was subsequently decided, at my suggestion, to print instead of writing the signatures upon the notes, I recommended, as further necessity, an imprint of a copy of the treasury seal on each plate.

This was authorized by act of Congress approved February 25, 1862, (Stat. at Large, vol. 12, p. 346.) In draughting this section of the act, I was careful so to word it that it should not conflict with the act of August 5, 1861, and yet be practicable and economical in execution, and therefore wrote, as it now stands, that they should bear, "as evidence of lawful issue, the imprint of a copy of the seal of the Treasury Department, which imprint shall be made under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, after the said notes and bonds shall be received from the engravers, and before they are issued."

From that time to the present this law has been fully complied with.

The act of Congress approved June 30, 1864, ch. 172, sec. 4, was draughted by me in accordance with the acts already quoted, and so as not to conflict in their execution with any existing law; but an insert was made by Congress, at line six, relating to coupons and registered bonds, as follows:

"And shall bear, as evidence of lawful issue, the imprint of the seal of the department, to be made under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, in a room set apart especially and exclusively for that purpose, under the care of some person directly appointed by him."

This is precisely what had been done, and what is still done, with the coupon and registered bonds.

But the same section contains another point, at its close, in reference to the "treasury notes and United States notes authorized by this act," as follows :

"And shall bear, as further evidence of lawful issue, the imprint of the seal of the Treasury Department, to be made under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, as before directed."

I cannot, therefore, perceive why this law does not require all the treasury notes and United States notes issued under the act of June 30, 1864, to be imprinted with the treasury seal, the same as the coupon and registered bonds.

The questions naturally occur, What is the treasury seal ? and, Can the treasury have more than one seal ?

I have carefully examined all the laws relating to the subject from the time of the act establishing the Treasury Department, approved September 2, 1789, to the present time, and find no authority for creating a seal for the Treasury Department.

The seals of other departments are created by law, but no provision is anywhere made for a treasury seal, although, in different laws, a treasury seal is frequently alluded to. Nor does it appear, from any record that I can find in the department, when, or where, or by whom, or by whose authority, or from whose design, the seal now used in the department was made.

It seems, therefore, that we must assume the seal now in use to be the seal de facto, and the only seal.

If this view be correct, then the present seal of the treasury (not a copy of it) should be imprinted on each note issued under the act of June 30, 1864, as well as upon each bond.

This, though not absolutely impracticable, is nearly so. It cannot be done without fatal delay to the business of the department, besides seriously injuring the notes for circulation, as the imprinting crushes the paper, and practically destroys it where the imprint is made. A note so imprinted would be in two parts very soon after it went into active circulation.

I have taken the liberty to thus formally call the Secretary's attention to this matter, to the end that I may be specially instructed if any change of my present duty is required, or desired, in preparing the issues. If the seal is to be so imprinted upon the notes, it should in my judgment be done after the issues are delivered by me to the Treasurer, as is now done upon the bonds, after their delivery by me to the Register.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. CLARK,

Chief 1st Division N. C. B.

Hon. W. P. FESSENDEN,
Secretary of the Treasury.

NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES.

LETTER

OF THE

PRESIDENT OF THE NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES,

TRANSMITTING

The annual report of the operations of the National Academy of Sciences during the year 1864.

FEBRUARY 13, 1865.—Laid upon the table and ordered to be printed.

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 13, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to submit herewith a report of the operations of the National Academy of Sciences during the past year, in conformity with the requirements of the act of incorporation, approved March 4, 1863.

Very respectfully,

A. D. BACHE,

President National Academy of Sciences.

Hon. SCHUYLER COLFAX,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES,

Washington, D. C., February 11, 1865.

SIR: In accordance with the provisions of the constitution of the National Academy of Sciences, (Article v, section 6,) the following report of the proceedings and labors of the academy during the year 1864 is respectfully submitted to Congress:

Since the presentation of the first annual report, (March 28, 1864,) three committees have been appointed by the president of the academy, to examine into and report upon subjects submitted to the academy by different departments of the government of the United States.

On the 5th of January, 1864, a letter was received from the Acting Surgeon

General, J. K. Barnes, inviting the academy to investigate and report upon the best methods of testing the purity of whiskey employed for medicinal purposes. A committee was in consequence appointed, consisting of the following members:

B. SILLIMAN, JR., Chairman.

JOHN TORREY,
R. E. ROGERS,

J. H. ALEXANDER,
J. L. LE CONTE.

On the 12th of March, 1864, the committee addressed a communication to the Acting Surgeon General, recommending that an appropriation of three thousand five hundred dollars ($3,500) be made to meet the expenses of the investigation. The recommendation of the committee was promptly adopted by the Acting Surgeon General, and the sum asked for placed in the hands of B. S. Satterlee, United States army, medical purveyor at New York, subject to the order of the committee. On careful examination of the subject, however, the committee became satisfied that no money was needed, and presented to the academy, January 6, 1865, a report, a copy of which is herewith submitted. (Appendix A.)

The report of the committee was adopted by the academy, and a copy was transmitted to the Surgeon General.

On the 29th of February, 1864, a communication was received from the Hon. Gideon Welles, Secretary of the Navy, inviting the appointment of a committee of three members of the academy, to act jointly with three members named by the department, and with three members of the Franklin Institute of Pennsylvania, for the promotion of the mechanic arts, to conduct, witness, and report upon experiments, which may be agreed upon by the committee, on the expansion of steam. The experiments are to be reported as early as practicable to the Navy Department, and to be submitted also to the National Academy of Sciences for its judgment and suggestions. The president of the academy appointed a committee, consisting of the following members:

FAIRMAN ROGERS, F. A. P. BARNARD, JOSEPH SAXTON.

The Navy Department named as members of the joint commission:

HORATIO ALLEN, Chairman.

C. H. DAVIS, Rear-Admiral U. S. N.

B. F. ISHERWOOD, Chief of Bureau of Steam Engineering.

The Franklin Institute named as members of the joint commission:

J. H. TOWNE, J. V. MERRICK, R. A. TILGHMAN.

On the 5th of January, 1865, the committee of the academy, through Mr. Saxton, reported progress. It is believed that the results of this investigation will be of great value in a scientific as well as practical point of view. (Appendix B.)

On March 30, 1864, the honorable S. P. Chase, Secretary of the Treasury, invited the appointment of a committee for the examination of aluminum bronze and other alloys for the manufacture of cent coins. The committee appointed by the president consisted of the following members:

JOHN TORREY,
JOSEPH HENRY,

WOLCOTT GIBBS,
F. A. P. BARNARD.

At the request of the department, A. D. BACHE was added to this committee.

On the 6th of August, 1864, the committee presented a report to the academy, which was adopted and ordered to be transmitted to the Secretary of the Treasury. A copy of this report is herewith submitted. (Appendix C.)

On April 30, 1864, the president received oral authority from the Assistant Secretary of the Navy to appoint a committee to examine and report on the explosion of the United States steamer Chenango, which occurred in the harbor of New York on the 15th of April, 1864.

The committee appointed consisted of:

J. F. FRAZER, Chairman,

FAIRMAN ROGERS,

L. M. RUTHERFURD.

The committee presented to the academy, on the 5th of August, 1864, a very elaborate report accompanied by drawings, a copy of which had been previously transmitted to the Navy Department. The report and a drawing are herewith submitted. (Appendix D.)

In addition to the above-mentioned reports, which belong to the year 1864, it is proper to mention in this place the report of the Committee on National Currency, appointed September 5, 1863, upon the application of the Honorable S. P. Chase, Secretary of the Treasury. The committee reported progress on the 7th of January, 1864, when the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That said committee be empowered to communicate directly with the Secretary of the Treasury, and to take order in reference to the matters intrusted to them.

Resolved, That the president of the academy communicate the foregoing resolution to the honorable Secretary of the Treasury.

On January 5, 1865, the chairman of the committee reported that the committee had made reports to the Secretary of the Treasury, as directed by the academy. From the nature of the subject intrusted to the consideration of the committee, it will be readily understood that the reports submitted to the Secretary of the Treasury were strictly confidential in their character. They were therefore not read to the academy, and for the same reasons are not appended to this report.

Since the presentation of the first report the annual of the National Academy for the years 1863-'64 has been prepared and published. Copies of the annual have, in accordance with a formal note of the academy, been distributed to the members of both houses of Congress, and also to the heads of the departments under the government of the United States.

At the two sessions of the academy held during the year 1864, twenty-five original memoirs were read, making in all about forty which have been presented to the academy during the three stated sessions which have been held since the meeting for organization.

None of these memoirs have been published, in consequence of the want of funds; and it is feared that a longer delay in publication will prevent the academy from receiving valuable communications which would be presented in case the academy should be able to commence the publication of its memoirs.

The current expenses of the academy, and the cost of publishing the Annual, have been defrayed from the contributions of members.

The academy, through the courtesy of the chairman of the Pacific Railroad Committee of the Senate, has been permitted to occupy rooms in the Capitol during each of the sessions held at Washington.

The vacancies in the academy have been filled by the election of Professor Leo Lesquereux, Dr. John C. Dalton, and Professor S. F. Baird.

The academy at the session of January, 1865, elected as foreign associates, Alexander Braun, G. B. Airy, Richard Owen, Fredrick Wöhler, R. I. Murchison, and Victor Regnault.

The Council for the year 1865 consists of Messrs. B. A. Gould, Lewis M. Rutherford, J. L. Le Conte, and J. P. Lesly.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON TESTS FOR PURITY OF WHISKEY.

To Professor B. Peirce, President pro. tem. National Academy of Sciences :

In the absence of the chairman of the committee on the question of tests for the purity of whiskey, the members who are present beg leave to report, that after giving the subject their earnest consideration, they have come to the conclusion that in the present condition of chemical science no tests can be employed for determining the age of whiskey and other spirituous liquors. The common adulterations are readily detected. It is not difficult, however, to obtain alcohol that is free from all deleterious admixture. They therefore recommend, for use in the military hospitals of the United States, pure alcohol, medicated with such additions as will qualify it for the particular object for which it is prescribed.

No portion of the appropriation granted by the Secretary of War has been expended by the committee.

REPORT OF THE OPERATIONS OF THE JOINT COMMISSION ON THE EXPANSION OF STEAM.

In February of 1864 a joint commission of nine was appointed by the Navy Department, consisting of three named by the Navy Department—Horatio Allen, esq., of the Novelty Works, New York, chairman; B. F. Isherwood, chief of Bureau of Steam Engineering, United States navy, and Rear-Admiral Charles H. Davis, chief of Bureau of Navigation; three by the president of the National Academy of Sciences—President F. A. P. Barnard, of Columbia College, New York; Joseph Saxton, esq., of Washington, and Professor Fairman Rogers, of the University of Pennsylvania; and three by the Franklin Institute of Philadelphia—J. H. Towne, esq., of J. P. Norris, Towne & Co., of Philadelphia; J. V. Merrick, esq., of Merrick & Sons, of Philadelphia, and R. A. Tilghman, esq., of Philadelphia.

This commission was appointed for the purpose of conducting a series of experiments for determining the relative advantage of using steam with different measures of expansion with apparatus already constructed by Mr. Allen in New York, in conformity with the act of Congress.

The first meeting of the commission was held at the Novelty Works in New York on the 29th of June, 1864, at which time a programme of the experiments proposed, with a description of the apparatus, was submitted by the chairman (Mr. Allen,) and adopted by the commission.

Up to this time the experiments have been carried on principally for the purpose of determining constants and perfecting the apparatus.

The operations have been greatly delayed by the necessity for moving the whole apparatus, owing to some difficulty about the occupancy of the ground upon which it was erected. It was put into running order in its new locality in October, 1864.

The ultimate object being to determine the measure of expansion which will give the best results in practice, an engine has been built with a stroke of twenty inches, and so arranged that cylinders of different diameters can be used in it and readily substituted one for the other.

These cylinders are of such diameters that the cubic capacity before cutting off is the same in each cylinder, as follows:

	Cubic feet.		Stroke.
Cylinder A, piston development is	1.3	when valve closes at	$\frac{1}{5}$
Cylinder B,do.....	1.3do.....	$\frac{2}{5}$
Cylinder C,do.....	1.3do.....	$\frac{3}{5}$
Cylinder D,do.....	1.3do.....	$\frac{4}{5}$
Cylinder E,do.....	1.3do.....	$\frac{1}{5}$

In other words, the quantity of steam of any given pressure used in each cylinder is the same for a single stroke, and the effect of the expanding steam is to be added to that of the full-pressure steam of the first part of the stroke.

The engine can be worked, therefore, with varying degrees of expansion, the quantity of steam per stroke being the same.

Arrangements are also provided for working the engine as a condensing or a non-condensing engine, and with all usual pressures. The boiler is arranged to insure a sufficient quantity of steam and regularity in the consumption of fuel. All precautions are taken to insure accurate measurements of quantities, height of water, pressure of steam, &c.

A magnetic regulator, invented by one of the assistant engineers, keeps the pressure of steam entering the cylinder quite constant. Every pains has been taken to eliminate constant errors and to insure uniformity of conditions.

Several methods were suggested for providing work to be done by the engine and for measuring the amount of that work.

The friction brake not being considered reliable or satisfactory under the circumstances, it was at first proposed to use a centrifugal pump by which water would be delivered at a known height; but many objections having been made to the use of rotary pumps by those whose opinions were solicited upon the subject, after a careful consideration, it was determined that fans in air should be substituted for pumps.

The fans are mounted on a line of shafting properly supported, and so arranged that any number of them may be run together. They are twenty-two in number, each eleven feet in diameter, with adjustable arms and vanes, and each enclosed in a chamber. All the fans and chambers are exactly similar in dimensions and arrangement.

It having been considered necessary that the fans should make a greater number of revolutions than the engine-shaft, a pinion on the fan-shaft was driven by a mortise wheel of four times the number of teeth in the engine-shaft; but the irregular wear of the teeth, and the want of smoothness of action, led to the abandonment of this arrangement, and when the apparatus was erected in its new position the gearing was suppressed, the fan-shaft put up in continuation of the engine-shaft, and the arms of the fan increased in length and doubled in number.

It was at first proposed to measure the power exerted by the number of fans driven at the given speed; but as it is evident that, on changing cylinders, a resistance of more than one additional fan, but less than two, might be required, it would be necessary to determine the value of this reduced fan. Mr. Allen, therefore, proposed to use for this purpose a dynamometer, designed by him, which is so arranged that the power developed in the engine is transmitted to the fans through a cord, the tension of which, with its velocity, gives the measure of the work done. This tension is measured and recorded automatically at each instant, and the velocity is recorded by proper counters.

This dynamometer affords not only the means of measuring the work, and comparing fans of different dimensions, but indicates immediately any change of resistance which may take place from failure of the oiling apparatus, from changes of atmospheric condition, or from other causes.

Since the dynamometer has been in place it has been run for the purpose of determining some minor details in connexion with it, but the indications are that the resistance offered by the fans will be very regular.

Precautions are taken that the oiling of the engine and fan-shaft shall be as perfect as possible, and the friction of all parts has been, or will be, carefully determined.

The apparatus is now in a condition to enable the commission to carry on the experiments for which it was devised, and which will be conducted as follows:

The full-stroke (nine-tenths) cylinder being in the engine, the number of fans driven at a certain speed, with known pressures and quantities of steam, will be determined, all conditions being carefully noted and recorded.

This cylinder being removed, the others using the same quantity of steam per stroke, but affording different measures of expansion, will be substituted, and the work done by each determined, the changes of cylinders being made in such series as will give the most accurate means of comparison. Of course, all such points as the amount of condensation in the cylinder and passages, or the effect of clothing and steam-jacketing, which affect in any way the economy of expansion, will be studied as well as circumstances will permit. The details of the experiments upon these points must be determined as the experiments proceed.

The experiments are conducted directly by five assistant engineers, detailed by the Navy Department, one of whom has the general charge of the operations, the other four keeping regular watches.

No results having yet been arrived at, this brief report is presented for the information of the academy.

Communicated by the secretary of the joint commission.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO TEST THE SUITABLENESS OF ALUMINUM BRONZE, FOR COINAGE AND OTHER PURPOSES.

After the academy adjourned in January last, the Secretary of the Treasury requested the appointment of a committee to report on the qualities of alloys of aluminum and copper, particularly with reference to their fitness for coins of low denominations. In accordance with a provision of the constitution of the academy, the president nominated the following members to take charge of the subject, and report thereon at the August meeting, viz: Professor Henry, Dr. Barnard, Dr. Gibbs, and Dr. Torrey. A meeting of the committee was held at Washington in April last, and a plan of operations agreed on. A bar of alloy, consisting of nine parts of copper and one of aluminum, was prepared by Mr. Saxton, and sent by permission of the Secretary of the Treasury to the director of the mint, with a list of experiments to be made on the same. The committee provided other bars of aluminum bronze, containing various proportions of aluminum, with a view of determining their strength, specific gravity, power of resisting corrosive materials, &c., but at this stage of their proceedings they received a late number of Dingley's Polytechnic Journal, containing a valuable paper by Moreau on the alloys of aluminum and copper, so complete, that all the questions submitted to the committee, except those relating to the fitness of those alloys for coinage, are fully answered. It only remained for them to submit to the academy the report of the assayer of the mint, who superintended the experiments made on the bronze, according to the instructions received from the committee. This report is herewith offered.

JOSEPH HENRY.

F. A. P. BARNARD.

NEW HAVEN, CONNECTICUT, August 4, 1865.

ASSAYER'S OFFICE, UNITED STATES MINT,

June 8, 1864.

DEAR SIR: A few weeks since you placed in my hands a bar of aluminum bronze, with two letters from the Secretary of the Treasury and from Professor Joseph Henry, (writing on behalf of a Committee of the National Academy,) requesting certain manipulations to be made, with a view to testing the properties of that alloy, specially with reference to its use for coinage.

The proportion of the alloy was not stated; but I found it to contain 9.8 per cent. of aluminum, and have no doubt it was intended for 90, aluminum 10. The specific gravity I found to be 7.63.

The original bar was melted and cast into a cent ingot; the melting required about the same temperature as for tin bronze. It did not turn out a clear, smooth bar, apparently from the oxide preventing a smooth flow in contact with the mould.

In the process of rolling, this ingot was compared with one of our cent bronze, (95 copper, 3 tin, 2 zinc.) The circumstances of rolling and annealing being the same, on the fifth passage through the rolls the aluminum bronze had become so rigid and unyielding, and cracked to such a degree, as to prevent further operation; whilst the other was continued to the gauge required for the cent flanchet. At the fifth rolling the aluminum bronze became detached in plates of oblique fracture (as will be seen by a specimen) similar to overheated brass.

The strip of aluminum bronze was then remelted, and annealed at every third passage through the rolls. It required seven annealings to reduce it to the cent gauge.

When at the thickness of one-tenth inch I took a portion, as directed, to be drawn into wire. To avoid injuring the texture, the piece was sawed out.

To draw a wire of the aluminum bronze from $\frac{1}{10}$ -inch diameter down to $\frac{1}{20}$ -inch required twenty-one draughts and four annealings.

To draw a wire of pure copper in the same terms required seven draughts, and no annealing after the initial one.

Cent flanchets were next cut out of the rolled ingot, and were annealed and pickled. In annealing to a low red heat, there was hardly any difference as to resisting oxidation, compared with the tin bronze. In pickling, two dips were used; the first with dilute sulphuric acid, and the second with nitric acid of 26 B. The flanchets were gauged to the thickness of the present bronze cent. Their average weight was about 39 grains, while that of the tin bronze is 48 grains.

A small number of pieces was then struck in two ways—with the steam press and with the lever press. In both cases it required unusual force. The head workman, who managed the striking of the lever press, and from whom the best specimens were expected, remarked after he was done, "I can do nothing with that metal;" meaning that he could not bring up the impression. This will be seen by examining the specimens.

The final experiment, as to the power of a coin of this alloy to resist wear or abrasion, was made at the special request of Professor Henry, and in the manner suggested by him. Ten coins of the legal tin bronze, ten of pure copper, and ten of the aluminum bronze, were first weighed by parcels, then placed in three boxes, and the boxes set in the agitator used in the humid assay. They were then shaken at the rate of about 250 movements in a minute (counting the up and down as one shake) for three hours. They were then taken out, the dust wiped off, and weighed. This operation was repeated for another three hours, and the weight again taken. The coins being much battered (as will be seen) and having undergone about 90,000 shakes, this was considered sufficient. The results were as follows: (The copper planchets were drawn about $3\frac{1}{2}$ grains light, but this does not affect the experiment.)

Kinds of coin.	First weight. Grains.	Second weight. Grains.	Third weight. Grains.
Legal bronze.....	482.4	482.0	481.7
Pure copper.....	445.2	444.3	443.7
Aluminum bronze.....	387.5	387.3	387.3

This is an interesting experiment, as showing the relative hardness and firmness of these metals or alloys.

It seems superfluous to say that there is a great variety in the kinds of wear, and that a coin is best tried by the kind of treatment to which it is usually subjected. The kind of attrition just dwelt upon has been several times suggested here in the course of years, so that it seems to be a natural first-thought. Yet, in point of fact, coins are rarely submitted to such an ordeal, except that they are occasionally poured from one bag or box into another.

The real wear of a coin is a composition of such particulars as these: the gentle rubbing of the human hand, searching out the table as well as the raised parts of the coin; the action of unctuous and saline excretions of the hand; and the more active chemical agencies which are met with in the market-stalls, and in the shops of a counter in a beer saloon.

One of the aluminum bronze coins was carried for a few hours in the closed hand, (a clean hand, but, of course, perspirative,) and in that time was utterly tarnished, as will be seen by the specimen sent.

I am not called upon to discuss the other aspects of aluminum coinage, and shall only say, in conclusion, that while the unalloyed metal possesses some very desirable properties (supposing it were cheap enough) for coinage, the aluminum bronze seems to have no fitness in any respect.

Next to a tractable alloy, and one that is agreeable to sight and touch, it is of all things desirable to have something that will not quickly or greatly tarnish. This, it must be owned, is hardly to be hoped for among the inferior metals, and it is well known that even standard silver will become foul and discolored.

Since these experiments have been concluded, I have been turning my attention to the binary alloys of copper and tin, with a view to find some proportion that would better resist tarnish than the new coinage, or any that has preceded it, and at the same time be sufficiently ductile. Such an alloy would be especially serviceable for a system of tokens of five and ten cents; for I have no idea of disturbing the present mixture for the one and two cent coins. I already feel some encouragement, and hope to be able to speak more definitely in time for the next annual report of the director of the mint.

I send a box by Adams Express, direct to Professor Henry, containing the following:

No. 1, a piece cut off the ingot; Nos. 2, 3, 4, rolled different stages; No. 5, tin bronze, rolled, (requested by Professor Henry;) No. 6, coins struck with lever-press; No. 7, do. do. with steam-press; No. 8, tin bronze coins, after shaking; No. 9, copper do. do.; No. 10, aluminum bronze do. do.; No. 11, aluminum bronze coin, held in the hand; Nos. 12 and 13, wire, aluminum bronze and copper; No. 14, the remnants, cast into a bar, (not with much care.)

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. R. ECKFELDT, Assayer.

Hon. JAMES POLLOCK, Director, &c.

APPENDIX D.

REPORT ON THE EXPLOSION OF A BOILER ON THE UNITED STATES GUNBOAT CHENANGO.

SIR: The undersigned, a committee appointed by you to examine and report upon the circumstances which attended the explosion of a boiler on the United States gunboat Chenango, in the harbor of New York, on the 15th of April last, and the causes of that explosion, respectfully report:

That as soon as possible after their appointment they met in New York, and proceeded to examine the condition of the exploded boiler, which was then at the Brooklyn navy yard, but that, in consequence of the time which had elapsed between the accident and the date of their appointment, it was not possible for them to examine any of the witnesses who had been on board of the boat at the time of the accident, Captain Fillebrown, who had been in command of the Chenango at the time of the disaster, having been ordered on duty elsewhere, and the only surviving assistant engineer on board having since resigned from the service. The committee, in determining the circumstances attending the explosion, was therefore compelled to procure a copy of the testimony given upon the coroner's inquest. The committee, however, personally examined Mr. Cragg, the engineer who superintended the hydraulic test of the boiler in question, and carefully inspected the boilers of the Chenango, both that which exploded and its mate, one of the committee having entered the boilers and made a minute and thorough examination of their internal condition. The committee was furnished with every facility for making the examination and collecting information by the officers of the navy yard, and have been supplied with the specifications under which the boiler was built, and tracings of the drawings of the boiler and of one of the broken stays by Mr. Isherwood, engineer-in-chief of the United States navy. It also owes to the kindness of the proprietors of the Morgan Iron Works an opportunity of carefully examining the working drawings of the boiler.

From the investigation which the committee has been able to make, the circumstances attending the explosion appear to be as follows: The boat left the navy yard at Brooklyn between 2 and 3 o'clock on Friday, the 15th of April; when below Governor's island Captain Fillebrown, who was then in the engine-room, noticed that the gauge indicated $26\frac{1}{2}$ lbs. of steam. The explosion took place about $4\frac{1}{4}$ o'clock, when the boat was between Fort Lafayette and Fort Hamilton. The captain had just left the engine-room, and the engineer in charge, Mr. Cahill, had reported to him that "the engine was working beautifully; that he was perfectly satisfied with its performance." An indicator-card found in the engine-room after the explosion bears the record "April 15th, 4 p. m., steam $34\frac{1}{2}$," showing that a short time before the explosion there was no excessive pressure in the boilers. Mr. De Luce, the engineer-in-chief of the Brooklyn navy yard, testified that when the boat came back to that yard the safety-valve was loaded to $39\frac{1}{2}$ lbs.

The boilers were of the form well known as the Martin boiler, and contained each five furnaces over each of which was a tube-box containing vertical tubes connected with the water-space of the boiler. The top of the boiler (which was flat) was three feet above the tops of the tube-boxes, to which it was stayed.

It was also somewhat strengthened by nine bars of T iron, $3\frac{1}{2}$ inches by $3\frac{1}{2}$ inches, running across the boiler in the direction of its breadth, which bars were bolted to the shell every two inches, and had attached to them the braces by which the top was sustained from the tube-boxes.

It is not considered necessary to describe the remaining arrangements of the boiler and its braces, as no other part than that alluded to in the description above gave way.

The braces mentioned above were sixty-four (64) in number, bolted or pinned to the web of the T iron twelve inches apart, and were arranged in pairs, each pair being attached by two bolts to one lug of the same section as the brace, viz: $1\frac{1}{4}$ inch by $\frac{5}{8}$ inch. These lugs were riveted to the sides of the tube-boxes, each by two $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch rivets, one above the other; so that the lug was fixed in a vertical direction, while the strain from the braces came obliquely upon them, thus throwing the whole stress of the tension upon one edge of the lug.

The lug-rivets being $\frac{3}{4}$ inch in diameter, the effective area of each lug was 0.64 inch, and the aggregate area of the thirty-two lugs, on which was to be borne the strain tending to force outward the top of the boiler, was 20.48 square inches.

On examination it was found that the top of the port boiler had been torn along the line of rivets running lengthwise of the boiler between the first and second tube-boxes, (counting from the after end of the boiler,) the rent extending from the steam-drum across the whole top and down the back of the boiler to below the top of the furnaces. The forward edge of this rent had been forced upwards, and the steam and water had been discharged from the opening thus made. There had been no displacement of the boiler and no indication of great mechanical force, except that the deck over the boiler had been broken up by the lifted part of the top of the shell. In the interior all the vertical staying had been broken, the lug, in the majority of cases, having parted at the upper rivet; while in thirteen cases the bolts by which the braces were attached to the lugs had been sheared. These bolts were $\frac{5}{8}$ inch in diameter; and as there were two of them for each pair of braces, the sum of the areas of resistance in each case was 0.62 square inches, or about the same cross-section as that of the lug. By the examination of the accompanying drawing of one of the broken lugs, it will be seen that the lug had been somewhat drawn down before it broke, a fact which the committee regard as of some importance, as indicating that the force which broke them was not suddenly applied, but was, to some extent, a gradual strain.

In looking for the cause of this sad accident, it may be remarked, in the first place, that there is no probability that the pressure in the boiler had been gradually raised above that which it was intended to carry. The testimony of Mr. De Luce as to the load upon the safety-valve, the declaration by Captain Fillebrown that the vessel was not running at speed, and, above all, the evidence of the indicator-cards, taken at 4 o'clock, and showing the steam at that time to have been $34\frac{1}{2}$ pounds, appear to the committee conclusive on this point.

But by far the commonest cause of explosion in steam-boilers in this country is the throwing water upon surfaces which have been allowed to become overheated by loss of contact with water. This may take place by a boiler lifting its water from narrow water-space, or from leaking, or, perhaps, from priming (that is, carrying water over with the steam) when this action is very great. Now, it is in evidence that, on the first hydraulic trial, this boiler leaked so badly that it was impossible to get the desired pressure upon it; but when this was corrected, on the second trial, it stood very well. Mr. Sullivan testifies to bad leaking afterwards, which, however, had also been remedied; and as this was well known to Mr. Cahill, the engineer in charge, he would necessarily be on his guard against this very common accident, and would scarcely have reported to his commanding officer that everything was working satisfactorily if his boilers were leaking badly. But, in the opinion of the committee, the best reason for setting aside this hypothesis is the character of the accident itself.

Experience has shown that explosions caused by throwing water upon hot surface are of the most violent character, the boiler being generally torn to pieces and the fragments thrown with great force and in every direction. This accident, on the other hand, appears to have been a simple rupture of the shell without any displacement of the boiler or injury to the other portions of it. Again, a force generated in this way is necessarily very sudden in its action—partakes, in fact, very much of the nature of a true explosion; but in this case, as has been before remarked, and as may be seen by the drawing of one of the broken lugs, the metal had been materially drawn down, indicating that the force in operation was comparatively slow, and had given time for this change in the iron.

In connexion with this subject, the attention of the committee was particularly directed to the discovery of signs of overheating of the boiler. Mr. De Luce testified before the coroner that the arch of one of the furnaces bore signs of having been very hot; but that is easily explicable, when we remember that by the rupture the boilers were emptied of their water below the level of the furnace crowns, and that a long time elapsed before the fire-room became sufficiently free from steam and hot water to allow the fires to be drawn. During the investigation before the coroner great stress appears to have been laid upon the scorching of the felt-jacketing of the boilers and the melting of the lead which also covered them, and these actions were attributed to overheated steam issuing from the rent. In regard to the lead, the committee can say nothing, the most careful investigation leading to the discovery of nothing that looked like melted lead, except a drop of solder at the end of a seam which had probably been left there when the seam was formed. As to the felt, the great mass of it was entirely unchanged, but around certain of the rivets was occasionally found a black coal-like mass marking a leak. A close examination of this substance under a lens convinced the committee that it was not the felt which was charred, but some foreign substance apparently of an oleaginous or resinous nature which had been absorbed by the felt and charred by the steam escaping from a leaking rivet. Probably it was the altered paint of the top of the boiler; at all events, there were no stronger evidences of it along the rent than elsewhere, and the removal of the deck from over the starboard boiler which had not exploded revealed the same appearance and in about the same degree. The committee, therefore, assert that they saw no proofs of overheating, excepting such as might have occurred, and probably did occur, after the escape of the water from the boiler.

But, indeed, any speculation upon the cause of the explosion is rendered useless by a simple calculation of the strength of the vertical staying of the boiler. If we estimate the flat top of the boiler at 112 square feet, or 16,128 square inches, the total pressure, at $34\frac{1}{2}$ pounds per square inch, will be 556,416 pounds to be borne by 20.48 square inches of iron, (which has been shown to have been the aggregate cross-section of the 32 lugs,) which is a tension of 27,100 pounds per square inch. This is a heavier strain than should be put on iron even in structures where everything can be made to bear evenly and without jerks. It must also be remembered that the oblique strain of the braces upon the lugs caused the greater part of this tension to be borne by the section or one side only of the rivet, so that the lug was probably strained almost to its ultimate strength. If in this condition of things any one lug parts, all the rest might necessarily follow, and the rent in the shell will ensue.

The bolts by which the braces were attached to the lugs having a double shear (the lug being embraced by the braces) should have been twice as strong as the lugs, provided the shearing and tensile strength per square inch of cross-section be the same; but the strength of the bolts and of the lugs were so nearly the same that when the upper bolt was not broken it was always bent.

If it be asked how, under such conditions, the system stood the hydraulic test at 60 pounds, the answer will be found in the statement of Mr. Cragg, the engineer in charge, that it was subjected to the pressure only for a moment. In fact, Mr. Cragg stated to the committee that several of the braces were broken in the port boiler and were repaired after the test; and the committee found several in each boiler attached by screw-bolts, which were probably those ruptured during the trial. Doubtless, at the same time, many, if not all, of the remainder were overstrained. If, as was testified to by the foreman of the Morgan Works, and as the appearance of the iron rendered probable, the lug were punched cold, considerable injury must thus have been done to the fibre of the iron, and an additional source of weakness introduced.

The committee are, therefore, unanimously of opinion that the rupture of the shell of the boiler of the Chenango was caused by the insufficiency of the vertical stays, by which the top of the boiler was fastened to the tube-boxes to withstand the pressure for which the boiler was intended, and that these stays were both deficient in number and injudiciously arranged.

Perhaps this report ought to close here. It is certainly no part of the duty of the committee to discuss the question, much vexed before the coroner, as to the efficiency or danger of this peculiar form of boiler. Whatever defects it may have were not developed here, the boiler having given way from defective circumstances. But it is scarcely possible to close the report without expressing an opinion as to whether the fault lay on the specification, or in the neglect to comply with its requisitions. The portion of the specification which bears on the matter is found on page 14, and is in these words: "The boilers to be stiffened in the direction of their breadth, at top and sides, down to top tube-plate, with T iron placed every 12 inches, to which the bracing will be attached. The T iron to be riveted to shell every 4 inches, rivets on opposite sides of the web, making joints, so as to make the T iron attached every 2 inches. The T iron to be 3 inches by 3 inches by $\frac{1}{2}$ inch. The shell to be braced at points not exceeding 12 inches between centres with $1\frac{1}{2}$ inch diameter rods of the best quality wrought-iron and thoroughly secured." This would require over a hundred braces. If we assume 90 as the number expected by the engineer-in-chief, the aggregate of cross-section to resist the strain 159.03 square inches, or about 3,500 lbs per square inch. Or, if we assume the area of the shell on which the pressure was exerted, to be 17 feet 3 inches by 9 feet 3 inches, (22.997 square inches,) the tensile strength would still be only 5,058 lbs. per square inch, or about one-eighth the average strength of commercial iron. This is within the safe limit. But it must be noticed that this calculation makes no allowance for rivet-holes, and the specification has been taken as giving the area of cross-section at the weakest point of the brace. It seems perfectly evident that when the braces were required to be "thoroughly secured," it was meant that every point of the bracing should have a strength equivalent to that here given. This is clearly not the case when two braces are united to one lug of only the same cross-section as the brace.

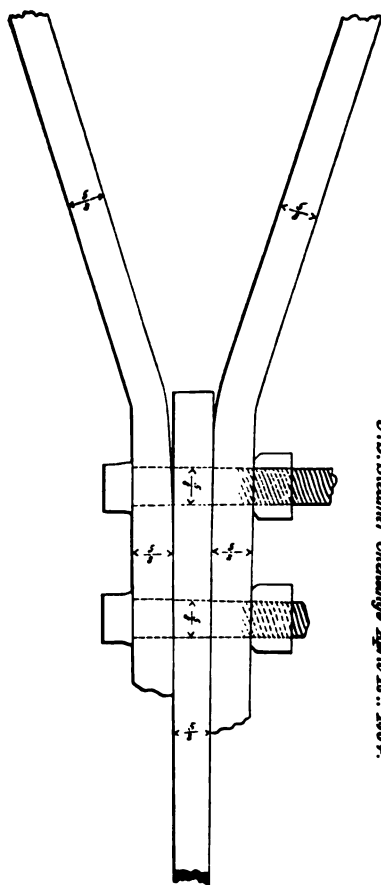

The committee are, therefore, of opinion that the boiler was not braced in accordance with the specifications, and that this difference was the cause of the disaster.

In conclusion, the committee would respectfully call attention to the fact that, in the system of bracing required by the specification, by far the weakest point is the attachment of the brace to the T iron. When the bolt-hole for the upper end of the brace is made in the vertical rib of the T iron, there is not enough of iron left below to resist the strain for which the brace is calculated. There should be at least two inches of $\frac{1}{2}$ inch iron below the hole, or the thickness of the web should be proportionally increased. In the boiler of the Chenango the dimensions were $3\frac{1}{2}$ by $3\frac{1}{2}$, in place of 3 by 3 inches, as called for by the specification. All which is respectfully submitted.

An estimate for an appropriation to pay William Sawyer and others the value of certain lands in Auglaize county, in the State of Ohio.

FEBRUARY 14, 1865.—Referred to the Committee of Ways and Means and ordered to be printed.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C., February 11, 1865.

SIR: In accordance with the provisions of the act of Congress approved July 2, 1864, entitled "An act for the relief of William Sawyer and others, of the State of Ohio," I have the honor to report that, under authority of that act, Henry M. Helm, esq., of St. Mary's, Auglaize county, Ohio, was appointed a commissioner to value and assess the tracts of land therein described, who, after being duly sworn, has appraised said lands, without the improvements thereon, at eight dollars and twenty-five cents per acre. From the official plats in the General Land Office it appears that the aggregate quantity of the tracts is twelve hundred and sixty-four and fifty-four one-hundredths acres, which, at eight and one-fourth dollars per acre, amounts to ten thousand four hundred and thirty-two dollars and forty-five cents; which sum I therefore report as "the unimproved value of said lands."

A copy of the report of the commissioner, dated the 7th instant, is herewith respectfully transmitted.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. P. USHER, Secretary.

Hon. SCHUYLER COLFAX,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

I, Henry M. Helm, commissioner under the act of Congress approved July 2, 1864, entitled "An act for the relief of William Sawyer and others, of the State of Ohio," having first taken the oath prescribed by said act, did, on the 18th, 19th, and 20th days of January, 1865, proceed to view and appraise the west half of section number twenty-six, the east half of section number twenty-eight, and section number twenty-seven of township five south, range four east, lying in the county of Auglaize, and State of Ohio, being the same tracts mentioned in said act of Congress; and on such actual view, I did assess and value said tracts of land, without the improvements thereon, at eight dollars and twenty-five cents per acre. I accordingly hereby report the unimproved value of said lands to be worth eight dollars and twenty-five cents per acre, assuming that the quantity of said tracts is, as stated by the General Land Office, twelve hundred and sixty-four and fifty-four one-hundredths acres.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

HENRY M. HELM, Commissioner.

SIR: In reply to the resolution of the House of Representatives, dated February 26, 1864, calling for copy of the communication from Brigadier General G. W. Morgan, dated Mt. DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Office Indian Affairs, February 17, 1865.

Articles of agreement and convention made and concluded at the City of Washington this seventh day of May, A. D. 1864, between William P. Dole, commissioner of Indian Affairs, and Clark W. Thompson, superintendent of Indian Affairs, for the Northern superintendency, on the part of the United States, and the Chippewa chief Hole-in-the-day and Mis-qu-a-dace, for and on behalf of the chippewas of the Mississippi, and Pillager and Lake Winnebagoish bands of Chippewa Indians in Minnesota.

ARTICLE I. The reservations known as Gull lake, Mille lac, Sandy lake, Rabbit lake, Pokaquomin lake, and Rice lake, as described in the second clause of the second article of the treaty with the Chippewas of the twenty-second of February, 1855, are hereby ceded to the United States, excepting one-half section of land, including the mission building at Gull lake, which is hereby granted in fee simple to the Reverend John Johnson, missionary, and one section of land, to be located by the Secretary of the Interior, on the southeast side of Gull lake, and which is hereby granted in fee simple to the chief Hole-in-the-day, and a section to chief Mis-qu-a-dace, at Sandy lake in like manner, and one section to chief Shaw-vosh-kung, at Mille lac in like manner.

ARTICLE II. In consideration of the foregoing cession, the United States agree to set apart for the future home of the Chippewas of the Mississippi, all the lands embraced within the following described boundaries, excepting the reservations made and described in the third clause of the second article of the said treaty of February 22, 1855, for the Pillager and Lake Winnebagoish bands; that is to say, beginning at a point one mile south of the most southerly point of Leach lake, and running thence in an easterly course to a point one mile south of the most southerly point of Goose lake, thence due east to a point due south from the intersection of the Pokagomin reservation and the Mississippi river, thence on the dividing line between Deer river and lakes and Mashkordens river and lakes, until a point is reached north of the first named river and lakes; thence in a direct line northwesterly to the outlet of Two Routs lake, thence southwesterly to the head water of Rice river, thence northwesterly along the line of the Red lake reservation to the mouth of Thief river, thence down the center of the main channel to Red Lake river to a point opposite the mouth of Black river, thence southeasterly in a direct line with the outlet of Rice lake to a point due west from the place of beginning, thence to the place of beginning.

ARTICLE III. In consideration of the foregoing cession to the United States, and the valuable improvements thereon, the United States further agree, first, to extend the present annuities of the Indians, parties to this treaty for ten years beyond the periods respectively named in existing treaties; second, and to pay towards the settlement of the claims for depredations committed by said Indians in 1862, the sum of twenty thousand dollars; third, to the chiefs of the Chippewas of the Mississippi, ten thousand dollars, to be paid upon the ratification of this treaty; and five thousand dollars to the chief Hole-in-the-day, for depredations committed in burning his house and furniture in 1862.

ARTICLE IV. The United States further agree to pay seven thousand five hundred (7,500) dollars for clearing, stumping, grubbing, breaking and planting, on the reservation hereby set apart for the Chippewas of the Mississippi, in lots of not less than ten acres each, at such point or points as the Secretary of the Interior may select, as follows, viz: For the Gull lake band, seventy (70) acres; for the Mille lac band, seventy (70) acres; for the Sandy lake band, fifty (50) acres; for the Pokagomin band, fifty (50) acres; for the Rabbit lake band, forty (40) acres; for the Rice lake band, twenty (20) acres; and to expend five thousand dollars ($5,000) in building for the chiefs of said bands one house each, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior.

The United States agree to furnish to said Indians, parties to this treaty, ten (10) yoke of good steady work oxen, and twenty log chains annually for ten years, provided the Indians shall take proper care of and make proper use of the same; also for the same period annually two hundred (200) grubbing hoes, ten (10) plows, ten (10) grindstones, one hundred (100) axes, handled, not to exceed in weight three and one-half pounds each, twenty (20) spades, and other farming implements, provided it shall not amount to more than fifteen hundred dollars in one year; also two carpenters, and two blacksmiths, and four farm laborers, and one physician.

ARTICLE VI. The United States further agree to pay annually one thousand dollars ($1000) towards the support of a saw-mill to be built for the common use of the Chippewas of the Mississippi and the Red Lake and Pembina bands of Chippewa Indians, so long as the President of the United States may deem it necessary; and to expend in building a road, bridges, &c., to their new agency seven thousand five hundred dollars, ($7,500;) and to expend for new agency buildings to be located by the Secretary of the Interior for the common use of the Chippewas of the Mississippi, Red Lake and Pembina, and Pillager and Lake Winnebagoish bands of Chippewa Indians, twenty-five thousand dollars, ($25,000.)

ARTICLE VII. There shall be a board of visitors to consist of not less than two nor more than five persons, to be selected from such christian denomination or denominations as the chiefs in council may designate, whose duty it shall be to be present at all annuity payments to the Indians, whether of goods, moneys, provisions, or other articles, and to inspect the fields, buildings, mills, and other improvements made or to be made, and to report annually thereon, on or before the first day of November; and also as to the qualifications and moral deportment of all persons residing upon the reservation under the sanction of law or regulation, and they shall receive for their services five dollars per day for the time actually employed, and ten cents per mile for traveling expenses; provided that no one shall be paid in any one year for more than twenty days' service, or for more than three hundred miles travel.

ARTICLE VIII. No person shall be recognized as a chief whose band numbers less than fifty persons; and to encourage and aid the said chiefs in preserving order, and inducing by their example and advice the members of their respective bands to adopt the pursuits of civilized life, there shall be paid to each of said chiefs annually out of the annuities of said bands a sum not exceeding one hundred and fifty dollars, ($150,) to be determined by their agent according to their respective merits.

ARTICLE IX. To improve the morals and industrial habits of said Indians, it is agreed that no agent, teacher, interpreter, trader, or other employes shall be employed, appointed, licensed, or permitted to reside within the reservations belonging to the Indians, parties to this treaty, missionaries excepted, who shall not have a family residing with them at their respective places of employment, or trade within the agency whose moral habits and fitness shall be reported upon annually by the board of visitors; and no person of full or mixed blood, educated or partially educated, whose fitness, morally or otherwise, is not conducive to the welfare of said Indians, shall receive any benefit from this or any former treaties, and may be expelled from the reservation.

ARTICLE X. All annuities under this or former treaties shall be paid as the chiefs in council may request, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, until otherwise altered or amended, which shall be done whenever the board of visitors, by the request of the chiefs, may recommend it; provided that no change shall take place oftener than once in two years.

ARTICLE XI. Whenever the services of laborers are required upon the reservation preference shall be given to full or mixed-bloods, if they shall be found competent to perform them.

ARTICLE XII. It shall not be obligatory upon the Indians, parties to this treaty, to remove from their present reservations until the United States shall have first complied with the stipulations of Articles IV and VI of this treaty, when the United States shall furnish them with all necessary transportation and subsistence to their new homes and subsistence for six months thereafter; Provided, That, owing to the heretofore good conduct of the Mille Lac Indians, they shall not be compelled to remove so long as they shall not in any way interfere with or in any manner molest the persons or property of the whites.

ARTICLE XIII. Female members of the family of any government employé residing on the reservation, who shall teach Indian girls domestic economy, shall be allowed and paid a sum not exceeding ten dollars per month when so engaged. Provided, That not more than one thousand dollars shall be so expended during any one year, and that the President of the United States may suspend or annul this article whenever he may deem it expedient to do so.

ARTICLE XIV. It is distinctly understood and agreed that the clearing and breaking of land for the Chippewas of the Mississippi, as provided for in the fourth article of this treaty, shall be in lieu of all former engagements of the United States as to the breaking of lands for those bands, and that this treaty is in lieu of the treaty made by the same tribes, approved March 11, 1863.

In testimony whereof the said William P. Dole and Clark W. Thompson on behalf of the United States, and Chippewa chiefs, Hole-in-the-day and Mis-quadace, on behalf of Indian parties to this treaty have hereunto set their hands and affixed their seals the seventh day of May, A. DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C., February 21, 1865.

SIR: I submit, herewith, a copy of a report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs of the 18th instant, and accompanying estimate of appropriation to supply deficiency for the Chippewas of Red lake and Pembina, under the 4th and 5th articles of the treaty of 2d October, 1863, amounting to $5,500, and recommend that the sum may be appropriated for the objects specified in the estimate.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. P. USHER, Secretary.

Hon. SCHUYLER COLFAX,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Office Indian Affairs, February 18, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose herewith a communication from Superintendent Thompson, of the 17th instant, calling my attention to the deficiency in estimating for an appropriation for the Chippewas of Red lake, and Pembina band of Chippewas in Minnesota, under treaty October 2, 1863, and the treaty supplementary thereto of April 12, 1864.

The first estimate for appropriations submitted under the treaty was prepared under the provisions of the supplementary treaty, and was designed to cover the engagements contemplated in the treaty, but it is claimed by Superintendent Thompson, I am informed, and so understood by the Indians, that the Senate amendments did not affect the latter clause of the fourth article, or the second clause of the fifth article of the treaty of October 2, 1863, and that, therefore, the respective sums embraced in the estimate herewith are due and payable to said Indians under the treaty. I have, therefore, to recommend that the same may be laid before the proper committees with a view to an appropriation at the present session of Congress.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. P. DOLE, Commissioner.

Hon. JOHN P. USHER,
Secretary of the Interior.

WASHINGTON, February 17, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that my attention has been called to the deficiency existing in providing for the appropriation for the Chippewas of Red lake and Pembina, under the latter clause of the 4th article, treaty October 2, 1863, providing a sum of $2,000, to be expended in the purchase of powder, lead, and twine, &c., to be distributed to the said Indians at their first payment. Also the second clause of the 5th article, same treaty, promising the sum of $500 to be paid to each of the seven chiefs at their first payment, to enable them to build houses for themselves, making the sum of $3,500. I have therefore to recommend that an estimate may be laid before Congress, with the request that an appropriation be made to enable the payment to said Indians in compliance with the terms of the treaty.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CLARK W. THOMPSON,
Superintendent of Indian Affairs.

Hon. WM. P. DOLE,
Commissioner of Indian Affairs.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,

Office Indian Affairs, February 18, 1865.

Estimate of appropriation required to supply deficiency in the first payment due to the Chippewas of Red lake and Pembina bands of Chippewa Indians in Minnesota, under treaty of October 2, 1863.

For this amount, to be expended in the purchase of powder, lead, twine, or such other beneficial purposes as the chiefs may request, to be equitably distributed among the said bands at the first payment, per fourth article, treaty of October 2, 1863	$2, 000
For the sum of $500, to be paid to each of the seven chiefs of said bands at the first payment, to enable each to build for himself a house, per fifth article, treaty of October 2, 1863	3, 500

INDIAN TRUST BONDS.

LETTER

FROM

THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR,

STATING

The amount of bonds of the State of Virginia, and bonds of other corporations guaranteed by the State of Virginia, held by the United States in trust for certain Indian tribes, and asking for authority to dispose of the same.

FEBRUARY 23, 1865.—Laid upon the table and ordered to be printed.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,

Washington, D. C., February 23, 1865.

SIR: The Secretary of the Interior, as trustee for certain Indian tribes, now holds, and has held for more than ten years past, six per cent. bonds of the State of Virginia, amounting to $581, 800 00

Also stocks guaranteed by said State, viz:

City of Wheeling bonds	168, 000 00
Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company bonds.....	43, 500 00
Richmond and Danville Railroad Company bonds.....	3, 500 00

Total	796, 800 00
-------------	-------------

The interest accruing on these bonds has not been collected nor paid for more than four years past.

I have observed that, by the 8th clause of the 8th article of the constitution of West Virginia, (Senate Miss. Doc. No. 98, 2d session, 37th Congress,) it is provided that "an equitable proportion of the public debt of the Commonwealth of Virginia, prior to the 1st day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-one, shall be assumed by this State; and the legislature shall ascertain the same as soon as may be practicable, and provide for the liquidation thereof by a sinking fund sufficient to pay the accruing interest, and redeem the principal within thirty-four years."

I do not know what action, if any, has been taken by the legislature of West Virginia for the purpose of carrying out this provision in the State constitution, but I have deemed it proper to recommend that special authority be given to the President of the United States to negotiate with the State of West Virginia for the assumption or payment by her of the interest due on the bonds held in trust by this department, as above stated

There would appear to be a propriety in this action, as a large sum of the indebtedness is of the city of Wheeling, in West Virginia.

If the views herein expressed meet with the approval of Congress, the accompanying proposed bill will enable the department to secure the desired object.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. P. USHER, Secretary.

Hon. SCHUYLER COLFAX,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to surrender to the State of West Virginia the bonds and obligations of the State of Virginia held by the said Secretary of the Interior in trust for various Indian tribes, for a like amount of the obligations of the said State of West Virginia, to be issued in accordance with the eighth clause of the eighth article of the constitution of West Virginia.

(*) This amount is an outstanding warrant, which was brought into the accounts of 1863 as paid, but which was not discovered until in making up the accounts for this year. The error occurred from the similarity in numbers of two warrants in "repayments for lands erroneously sold," of the respective amounts of $15 and $6, whose difference balanced the amount above referred to.

NUMBER OF TROOPS FURNISHED BY THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

LETTER

FROM

THE SECRETARY OF WAR,

TRANSMITTING,

In compliance with a resolution of the House of February 20, 1865, a statement of the number of troops furnished by the State of California.

FEBRUARY 28, 1865.—Referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, February 27, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith a copy of a report from the Provost Marshal General, in answer to the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 20th. instant, inquiring "the number of troops furnished by the State of California to the general government, under the various calls, and whether the draft has been enforced in that State as in other States; and if not, the reason for its non-enforcement."

By direction of the President, the draft has not been enforced in the Pacific States, because, for military reasons, it was not deemed expedient to withdraw persons capable of military service from the States on the Pacific coast, beyond the number specified in the report of the Provost Marshal General.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

Hon. SCHUYLER COLFAX,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
PROVOST MARSHAL GENERAL'S BUREAU,
Washington, D. C., February 26, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a resolution of the House of Representatives, dated February 20, 1865, wherein the Secretary of War is directed, "if not incompatible with the public service, to communicate to this house what is the number of troops furnished by the State of California to the general government under the various calls, and whether the draft has been enforced in that State as in other States; and if not, the reason for its non-enforcement."

In reply to the two branches of this inquiry, I have the honor to report as follows :

1st. The number of troops furnished to the general government by the State of California, from the beginning of the present war to date, is seven thousand four hundred and fifty-one, (7,451.)

2d. The draft has not been enforced in California. My instructions have not required me to draft, as yet, in that State. The enrolment, commenced in California in September, 1863, is not in proper condition for drafting at this time.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant.

JAMES B. FRY,

Provost Marshal General.

FROM

THE SECRETARY OF WAR,

TRANSMITTING,

In compliance with a resolution of the House of February 25, 1865, a report relative to the order issued to prevent colored men from leaving the District of Columbia without a pass from the military authorities.

FEBRUARY 28, 1865 — Referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed

SIR: In answer to the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 25th instant, inquiring "whether any military order or regulation has been issued prohibiting negroes or colored persons from leaving the city of Washington or the District of Columbia without a pass; and if so, whether such order or regulation is still in force," and asking that a copy thereof be furnished, "with an explanation of the reason for making such distinction on account of color," I have the honor to transmit herewith the reports of the Adjutant General and Major General Augur, commanding the department of Washington, which comprise all the information I have on the subject of said resolution.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

EDWIN M. STANTON,

Hon. SCHUYLER COLFAX,

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, February 27, 1865.

SIR: In answer to the resolution of the House of Representatives, dated February 25, 1865, I have the honor to submit the report of Major General Augur, commanding the department of Washington. No other order than that mentioned by General Augur has been issued upon the subject.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
Washington, D. C., February, 26, 1865

SIR: I have the honor to return the accompanying resolution of the House of Representatives, referred to me by the honorable Secretary of War, and to report in reference thereto, that early in January, 1864, numerous complaints were made to these headquarters by Captain Sheetz, provost marshal and enrolling officer of this District, and others, that a certain set of "bounty brokers" were habitually kidnapping and running off colored men, for the purpose of enlisting them in other localities. Instances were given where colored men had been taken and placed in close confinement for three days by these men, awaiting a favorable opportunity to run them off. The complaints further alleged that these kidnappers had certain localities near the Baltimore and Ohio railroad within their control, to which they decoyed such colored men as they were able, by promises of paying them any sum they might require; that when once there, they were detained until a convenient number were collected, when they were run off north, and disposed of as substitutes, without receiving a cent.

These complaints I submitted in person to the honorable Secretary of War, who directed me verbally, with a view to break up this system of kidnapping, to give orders that no colored men should be permitted to go north from this city without a pass from my headquarters. Such an order I gave to the military governor for execution, which order is still in force. A copy of my letter is appended. Colored men obtain passes to go north upon furnishing evidence that they are not enrolled in this District.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. C. AUGUR,
Major General Commanding.

ADJUTANT GENERAL U. S. A.,
Washington, D. C.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
Washington, D. C., January 12, 1864.

GENERAL: The major general commanding directs that until further orders no colored man be allowed to leave Washington city, going north, without a pass from these headquarters.

Very respectfully, general, your most obedient servant,

J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and A. A. G.

Brigadier General J. H. MARTINDALE,
Military Governor, D. C.

ENLISTMENT OF REBEL PRISONERS.

LETTER

OF

THE SECRETARY OF WAR,

IN ANSWER TO

A resolution of the House of February 25, relative to the enlistment of rebel prisoners.

MARCH 1, 1865. —Referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, February 28, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith a report of the Provost Marshal General, in answer to the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 25th instant, inquiring "whether rebel prisoners have been enlisted into our service, have received bounties, and have been credited to quotas of one or more States; and if so, how many have been so enlisted and credited, and when and to what States; and also whether any of said persons so credited are still under guard at Rock island or elsewhere."

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

Hon. SCHUYLER COLFAX,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

WAR DEPARTMENT, PROVOST MARSHAL GENERAL'S BUREAU,
Washington, D. C., February 27, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a resolution of the House of Representatives, dated February 25, 1865, wherein the Secretary of War is "directed to inform this House whether rebel prisoners have been enlisted into our service, have received bounties, and have been credited to quotas of one or more States; and if so, how many have been so enlisted and credited, and when and to what States; and also, whether any of said persons so credited are still under guard at Rock island or elsewhere," referred to me for report.

In reply I have the honor to state as follows: The 3d Maryland cavalry, raised under authority from the War Department, Adjutant General's office,

May 28, 1863, had enlisted for it at Fort Delaware 461 rebel prisoners. These men were credited to the State of Maryland. The 1st Connecticut cavalry had enlisted for it at Fort Delaware, and credited to the State of Connecticut, in May, 1863, 82 rebel prisoners.

All enlistments of said prisoners were stopped by telegram of August 21, 1863, from the Secretary of War; but subsequently, authority was issued by the Secretary of War to enlist 120 rebel prisoners for the 3d Maryland cavalry.

The foregoing men have been paid United States bounty.

Immediately on the completion of the 3d Maryland cavalry, it was sent to New Orleans, and has since been serving in the department of the South.

There have been enlisted at Point Lookout, Maryland, for the 1st United States volunteers, 1,105 rebel prisoners; for the 2d United States volunteers, 379 rebel prisoners.

These enlistments were made under directions from the President. Recruitment for the 2d regiment was stopped by order of the Secretary of War, in September last. The rebels enlisted at Point Lookout were never credited to any State. Credits and payments of bounties to them were forbidden by the orders of the War Department. By direction of General Grant they were sent to the department of the Northwest, and have since been serving there.

Under special instructions from the President, one thousand seven hundred and fifty (1,750) men, held as rebel prisoners of war at Rock island, Illinois, were, during September and October, 1864, mustered into the military service of the United States and credited to Pennsylvania, (with the exception of twelve credited to Ohio.) They have been paid no bounty by the United States, but were paid local bounties by the places to which they were credited. They were kept under guard, as other recruits are, until organized and sent to the field. On Major General Pope's application they were ordered to the department of Missouri for service in the west.

No other rebel prisoners than those herein stated are known to have been enlisted into the service.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES B. FRY,

Provost Marshal General.

HON. EDWIN M. STANTON,

Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.
